Design flaw investigated

(c) Washington Star

Washington — Engineers at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have quietly begun an investigation into what appears to be a design flaw in about half of the nation's 67 operating nuclear power plants, a flaw that could lead to the total shutdown of a plant's multiple safety systems.

According to internal documents obtained on the matter by the Washington Star, the problem is in a battery system that operates the switches and valves necessary to control all of the plant's safety devices if a plant's operating power should suddenly be cut off.

Laetrile no help

New York (AP) — Laetrile proved to be of no value whatever in either preventing or curing cancer in a four-year study in which the substance was injected into rodents, scientists reported Wednesday.

But the scientists said their experiments indicated Laetrile had no harmful effects except when excessive doses were given orally or by faulty injection. They said they could not test whether Laetrile may lessen pain, as its supporters claim.

'Can-Tiki' — what else?

Darwin, Australia (UPI) — A former lord mayor and a car salesman Wednesday announced they were planning to sail a boat made of beer cans from Darwin to Singapore.

Clem Jones, 59, former lord mayor of Brisbane, and Lutz Frankenfeld, 34, a Darwin car dealer, said they expected to leave in August and make the 2,498-mile voyage in a week.

They expect to use about 15,000 cans to build a 25-foot vessel to be called the "Can-Tiki."

GM to raise prices

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. indicated Wednesday that prices on 1978-model cars and trucks may rise by up to 6% this fall. That could mean an average $370 to $400 hike for a new car.

Belgrade talks open

(c) New York Times

Belgrade — The Belgrade Conference opened with representatives of 35 European and North American nations on hand to begin what is expected to be a year-long assessment of the Agreement on European Security and Cooperation reached at Helsinki two years ago. Brief opening ceremonies offered little indication of issues to be faced during the talks and attention in Belgrade was focused on the arrest and deportation of 15 Jewish activists, one a Czech-born Danish reporter accredited to the conference.

Cyber 76 sale opposed

Washington (UPI) — President Carter informed the Commerce Department he opposes the sale of the sophisticated Cyber 76 computer to the Soviet Union, his spokesman said Wednesday.

General recalled after speech

(c) New York Times

Washington — Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander Wednesday ordered a three-star general to report to him to discuss a speech the officer made in Germany last week saying that the United States would probably become involved in a Sino-Soviet war in the future.

The officer, Lt. Gen. Donn Starry, commander of the Fifth U.S. Corps in West Germany for the last 16 months and a rising figure in the Army hierarchy, also condemned "liberals" and "the liberal press," in his lengthy speech at the Frankfurt American High School graduation last Friday night.

"The liberal press," Starry said, "are not interested in the truth, only in 5% or so of the news that deviates from the norm. Presumably they would be willing to muckrake around every public administration just to see it fall, without concern for the consequences to the country."

Col. Ralph E. Ropp, chief of the Army's public information division, said Starry was being called to the Pentagon by Alexander and the Army chief of staff, Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, to discuss the speech. Army officials said they were uncertain whether or not Starry would be reprimanded.

Alexander's move came in the aftermath of the controversy involving Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, the former third-ranking U.S. Army officer in Korea. Singlaub was called home by President Carter and reassigned after the officer said the administration's plan to withdraw American troops from Korea would lead to an invasion from the North. Since then, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Alexander, in speeches at the Air Force Academy and at West Point, have told future officers that they must adhere to official policy or leave the service.

Starry, 52, was scheduled for promotion shortly to four stars, one of only 10 Army officers with the rank of full general. He had been scheduled to depart Germany Friday to take command of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command in Ft. Monroe, Va.; a position calling for a four-star general.

In the speech, Starry told the high school graduates that "there will probably be war in your lifetime."

"Peace is an illusion," he said in his speech, which was made available Wednesday by the Pentagon. "The absence of peace in the world is, always has been, always will be a fact of life. Conflict of some kind is a natural state of man."

"In your lifetime," Starry said, "the Soviets will fight the Chinese, possibly simply continuing their 10-year-old border conflict, but more probably in a major war. Difficult as it may be to see the United States becoming involved in such a war, it is likely we would" be involved if "it became apparent that one or the other of the antagonists was about to win and gain absolute control over the bulk of the Eurasian land mass."

In the speech, Starry scored liberals and said, at one point, "Several years ago the liberals buried God. He wasn't important to them. They found their God in a liturgy which denies that anything — peace, truth, God, even life, is worthy of reverence."

Maj. Gen. Gordon Hill, the Army's chief spokesman, said Starry's remarks were his personal opinion "and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Army."

Acreages in county protested

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Two rural Lancaster County women tried Wednesay to block the proposed 90-acre development of 55 country acreages planned south of Lincoln.

"We believe we better preserve some of the tillable acres in Lancaster County," Lavon Hoppes urged the City-County Planning Commission. Mrs. Hoppes, who lives on an acreage south of Lincoln, said she does not want urban sprawl outside the city limits.

Mrs. Jack Paulsen, who also lives on an acreage south of Lincoln, told the planning commission acreage developments in recent years are springing up "hop, skip and jump all over.

"When they get full then they petition to go into the Norris School District," requiring more school construction, she said.

Complicating the situation is the location of the proposed development, Dahlberg Acres, east of S. 14th and north of Yankee Hill Road. That puts it in an area designated "urban reserve" in the new Comprehensive Plan.

The so-called urban reserve areas are to be held for future urban development, which would rule out acreages.

Nonetheless, Planning Director Doug Brogden has recommended that the proposal be approved, a decision planning commission members found confusing.

Brogden told the commission that the term "urban reserve" is new and that regulations have not been adopted to govern development in these areas. Because of that, he said, his recommendation is based on existing regulations, which would allow the development.

Discussion on Brogden's recommendation rambled for a half-hour. At one point, commission member Moneta Matthews said it seemed to her that "we're going to have to implement what we all voted for (in the Comprehensive Plan)."

"We have to do something or we won't have any urban reserve left," she said. Regulations are currently being drawn up but it is uncertain when they will be ready, according to Brogden.

The commission will decide what to recommend on the proposal next week, following its normal procedure.

On another matter, residents living near Bethesda Hospital voiced support for a proposal to turn the building into a medical education center.

The residents were strongly opposed to a previous proposal to turn the hospital into a care center for the elderly, which would have involved construction of an apartment building.

The proposal to turn the hospital into an education facility came from the Lincoln Health Education Center, which was incorporated primarily to purchase the building to "bring together many diverse health education programs," according to Dr. Jay Upright. All four Lincoln hospitals are represented on the foundation's board of directors.

On another point, the South Salt Creek Neighborhood Organization opposed a requested change of zone from residential to light industry north of L between 1st and 2nd.

Martz darts around the many active chess boards.

Chess-whiz faces players 24 at a time

So, chess is a game of slow-moving plays, you say? Watch William Martz.

Martz was at Gateway Mall Wednesday, moving pawns and rook with the rapidity of a speeding cockroach as he played 24 — count 'em — 24 persons at one time.

The entrants who signed up to play ranged from people "who just love the game" to tournament competitors.

The 33-year-old Milwaukee, Wis., native has played on the U.S. Olympic Chess Team and coached the U.S. Women's Olympic Chess Team.

Martz, a law graduate from the University of Wisconsin, spends his time, when not on the tournament circuit, traveling around the country to give demonstrations on chess skills.

About 20 minutes after the game began, Martz beat his first opponent.

Martz' appearance in Lincoln was sponsored by the Gateway Shopping Center. Any interested chess players can pit their skills against the odds from 4 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Gateway Mall.

'Brain pacemakers' help mentally ill

New Orleans (AP) — Mental patients once considered hopelessly ill are on the road to recovery with "brain pacemakers" implanted in their skulls, doctors at Tulane University said Wednesday.

"It's like I'm living in a calm after a storm had ended," said one patient describing the change in her condition after surgery. That patient and two others appeared in a videotaped interview shown to reporters at a news conference Wednesday.

Ten of 11 patients who voluntarily underwent the operation have shown considerable improvement, some within a matter of days, Dr. Robert G. Heath, chairman of the psychiatry and neurology department at Tulane's School of Medicine, said at the news conference.

"I think it's too early to advocate that we have an overall cure now. But the results speak for themselves," he said.

The device implanted in the patients consists of three to five electrodes placed on the surface of the brain under the back of the skull. These electrodes receive power from an external battery pack through an under-the-skin antenna.

The pacemaker sends a tiny current into areas of the brain associated with pleasurable feelings. The current can't be felt by the patient, but Heath said it stimulates the so-called "pleasure circuit," which inhibits the unhappy and angry feelings associated with psychosis.

Schizophrenic, neurotic and uncontrollably violent persons who had been under heavy medication for years were able to leave the hospital and live nearly normal lives after the operation, he said.

Heath, who said he delayed doing his first human "brain pacemaker" operation for two years because of fear of criticism, held the news conference to respond to a published report which accused him of Nazi-type medical practice.

He said he does not believe the device could be misused and that "I don't think I could control anyone's mind by doing this. I don't think it could overrule one's free will."

The only surgery which failed among the 11 initial operations was on a patient who had prior brain damage at the area where the electrodes are placed, Heath said.

He said about six more operations have been performed since results were first announced last month at an international scientific conference, but it is too early to report on the results of those.

All operations thus far have been performed on patients who showed no response to psychoactive drugs, shock treatment and other forms of therapy for extreme cases, Heath said.

"But I think it's indicated now that we should maybe use the operation a little early, as soon as it is clear all drugs will fail," he said. "The less time these patients spend in that dream world out of contact, the better their responses after the operation."

Whelan: 'I have opportunity to be best prepared'

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles on Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan by The Star's political writer.

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Jerry Whelan is unique.

The former Hastings attorney was picked ("Indeed, he did recruit me for this") by Gov. J. James Exon three years ago to be the first full-time lieutenant governor in Nebraska's history.

Democratic voters accepted Exon's choice in their primary election in 1974, and the Exon-Whelan ticket won Nebraska's first governor-lieutenant governor team election that autumn.

Since he took office in 1975, Whelan not only has filled the traditional role of presiding officer of the Legislature, he has assumed the newly directed constitutional requirement of performing "such duties as may be delegated him by the governor."

That, Whelan believes, has given him the opportunity to be the best prepared gubernatorial aspirant in Nebraska history — if he seeks the office (as expected) next year.

"It would be presumptuous of me to say I would be the best qualified," Whelan says. "It would not be presumptuous to say I've had the opportunity to be the best qualified candidate to seek the office."

Whelan's delegated duties have ranged across the fabric of state government, concentrating on such problems or concerns as energy, drought, education, aging, political accountability and disclosure, governmental paperwork.

(As head of a commission studying the problem of proliferating paperwork, he says, he came to the conclusion that government must be reorganized not so much to tidy up any organizational chart, but to "deliver services more effectively.")

Whelan views his role outside the legislative chamber as serving as "an extra set of eyes, ears and hands" for Jim Exon.

"I pinch hit for the governor," he says.

But when the Legislature is in session, his role is sharply different, Whelan says.

"I'm not his man over there," the lieutenant governor said. "He has never asked me if I could get something done. We never talk legislative strategy. Once the day's over, we talk, and he asks me what happened. But that's it."

When the Unicameral is in session, Whelan may go four or five days without seeing Exon But. the two talk on an almost daily basis otherwise.

"Quite often, we meet on specific matters. But more often, it's just a case of sharing observations.

"Jim Exon's personality is so secure that he feels no threat from anyone around him. He's perfectly at ease and comfortable for me to pretty much go my own way. But I do check in with him on things."

Whelan is generally pleased with his job ("I do enjoy it"), happy that it "exposes you to many things."

His schedule over the next couple weeks will take him to North Platte, Sidney, South Sioux City, Ogallala, Hastings, and to Omaha many times.

There will be exposure to the arts and conversations with Bob Hope, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and an Israeli diplomat.

(Whelan's eyes light up at the prospect of playing a few holes with Nicklaus in Omaha next Monday. The lieutenant governor shoots around 80, and would dearly love to play one hole as well as the world's greatest golfer).

For him, golf is "an aesthetic experience," Whelan says. "I walk. I think it's a unique blend of the athletic and the natural."

Whelan also plays a good game of tennis, enjoys riding his bike and appreciates most forms of the arts "in an uneducated fashion."

You'll find him not only at Husker football games, but at NU basketball and track events.

But being with his grandchildren is "the best thing of all," he grins. "Now that's fun!"

Whelan also has become fascinated by the building in which he works. Prints of the original architectural drawings of the Statehouse line his office.

"I am enthusiastically lending my support to a renaissance of this building," he noted. "It has a proper place to fill in our cultural life."

As he gears up for an almost certain gubernatorial campaign next year, more Nebraskans will become more familiar with their lieutenant governor.

Politically, he is in tune with Jim Exon.

And his personality, the sharp wit which sometimes cuts as well as pokes, the air of self-assurance which makes him seem at ease with himself, the candor with which he sometimes speaks, is not at all unlike Nobby Tiemann.

Republican gubernatorial aspirants Vance Rogers and Bob Phares are already out getting acquainted. You can look for Jerry Whelan to show up sometime later.

Panel erases funds for 8 projects

Washington (AP) — In a compromise move, a Senate subcommittee voted Wednesday to eliminate funds for eight of 17 water projects that were narrowly approved by the House over President Carter's objections.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the subcommittee on public works appropriations, said his panel tried "to make some adjustments with some consideration for what the President said."

"I don't want to see this bill vetoed," Stennis told reporters after the committee acted in a closed-door session on the $10.2 billion public works appropriations bill.

Earlier Wednesday, both President Carter and Senate Majority Leader

Carter, asked at the White House if he felt a veto could be sustained, said, "I think so."

But he declined to say whether he would veto the bill if funds are left in for dams and canals he feels are not worth their economic and environmental costs.

Byrd urged a compromise, citing the House's close 218-194 vote Tuesday to keep nearly $170 million for the disputed projects.

Byrd said "a veto cannot be overridden."

Projects eliminated by the Senate subcommittee although they were approved by the House were: LaFarge Lake, Wisconsin, $2 million; Lukfata Lake, Oklahoma, $200,000; Meramec Park Lake, Missouri, $10 million; Yatesville Lake, Kentucky, $7.2 million; Fruitland Mesa, Colorado, $7.7 million; Savery-Pot Hook, Colorado and Wyoming, $5.10 million; Narrows Unit, Colorado, $9.7 million; and Oahe Unit, South Dakota, $16.96 million.

The bill now goes to the full Senate Appropriations Committee for review, after which it will be submitted to the Senate floor and then to a conference committee to settle differences with the House version.

The Senate bill originally contained funds for 506 projects.

As did the House, the subcommittee followed Carter's suggestion to eliminate the Grove Lake project in Kansas, for which an expenditure of $1 million was originally proposed.

Projects approved by the subcommittee over Carter's objections were: Applegate Lake, Oregon, $7.4 million; Atchafalaya River, Louisiana, $5.1 million; Cache Basin, Arkansas, $2 million; Hillsdale Lake, Kansas, $14 million; Richard B. Russell Lake, Georgia and South Carolina, $21 million; Tallahala Creek, Mississippi, $5 million; Columbia Dam, Tennessee, $20 million; and Auburn Dam, California, $39.7 million.

It also approved expenditure of funds on the Bayou Bodcau Project in Louisiana, but cut the amount from $2.4 million to $1.2 million. Stennis said the money would be used for levee construction.

The subcommittee concurred in Carter's proposals to modify the Mississippi River-Gulf Outlet project in Louisiana, the Central Arizona Project and the Tensas Basin Project in Arkansas and Louisiana.

Sandcastle building class is offered

San Diego (AP) — Are your sandcastles falling down a lot lately? Try "An Introduction to Sandcastle Building" at the University of California at San Diego.

The teacher of the university extension class, Gary Kinsella, usually a pottery instructor, says the class will not only help students build castles that stand up but will help thm deal with the inevitability of the tide knocking them down.

"I look at it the way I look at a good game of tennis," Kinsella said. "You play it. You experience the challenge. If you've done well you feel good. But when it's over there's nothing to take home with you.

"These things are ephemeral," he said. "They last only one day. But there's something perfect about te cycle. Building it. Watching the erosion of the sun and the wind. And then sitting on the beach at sunset and watching it wash away with the tide."

Kinsella, joined on the beach by fellow instructor John Laver, said the best way to build sandcastles is to sculpt the sand from the top down never going back once you've finished a section.

You use wet sand — about 500 gallons of water for two tons of sand to make a four-foot-high castle.

And don't let it dry out or it will blow away before it can be washed away.

House panel okays end to buying food stamps

Washington (AP) — With a Southern conservative leading a break in Republican ranks, the House Agriculture Committee voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to end the requirement that food stamp recipients pay cash for the coupons.

The 34-12 vote virtually assures that Congress will overhaul the food stamp program along the lines recommended by President Carter.

However, the bill before the House committee would cost about $100 million more than Carter proposed. A Senate measure with a less costly food stamp section already has been threatened with a veto for exceeding budget targets in its other provisions.

Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La., who unsuccessfully proposed a partial elimination of the purchase requirement, unexpectedly told the panel he would vote for the Carter approach.

He cited mail that is "not from drunkards, not from spendthrifts, but from victims of circumstances in my district who are simply unable to get the money to buy the stamps so they can obtain more food."

Four Republicans then joined Moore and all but two Democrats to abolish the payment provision.

Food charity ban lifted

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday overturned a ban on charitable food contributions to needy nations that seized property belonging to U.S. firms, and then passed a $1.6 billion foreign aid bill.

The Senate also voted, 90 to 2, to prohibit aid funds for Vietnam, Cambodia or Laos and to urge President Carter to get a full accounting of missing Americans in those countries.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the amendment was to support administration policy toward those countries since the bill has no direct assistance to them.

House panel promotes insulation

Washington (UPI) — A House banking subcommittee Wednesday approved legislation to help Americans insulate houses, but declined to go along with a provision requiring an "energy efficiency" certificate on every house sold after 1982.

The subcommittee voted 21 to 0 for a bill to authorize $400 million in four years to help needy people install energy-saving devices in their houses. The measure also would require utility companies to help homeowners discover what devices their houses need.

Under the measure, moderate income families could get special low-interest loans to install energy-savers in their houses, and the relatively prosperous could get loans at higher interest rates for big energy projects, such as solar power systems.

House denies military benefits to some vets

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Wednesday to deny Veterans Administration benefits to any Vietnam combat veteran whose military discharge is upgraded. It also voted down a regulation that provides housing aid to homosexuals living together.

The effort to nullify President Carter's program of reviewing and upgrading less than honorable discharges given Vietnam combat veterans passed on a 273-136 vote as an amendment to a $70.2 billion money bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and several other independent agencies including the VA.

Monday, the House banned funds in the Justice Department appropriation bill from going to carry out Carter's program of pardons for Vietnam ERA deserters and draft evaders.

Commonwealth condemns Amin regime

(c) New York Times

London — The Commonwealth heads of government, in an unprecedented attack on a member nation, Wednesday condemned President Idi Amin's regime in Uganda for its "disregard for the sanctity of human life" and its "massive violation of basic human rights."

In a connunique marking the end of the eight-day Commonwealth conference here and in Scotland, representatives of 34 nations asserted that "excesses" in the East African country were "so gross as to warrant the world's concern and to evoke condemnation by heads of government in strong and unequivocal terms." But as the result of a compromise they avoided mentioning Amin by name.

Even before the communique was issued, Radio Uganda broadcast a reply from the president, quoting him as suggesting that Israel, South Africa and Rhodesia should be admitted to the Commonwealth, which, he asserted, has become an "imperialist and racist club."

The group's strong language again raised questions about the fate of 250 to 300 Britons who live in Uganda. Special concern was voiced about Robert Scanlon, a 44-year-old motor company executive who was born in Britain but took Ugandan citizenship in 1975. His relatives do not know whether Scanlon, who was arrested on spying charges last week, has been executed or is still alive.

Prime Minister James Callaghan said in a news conference Wednesday that the Commonwealth leaders had carefully considered the fate of the Britons in Uganda. But the Britons knew when they decided to stay in Uganda what might befall them, he added, and the leaders felt that the Commonwealth "must set out what it feels on certain issues.

"I am bound to say I do not recollect any occasion in which condemnation has been so strongly expressed by so many people," the prime minister declared.

During a three-hour discussion Tuesday night and further talks Wednesday, Nigeria — and, to a lesser degree, India and Malawi — expressed reservations about attacking Uganda by name. Commonwealth countries, whose forms of government range from autocracy to democracy, traditionally have been reluctant to probe into each other's domestic affairs.

In the end, it was decided to omit Amin's name and to speak of the "overwhelming view" of the conferees, rather than of a "consensus" or a "unanimous opinion" — to allow objectors to maintain their privately stated reservations.

The communique also drew a distinction between the government and the people of Uganda, remarking that Ugandans remained "within the fraternity of Commonwealth friendship" and expressing the hope that they would soon "once more fully enjoy their basic human rights which now are being so cruelly denied."

Commonwealth officials said the nearest parallel to Wednesday's attack was a somewhat milder protest against South Africa in 1961, which led to South Africa's withdrawal from the group.

Exiles: Amin slit man's throat, drank his blood

London (UPI) — Uganda President Idi Amin slit the throat of one of his victims and drank the man's blood, according to a doctor who fled the country.

The doctor and another exile, appearing anonymously on a commercial television program, said they were prepared to swear statements about the killing of Amin's late minister of public works.

They said the minister was "bound hand and foot like a trussed chicken" on the big desk in Amin's private study.

"Amin, dressed in a white gown and wearing a White Moslem cap, knelt and prayed," the doctor said.

"Amin then cut the man's throat and drank the man's blood to prevent his spirit from haunting him."

The two refugees, interviewed in Nairobi, said Amin was suffering from hallucinations and mental disorders.

Mayors support ERA, tax reform

Tucson, Ariz. (UPI) — The U.S. Conference of Mayors Wednesday approved 117 resolutions, including support of tax reform, national health insurance and the Equal Rights Amendment. If enacted, the measures would cost over $142 billion.

Items expected to be the most controversial — handgun control, national health insurance and location of oil pipelines — turned out to draw little interest as the mayors concluded their five-day national meeting.

The handgun control resolution, tabled in committee Sunday, would have reversed a 1972 policy of the mayors supporting handgun control. However, the resolution was not brought up again before the full membership.

The national health insurance proposal passed on voice vote without comment, and the oil pipeline location measure was tabled for further study.

Many of the 110 mayors in attendance commented freely, however, on the resolutions dealing with the Equal Rights Amendment, support for President Carter's plan for a balanced budget by fiscal 1981 and the right to counsel before a federal grand jury.

Tucson Mayor Lewis C. Murphy, the conference's host who cast the lone resolutions committee vote against the ERA resolution, argued the motion was "the most drastic proposal for amendment of the Constitution" and would make state governments "meaningless zeroes" because Congress would have the power to enact legislation in the field.

Next year's conference host, Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, strongly defended the ERA, saying the country is engaged in a war against poverty, deteriorating cities and economic pressure of all kinds.

"When you go to war you don't disqualify half the troops," he said. "It is right. It is right. It is right. It is right."

The ERA resolution, co-sponsored by 10 mayors, passed on a voice vote.

The mayors accepted amendments from Savannah, Ga., Mayor John P. Rousakis and Jackson to a budget resolution to "laud" Carter's effort to balance the federal budget as long as it does not diminish federal funding to the cities.

The grand jury resolution to allow for counsel was praised as one which would curb abuses in the criminal justice system.

Spanish premier's coalition has big lead

Madrid, Spain (AP) — Premier Adolfo Suarez' centrist coalition rolled up a large early lead Thursday in Spain's first free parliamentary elections in 41 years, unofficial returns showed.

With 9 per cent of the vote counted, the reformist premier's coalition had 35 per cent of the popular votes for the Chamber of Deputies and appeared to be headed toward a lopsided victory in the Senate, the Interior Ministry said.

The Socialist Workers party ran second with 19 per cent, the neo-Francoist Popular Alliance polled 7.2 per cent and the newly legalized Communist party got 4.4 per cent in the voting for the Chamber of Deputies, or lower-house of Spain's Cortes.

Suarez candidates led the race for lower-house seats in three-fourths of Spain's provinces.

The premier's candidates were running strongly in areas that opinion polls had rated as a tossup with the Socialists, led by 35-year-old Felipe Gonzalez. Suarez was even leading in some areas, such as the Basque province of Navarre, that had been considered Socialist strongholds.

Four policemen and three civillians were injured Wednesday in 13 bombings across the nation, most of which occurred before the polls opened. An additional half-dozen unexploded bombs were found at polling places.

Police and soldiers kept a tight security blanket on key government installations to prevent attacks by Basque separatists and terrorists of the extreme right and left.

Interior Minister Rodolfo Martin Villa said reports indicated a turnout of more than 80 per cent of the nation's 23 million eligible voters in what he called an election held in "peace and liberty."

The voters chose among 157 parties and 5,000 candidates to select a 350-member Chamber of Deputies and 207 senators. The new parliament will replace the old rubber-stamp, unicameral body apointed by dictator Gen. Francisco Franco, who died 19 months ago.

Suarez, joined by leftist leaders he admitted to political life after years of persecution under the rightist Franco regime, led the nation to the polls.

He said he was calm and hopeful of enough votes to stay in power. The premier was appointed by King Juan Carlos to serve until 1981, but said he would step down unless his middle-of-the-road coalition received an election mandate to govern.

Girl Scouts' death probe continues

Locust Grove, Okla. (AP) — One man was questioned Wednesday in the sex murders of three young Girl Scouts, but authorities said the importance of the interrogation was "being blown way out of proportion."

Three highway patrolmen and a deputy sheriff went to Miami, Okla., about 60 miles from here to question a man arrested on a complaint of public drunkenness. The man later was returned to his cell.

Mayes County District Atty. Sid Wise said the questioning was not unusual, that officers were talking to many people in the northeastern Oklahoma area.

The nude and battered bodies of Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, and Michelle Guse, 9, of Broken Arrow, were found early Monday in a wooded area of Camp Scott, a summer retreat for girls. About 100 other Girl Scouts were camping out in various parts of the 410-acre retreat when the girls were killed.

An autopsy showed the two younger girls died from blows to the head and the older girl was strangled. All three were sexually molested.

As the investigation widened, Girl Scout leaders throughout the nation reported a steady flow of calls from concerned parents.

"People mostly want to talk to us about security," said Merle Neal, executive director of the Mid-Continent Council of Girl Scouts in Kansas City, Mo., which is scheduled to have 1,100 girls from the eight-county area at camp this summer.

"We have checked the police department, which has been our security consultant all along, and it said we should go right on doing what we've been doing. They say the girls are safer in camp than they probably would be when involved in most other summertime activities," she said.

The search for clues, meanwhile, shifted from Camp Scott to a ranch adjoining the camp site in rolling, heavily underbrushed countryside. Three specially trained German shepherds were flown in from Pennsylvania to assist in the search.

Western alliance disagrees on rights stand

James Reston

Bonn — The closer you get to the borders between Western Europe and Communist Eastern Europe, the more the issue of "human rights" becomes intensely human and personal. In Washington, and even in London and Paris, it is mainly a philosophic question, but here in the Federal Republic of Germany, it is a question of divided families, parents and children, husbands, wives and lovers.

No wonder, then, that President Carter in Washington and Chancellor Schmidt here in the capital of the Federal German Republic agree on the principle of human rights, but disagree on the political tactics of how to get the people and the principle together.

Jimmy Carter didn't think much about the German problem when he started his human rights campaign, but he is running into problems here he didn't expect and, despite his serious discussions with Chancellor Schmidt at the summit meeting in London, didn't resolve.

Schmidt was very excited about the Helsinki agreement of two years ago in which the Soviets and their allies in Eastern Europe agreed that human rights in their countries should be respected and could be negotiated with the nations of the West.

Since the Helsinki agreement, Schmidt arranged for about 70,000 ethnic Germans from Eastern Europe to come into West Germany. Over 9,000 of these were negotiated out of Poland on a case-by-case basis. He has also been making progress with the GDR in Eastern Germany and even with the U.S.S.R. to increase the communications and to unite families — all this in very cautious and private negotiations.

Jimmy Carter helped this process by dramatizing "human rights" at the beginning, officials here say, but they add, that maybe he's pushing it too far, at least in Germany. He's creating tension and even fear in Eastern Europe and Moscow now, they say, and the more tension, the less chance of getting people out of East Germany, Eastern Europe, or the Soviet Union.

West Germany has some special problems. It has over a million workers from other countries in its economy. Berlin, for example, is the third largest Turkish city, with more Turkish residents than any other city except Istanbul and Ankara. It wants to bring its own German people from Eastern Europe back home, and put them to work, but this requires, they insist, not pronouncements or provocations but careful and difficult negotiations.

Consider the "human rights" problem from the German view, they say. Some progress has been made quietly here in the last few years. Last year, about eight million Germans from Western Germany visited their families and friends in Communist East Germany. And at the same time, some 1.6 million old people and about 40,000 others from East Germany were allowed to visit West Germany on special occasions.

Meanwhile, as long as the idea of detente between Moscow and Washington existed, the communication by radio and television in sports, the arts and even news increased, but whenever Washington and Moscow begin to differ publicly, emigration and communication slow down.

What may be much more important is that Chancellor Schmidt discussed this dilemma between the principle and the practical with President Carter at the summit meeting in London, and thought they had come to an agreement.

The press reported after the London meeting that Carter and Schmidt had resolved their differences, but that's not what I have been hearing in Bonn.

Even as the Belgrade conference on European security and "human rights" opens, officials here say, President Carter seems to be in the headlines every day proclaiming his allegiance to the Western alliance but provoking the Soviets.

This has created a problem for the chancellor of the Federal German Republic, the president of France, and even the prime minister of Britain, who is Jimmy Carter's greatest supporter in this part of the world.

Apparently, they all came away from the summit believing President Carter was going to moderate his "human rights" campaign. In fact, officials here, at least, say he recognized their problem and promised to do so, but has continued to envenom the issue as before.

After the summit meeting in London, Chancellor Schmidt tried to moderate the "human rights" controversy. He got in touch with Brezhnev in the Soviet Union and with the other leaders of the Communist states of Eastern Europe, including Tito in Yugoslavia and tried to persuade them that Carter was dealing with a domestic political problem, but having made his point, would now avoid dramatizing the problem.

Instead, they insist, Carter has kept inciting the Congress and American public opinion on the human rights issue, and is making things worse.

Obviously, there is either a serious problem or misunderstanding here within the alliance and particularly between President Carter and Chancellor Schmidt.

Their agreement at London last month has clearly broken down, and it is not only human rights but on consultation over arms control, and the Middle East. Chancellor Schmidt is going to Washington in the middle of July to discuss all of this, but that may not be soon enough. Washington and Bonn are the heart of the NATO alliance, and for the moment, if I hear the melody here, they are clear out of touch.

President Carter would probably be startled to hear the longings and doubts being expressed here. They say that in Chancellor Schmidt in Bonn, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in Paris and Prime Minister Callaghan in London, Carter has allies who believe in his objectives, but that he has disappointed them, and particularly Schmidt, since they met him last month in London.

In older neighborhoods, multiple dwellings do hurt

The gentleman protesting the use of federal funds for development of multiple family dwellings in the Malone area has a good point. He believes such a development would produce an unwanted exodus from the area of many of the single family residents now living there.

In the process, the residents now living there would be paid "peanuts" for their homes and find it difficult to relocate. We have come to wonder ourselves about the multiple family situation in the city and what it might mean 50 years from now.

We are not so sure much of anything can be done about it, but we have not been overly impressed with the large apartment complexes we have seen from time to time. And there is no question that they alter the character of a neighborhood.

Apartments and apartment living is not the same as single family living, either socially or in the area of economics. A multiple dwelling unit simply is not very compatible with a single family residence.

Yet, the multiple dwelling is coming to be the only answer we have for many of the older areas of the city such as Malone. When it happens, it means the final end of the single family concept in that area.

There are exceptions to this, of course, but even the exceptions are not all good. We can understand and appreciate why the people in the area of 40th and Normal do not want multiple dwelling units constructed along the south side of Normal east of 40th.

Such multiple dwelling developments frequently are investments and investments only. They have nothing to do with family living or traditional neighborhood concepts.

Too many of them are left to run down at the heels while their owners milk them for all the money they can produce on their investment. Many of them will "age" two and three times as fast as single family developments.

What will some of them be in 50 years? Some of them will be tomorrow's slums and a whole new kind of rejuvenation will need to take place. They do offer a means of reclaiming, so to speak, land and buildings that have become economically depressed but they are a long way from the perfect answer.

Battle lost, but war not over

Congress continues in its attempt to ram through funding for water projects deemed unfeasible and environmentally damaging by President Carter. This week the House rejected a move to cut funding for 16 of the projects on Carter's hit list from a public works appropriations bill.

But there was some good news in the anti-administration vote: there appeared to be enough support for the Carter position to sustain a veto of the appropriations bill if it is ultimately passed.

Carter has threatened to veto a bill containing money for the projects he has deemed unnecessary and wasteful, projects of a kind characterized by one administration supporter in Congress as "dinosaurs of a bygone era.".

The vote rejecting an amendment to cut money for the 16 projects from the budget was narrow: 218-194. Thus it would appear that marshalling the necessary two-thirds majority to override in event of a veto would be difficult.

If the public works appropriations bill passes Congress containing funding for the projects Carter has opposed, we hope the President backs up past threats with action and vetoes the bill — forcing Congress to face an override attempt — which would be forcing Congress to advertise its taste for pork barrel politicking and irrational spending.

This is one of many crucial tests the administration is facing in its relationship with the Congress.

If the President vetoes the appropriations for some of these projects and is sustained, the news is good not only for those who care about environmental concerns, but for taxpayers in general.

But if a Democratic president who has campaigned for a balanced budget, prudent spending and environmental sanity cannot convince a heavily Democratic Congress to break the old bad habits, there is not too much hope left for controlling federal spending.

Patchwork Prairie Country

By La Verna
Hassler

Springtime has turned to summer now that mid-June and ninety degree temperatures are here. June, the best month of them all with its gentle things, the softest things to heal the earth's fears. Soft things like:

The satiny feel of a puppy's ear,
A small bird's wing yet untried for flight,
The silken petals of roses in the early morning impearled with dew,
And the cottonwood fluff sifting through the air.
The scarcely audible snake-quaver in the grass,
Sunlight softly touching the garden wall,
Raindrops, soft-toned, falling upon the quiet sod,
And the slender thread of a cricket's song in the hay field.
There's the whispered ripple of the green running vines on the trellis,
The hushed flutter of butterfly wings on a flower stalk
And the warmth of a little boy's hand softly touching mine.
Far away the pillaging bees are brawling over the clover blossoms
And a quiet breeze at eventide brings stardust drifting over the countryside.

Over by the pond the shore birds feather stitch the water's edge where the cattails are mirrored in the motionless water while nearby the penciled shadow of the cattle trail crosses to the north pasture.

There's the whispered sigh of tall prairie grass as it bows to a gentle breeze and the stir of wings from a hidden nest.

All this as the wonderful pageant of June is quietly unfolding. It is taking place without much fanfare but it welcomes all spectators.

The corn and milo grow quickly in the long days of warming sunlight now and farmers travel from field to field cultivating their crops. Between the tilling of crops they must find time to put up the hay.

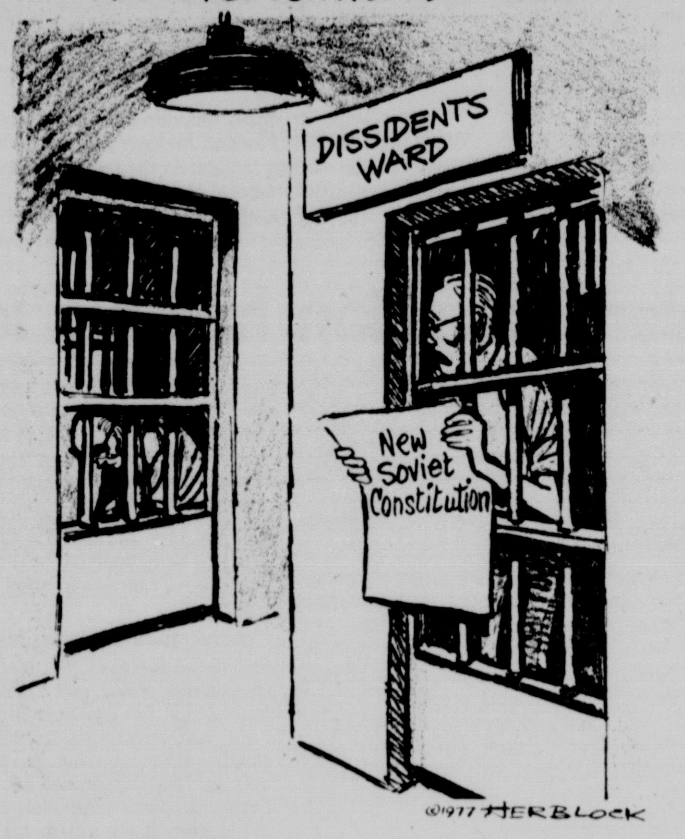
The Farmer disked the pasture land again that he plowed up early in the spring. The rains helped to settle the sod but it also sprouted the weed seeds. Today he will put the mower on the tractor and take another swing at the weeds. Mowing the roadsides and farmlot will take most of the day.

It seems weeds have the nasty habit of growing too fast. In the spring they green-carpet the winter-bare earth. Then suddenly they are tall and unsightly. Once they have matured enough to go to seed another year and another generation of plants will be more difficult to combat. Despite most farmers attempts to combat them their energy seems to be wasted. As rapidly as one weed is cut another takes its place. It doesn't seem much of a legacy to leave weeds to the next generation but I'm certain they will have an ample supply. The price of grain now almost tempts farmers to let his fields grow up into weeds. At least he wouldn't have the expense of high priced seed in the spring and expensive fuel bills.

Appropriate human rights battleground

C. L. Sulzberger

"YOU FEEL STRONG ENOUGH TO HEAR MORE ABOUT ALL OUR RIGHTS, COMRADE?"



Belgrade — This capital is extraordinarily well-suited for its role as host to the first conference reviewing the Helsinki accord on European security. That agreement, signed two years ago after lengthy negotiations, outlined East-West understandings on how detente and freedom should jointly be pursued.

The draft managed curiously to omit any mention of the word "democracy" in its 95 pages (except in names of signatory nations like the "Algerian People's Democratic Republic"). Yet more "democracy" was the object of the exercise. The draft pledged freer travel, information, and civil liberties.

That these promises have not been impressively honored is obvious. President Carter recently released an assessment tabulating arrests of dissidents in the Soviet bloc. Lord Thomson, British chairman of the Helsinki monitoring group, has accused the Eastern bloc of breaches in its undertakings on human rights and an "unabated military effort" that "casts doubt on the sincerity of the Soviet Union's detente policy."

Moscow is now engaged in a perceptibly souped-up effort to jam broadcasts from Western radio stations. And organized attempts to gain more liberty for citizens in Warsaw Pact countries — like this year's Czechoslovakian "Charter 77 Manifesto," calling for less police controls and a freer life — have been met with official hostility and considerable repression.

The reason Belgrade is such an excellent place for discussions of this situation — discussions only now beginning and bound to continue intermittently for many, many weeks — is that Yugoslavia is a half-way house between the contradictory currents involved and the opposing viewpoints symbolized by Moscow and Washington.

Throughout history the south Slavs have been afflicted with a kind of schizophrenia. Their ideology tended to come from the East, their economic sustenance from the West. Their majority looked to Byzantium for their religion and Venice for their trade. And then they were irreparably split when the Ottoman and Habsburg empires partitioned them.

This has left, in modern Yugoslavia, a kind of dichotomy. When Churchill and Stalin divided the Balkans in a secret 1944 treaty, they agreed Yugoslavia should be on a fifty-fifty basis as far as East-West spheres of influence were concerned. Tito started off the postwar period with East Europe's most Stalinist regime; today his is the freest.

Every paradox and confrontation of the current situation is reflected here. According to government admission, 502 political prisoners are in jail which is less, proportionately, than in other Marxist lands but more, proportionately, than Yugoslavia has been accustomed to during most of its history.

Moreover, some dissidents are refused the customary human rights of free travel and free speech. Thus Milovan Djilas, once among Tito's two or three closest colleagues but a subsequent intellectual rebel, is no longer allowed a passport and, although an internationally famous writer, none of his works can be published here.

A group of 93 intellectuals, professors and authors, signed a pledge of support for Czechoslovakia's dissident Charter 77. But this group, although frowned upon and discouraged, has not been persecuted. And while contentious figures like Djilas are not allowed out, many thousands more Yugolsavs wander about the West than from all the rest of the Communist world together.

Even Djilas, a resolute opponent of the system (twice-imprisoned) concedes: "This country is more than half-free. It cannot be compared to the Soviet bloc. In the strictly political and ideological sense it can be compared and the situation of dissidents is probably not better than in Hungary or Poland. But there has been great improvement in the standard of living, a far wider choice of consumers goods, much more freedom to travel."

There is some open repression here — especially directed against Croatian nationalists, Albanian Irredentists, and so-called "cominformists" (meaning pro-Moscow). And there is more implied repression. A general amnesty prepared for last May 1 was suddenly canceled.

Charter 77 sympathizers certainly object to all these aspects. Yet Djilas acknowledges: "Things in Yugoslavia are superior, even despite political stultification, to other Communist societies." He adds: "Detente is essential and it is important that it continue. Even for human rights in East Europe, in the long run detente will be favorable."

Almost every type of argument that will arise at the 35 nation Helsinki review exists already in minuscule concerning Yugolsavia itself. This is a crossroads for East-West contradictions: ideological, political, military, legal, commercial, cultural.

As a middle ground Belgrade is an admirable site for the diplomatic bazaar which started Wednesday.

Democrats face '78 mischief

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — The Democrats met here the other day to plan their party's mandatory midterm conference with all the enthusiasm of a kid facing a visit to the dentist. They know they have to go, but they don't have to like it.

Because the 1976 Democratic national convention ruled that a midterm conference must be held, the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee spent several hours waggling over just when it should be held and how many delegates of various shapes and sizes should be invited. But what many clearly would rather have done was finesse the whole idea.

The White House had wanted to get this bad tooth pulled in advance of the 1978 Congressional elections, on the theory that the mini-convention could busy itself with those elections and not get mixed up in early meddling in the 1980 Presidential campaign. But Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and House Speaker Tip O'Neill quickly passed the word that Congress didn't want any ad hoc fussing with their campaign, either. The conference, they said, should be held after the off-year balloting. As is often the case these days, the voice of Congress won out.

So the question now is — and it was raised repeatedly in private conversations among executive committee members — what will the mini-convention do? It is not its business to write a party platform or to plan a presidential campaign. The experts who did that for Jimmy Carter last year are in place in the White House they have never shown any particular desire to have help or advice from party regulars, whom they regard as failures in the business of president-electing.

Those who are most skeptical about the mini-convention are fearful it will disintegrate into little more than a glorified pep rally, wasting resources and risking disputes, which are as natural to any Democratic gathering as acne to a teenager.

If Carter retains his popularity, the potential for intraparty mischief will be checked. But what if he should continue to have serious troubles with Congress over his proposals on energy, tax reform, election reform or any of the other ambitious initiatives he has sent to Capitol Hill — or will have sent by next year?

The makeup of the mini-convention will give congressional leaders and their grass-root allies a lot to say at the midterm conference should an all-out fight be in progress at the time between the White House and the Democratic Congress. And if the Democrats have suffered losses in the off-year elections, the mini-convention could be Saturday night in Dodge City.

Members of the executive committee such as the placid but shrewd Don Fowler of South Carolina declined to anticipate such a gloomy outlook. Fowler says there is nothing in sight to indicate the kind of intraparty squabble that would have taken place, for instance, had there been a midterm Democratic conference in 1966, when the idea was first proposed by dissidents who hoped thereby to curb Lyndon Johnson's conduct of the Vietnam war.

Only Joe Crangle, the Erie County, N.Y., party leader, sought in vain at the executive committee meeting to get some discussion of what the purpose of the mini-convention would be, before worrying about how many Democrats would be there. But the consensus was to proceed with the planning and see what there is to do when the conference draws closer.

Crangle sees the meeting not so much as a potential arena for a fight between the White House and Congress as an opportunity for the rank-and-file to express itself on issues before Congress and the country.

The White House had indicated that Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale and Cabinet members will be trotted out for the midterm meeting. But others may be of a mind to make use of the forum as well, especially if there is no major work to be done at it. Should Gov. Jerry Brown, for instance, decide to challenge the incumbent — a possibility few who know the maverick Brown will rule out — the mini-convention would be made to order for him to showcase his alternatives to the Carter presidency.

No one can forecast now what may happen, but the opportunities for mischief are many, and the Democrats know it.

Water project costs include interest

Today's Mail

Monumental jump

Omaha, Neb.

Governor Exon and the Legislature, during the recent session, used their good offices to keep the Norden and North Loup irrigation projects afloat and urged Congress to keep supplying federal funds for the projects.

The projects are good, of course, as long as the Federal Government supplies the funds, and according to the Bureau of Reclamation, 95% of the cost will be repaid, so why be concerned? Twenty-five percent will be repaid by those who receive project water and revenues from electrical power generated on the Missouri River will pay the other 70%.

It sounds good, but like most oversimplified statements it is completely untrue. I invite the governor and those legislators who are interested to pick up a pencil and discover what the real costs are and who will be paying them.

First they should understand how the debt will be repaid. The landowners receiving project water are scheduled to pay back 25% of the project cost over 40 years starting ten years after the project has been completed at no interest. According to the bureau's payment schedule, power revenues will begin paying off irrigation projects in about 2024. Other requirements in the Missouri River Basin have a higher priority and must be paid off first.

Since the Norden project was authorized in 1972, the estimated cost has gone from $118,000,000 to $180,000,000 in 1977. Using the same rate of increase, about 10%, the estimated cost of the project would top $500,000,000 by 1986, only ten years down the road.

However, once construction starts, contractors and suppliers are paid off as work is completed, so the estimated increases would be reduced accordingly. Assuming that construction got underway in 1978 and the project was completed in 1986, a conservative estimate of the final cost would be near $350,000,000. But, this is peanuts — we have just begun to pay for the project.

The contractors and suppliers have now been paid off, and the $350,000,000 has become a debt owed to the Federal Government and must be added to the deficit, costing American taxpayers a minimum of 7% interest. During the next ten years at 7% interest, while the beneficiaries are receiving free water, the cost of the project will soar to over $640,000,000 or put another way the public will subsidize the project to the tune of over $400,000 a year for each landowner.

But then comes the monumental jump. With the same interest rate carried forward to 2024, when power revenues are scheduled to begin repayment, and after the no interest payments made by the beneficiaries have been deducted, the debt will zoom to over $4,000,000,000 or an average subsidy of $105,000,000 a year.

It doesn't require a CPA or a mathematical genius to understand that true costs include interest on borrowed money. All the bureau would have to do is ask any homeowner.

TED HOFFMAN

Passions of passing majorities

Anthony Lewis

London — In voting to repeal a local law that protected homosexuals from discrimination in jobs and public accommodations, the people of Miami, Fla., sent an unintended message. They reminded us that the rights of minorities are too important to be trusted to the passions of passing majorities.

That message has a trans-Atlantic resonance. For many voices in Britain these days are questioning the idea of unlimited majoritarian democracy, the political theory that has prevailed here for a long time. There is more talk than ever before of protecting individual liberty by setting limits — constitutional limits enforced by the courts — on what parliaments and governments may do in the name of the popular will.

The United States was founded on the belief that even representative government and regular elections are not enough to guarantee liberty. The framers of the Constitution feared not only the tyranny of George III but the tyranny of the majority. They therefore divided governmental power and restrained it by checks and balances. And they looked to judges, as Hamilton said in the Federalist, to assure "adherence to the rights of the Constitution, and of individuals."

Law has turned out to be an essential stabilizing influence in the unruly and often emotional politics of America. Judges, enforcing the Constitution, have kept presidents and Congresses, state legislatures and sheriffs from abusing their power.

The courts have hardly been consistent defenders of individual liberty, but the United States would surely have been much less free without them. Judges have been especially important in protecting the rights of what Chief Justice Harlan Stone called "discrete and insular minorities." Blacks and Jehovah's Witnesses, radicals and Indians would all have suffered a good deal more than they have if they had had to rely entirely on the good will of the majority for their rights.

The American Constitution protects individuals and minority groups only against mistreatment by official bodies. Ending discrimination by private employers or hotels or restaurants requires civil rights legislation of the kind Miami's voters vetoed for homosexuals.

But constitutional protection, albeit limited, can still be extremely significant. If the intolerant religiosity of Miss Anita Bryant persuaded the Florida Legislature to pass a law requiring all homosexuals to wear a yellow star, even the present Supreme Court would probably find the law so invidious as to be unconstitutional.

In Britain, there are no legal limits whatever on political power. There is no written constitution, and judges must enforce as law whatever Parliament enacts. If a bill were passed tomorrow that said a notch must be cut in the left ear of every left-handed person in England and Wales, nothing in British law could prevent its enforcement.

Britain has in effect relied on the wisdom and tolerance of its governing elite to prevent abuse of power. And for most of the last 200 years that system of self-restraint — of recognizing that some things are simply not done — has worked. Karl Marx wrote happily away in the British Museum, protected in his revolutionary theorizing not by a constitution but by the self-confidence of Victorian Britain.

But the conditions that once maintained British freedom have changed. This country is no longer governed by a small elite — Plantagenet Palliser and his friends. It is no longer so homogeneous; it has diverse immigrant and racial groups. And it is no longer such a self-confident country. Accordingly, it is in greater danger of over-reaching public emotion, of demagoguery, of abuse of power by politicians and bureaucrats.

In recent years there have been troubling examples of official intrusion on individual rights — actions that would have run into constitutional barriers in the United States. One was the law, rushed through Parliament by Harold Wilson's Labor government, that excluded from Britain East African Asians who held British passports and had no place else to go.

In short, this country reposes enormous, unreviewable discretion in those who temporarily hold political power. It is a system, as has been said, of alternating autocracies — of men, not laws. Confidence in the fairness of that system has been shaken. Many are no longer willing to trust fundamental freedoms to transitory majorities in the House of Commons, anymore than Americans would want to leave their fundamental freedoms to the voters of Miami.

Arab foothold in Panama?

Jack Anderson

Washington — There is disturbing evidence that Panama's strongman Omar Torrijos has struck a secret deal with Libya's wildman Muammar Qaddafi to give the Arab extremist a foothold in the Americas and to cooperate with the Arab boycott against the Jews.

The erratic Qaddafi is regarded as one of the world's most irresponsible rulers. He has armed radical terrorist groups, tried to purchase nuclear weapons, subsidized Uganda's zany Idi Amin and engaged in various harum-scarum intrigues.

Two months ago, he invited Torrijos to Tripoli for some joint rhetoric against the United States. With much bluster, they pledged political allegiance to each other, arranged to exchange military delegations and agreed upon economic cooperation.

But indications are beginning to leak out that the two leaders also reached a secret understanding, with some ominous overtones. Here are the details:

—A secret Panamanian document certifies that a contractor, who is constructing a hydroelectric project in Panama, "has never had any ties of any kind with Jewish or Zionist firms nor persons."

—Torrijos has quietly agreed to grant Libya one hectare of land in Panama for "commercial, industrial, financial and other international activities." This has raised a red flag with Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla. He has written a private letter to Vance, citing Qaddafi's "rather detailed record of terrorist support" and asking tersely: "What interpretation do you give to 'other international activities'?"

—Qaddafi has also arranged to establish a $100 million Arab bank in Panama. Government analysts are worried that he might use the bank to launder the money he hands out to terrorist groups.

In the past, Torrijos has been a mild Israeli supporter. But government analysts fear Panama is in such desperate financial straits that he might be willing to change his attitude toward the Jews in return for Arab petrodollars.

Beware of orange juice haters

Ron Hendren

Washington — Misguided religion is not required in the process of taking a tempest in a teapot and turning it into a hurricane, but it helps. And that, as much as the right to worship freely, is one reason why we should thank Almighty God for imbuing the Founding Fathers with the good sense to separate church from state constitutionally. Consider Dade County, Fla.

It may be hard to believe, but the recent wreckage there was the product of the most fearsome flapping of wings over four words that in this day would scarcely produce a worthwhile guffaw out at the Moose Lodge: 'Affectional or sexual preference.'' Those were the words, and they appeared tacked on to the end of a long list of thou - shalt - not - discriminate - on - the - basis - ofs, a local ordinance which sounds nice on paper, but which in reality has all the clout of the Pope at a Bar Mitzvah. (You doubt my word? Check your local statute; there's a good chance such a law is on the books in your town. And then look at the reality around you. Feel threatened? I doubt it.)

But down in Dade County, Anita Bryant felt threatened by the ordinance, and by the gays. And she lent her wholesome good looks, her famous name and her considerable energy to wiping out both — in the name of the Lord.

And that last part is what bothers me most. Miss Bryant is a born-again Christian of unusual fervor, who claims guidance from a higher authority in respect to her crusade. I can't help but believe the message got garbled somewhere along the way. My check of the New Testament turned up one instance in all His earthly sojourn when Christ picked up the whip; and that was to run the moneylenders out of the temple. Even then, there is no recorded evidence that He did more than pecuniary damage to any of them.

Miss Bryant, on the other hand, in confusing her cause with some of her Lord's children, has publicly whipped a large number of the latter. Even if she were right — that homosexuality is a disease — she has ended up stoning the bearers, trying to banish them, if not from the earth, at least to some isolated colony far from society.

It won't work and it is wrong. And the heartening part is that at least a third of Miss Bryant's Dade County neighbors recognized that it is wrong. But that isn't enough. Miss Bryant has said she is going national. Before more damage is done in His name, some of the Lord's more persuasive servants ought to sit down with her and discuss her crusade in the light of His mission.

Neither His cause nor this nation's can be benefited by a war of persecution waged on the secular stage against a small minority who are not doing Him, nor the nation nor yet Miss Bryant any perceptible injury.

For all the religious and political sense it makes, Miss Bryant might as well have chosen to pick on that dangerous minority, of which I admit to being one, who cannot abide orange juice.

He played not to lose

Full Disclosure

(Editor's Note: The Soviet chairman has been killed, and U.S. President Sven Ericson blinded, at least temporarily, in an assassination backed by Soviet Foriegn Minister Vasily Nikolayev. But it happens that Ericson suffered similar blindness during his election campaign when he was sharing an upper berth with a girl. Having withheld that information poses a challenge to Ericson's right to remain in office and raises a threat that the 25th amendment might be invoked against him.)

By William Safire

Above all, he was determined not to make a mistake. Every interview, every dedication speech presented new opportunities to the vice president to commit a blooper, every tie-breaking vote in the Senate a chance to make a misstep. Arnold Nichols was conscious of his ability to blow it all every time he opened his mouth. He would be careful and he would someday be president. Let others play to win; all he had to do was to play not to lose.

The vice president never looked forward to these weekly briefings on economic affairs by the treasury secretary because Bannerman was an impatient pedagogue, just as he was an incautious politician. More important than the information conveyed was the regularity of their get-together. It showed that Arnold Nichols was being kept closely informed, and not by any mid-level assistant, either, but by the man who mattered in financial circles around the world, T. Roy Bannerman.

T. Roy Bannerman was not talking economics today.

"Mr. Vice President" —that was the formal salutation, giving Nichols a feeling that the meeting was momentous — "you and I have to discuss a matter that nobody else seems willing to face up to."

"The President's illness," suggested the vice president.

"The President's blindness," said Bannerman. "Everybody's pussyfooting around, pretending it's all just an ailment that's going to go away in a few days, but it's not. And what we've got right here, right now, is a goddam national crisis."

The vice president made soothing sounds, but Bannerman barreled ahead. "I have it on the best authority that the President is permanently blind. You know I don't jump to conclusions, Arnold. But this was too important a matter to be left to one mortal man and a handful of sycophants who like to ride around in flight jackets, with presidential seals embroidered over their hearts.

"The odds are that the president is blind for good. That's bad news, tragic news. But it won't go away, and it's malfeasance to go around as if we don't know what our responsibility is."

"Do you believe, Mr. Secretary" — Nichols could get formal, too — "that this is a matter in which it is correct for me to play any kind of role — I mean, any kind at all?"

"I know what you are getting at," Bannerman said slowly. "You cannot ever be in a polition that might be considered as being anxious to usurp power. But a discussion of the President's disability is right and proper, because you have certain responsibilities to discharge — that is, if you think he is disabled.

"I think I know Sven Ericson," said Bannerman, "we've had a few battles in our time. He's an intellectual, and a theorist, and a darling of the Georgetown crowd, and all the columnists love him, because he looks Lincolnesque. But he's not. He'll hang in there no matter what it does to the country, because he has some kind of messianic complex."

"You're being unkind," the vice president demurred.

"He thinks you're a horse's ass, Arnold," Bannerman continued, "and you know that. He's said that on a dozen occasions, ever since the convention when I insisted that you be his running mate. He'll use you as an excuse to hang on."

The vice president swallowed. Bannerman was right on his facts, but wrong to drag him into this, and unnecessarily blunt. Maybe someday he would have to testify to a Congressional committee about this; Nichols did not want to have to talk about a discussion of disability that he might have had today.

"For God's sake," Bannerman nearly shouted, "The

Output surges 1.1% in May

Washington (UPI) — Industrial production surged 1.1% in May on the strength of stronger output of iron, steel, consumer products and business equipment, the Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday.

The jump in the output of mines, factories and utilities outstripped the 0.8% increase in April and was a solid sign the economy is expanding enough to create new job opportunities for the unemployed and June graduates.

The increase was in the range of the 1.4% in March that was spurred by the resumption of manufacturing and mining after cold weather shut down operations in the East, Midwest and South.

President learns

Full Disclosure

President of the United States at the moment — and for the foreseeable future — can't find his way across the room! Stop feeling sorry for him, feel sorry for the country — if he can't bring himself to do his duty, somebody will have to do it for him."

"Please remember my words, Roy," said Nichols. "The words are 'tell the President, don't tell me.' I'll repeat, so we both never forget: 'tell the President, don't tell me.' "

"Your response is quite proper," Bannerman allowed, ignoring it as the vice president knew he would, "but you're the one who will have to call the cabinet meeting if a blind President will not resign. The secretary of state never will — he's in Ericson's pocket, and now he'll see his chance to act like a real secretary of state — and he outranks me. But you could call the meeting —"

"Do I have the authority?"

"You have the Nixon precedent during the Eisenhower illness. Have somebody research all that," Bannerman added.

"Don't trust Curtice," Bannerman warned, "he sees this as state's big chance, to be a bigshot while the country limps along without a president who can legally sign his name. Watch out for the attorney general, too. He's a down-the-line Ericson man, and so is Reed at defense."

"Don't rush into anything." Nichols wondered how to put his next point, so it wouldn't appear later that he had a hand in the situation. "The President faces some terrible difficulties in the next four days. I mean, simple things, that he may not realize now, will cause him great trouble. His first reaction — yours, mine — is to fight back. But he knows the country comes first. When he sees what it's like to be blind, how it hampers the Presidency, then, who knows? We may have to do nothing but applaud his sacrifice."

"Good sense," said Bannerman, and Nichols wished there were not a note of surprise in the comment. "I hadn't thought that through, the human element. I'll buy that. We'll wait a few days. But if nothing happens then —"

The vice president shrugged, and repeated his catechism: "Tell the President, don't tell me."

"I understand you bring some first-hand experience to your job," the President of the United States said. Fowler said only "yes." The last thing blind people wanted to hear was the problems of other blind people. The newly blind also did not look forward to meeting new people, whose voices could not be connected to known faces.

"Let me describe myself, Sir," he said, keeping his voice low but speaking rapidly. "I'm a little guy, square-built, round-faced. Fifty-two years old, liberal, hair thinning on top, striking black mustache."

"You trim it yourself?"

"I do everything myself, Mr. President. Not because I have to, my wife could do it for me, but I run my own life because it makes me feel cocky, and I need that." His contact made, the therapist induced the patient to perform a simple task. "This is the famous Lincoln Sitting Room. Could you describe it to me?"

"Sure." Presidents would like describing parts of the White House, Fowler imagined; it established their connection with all that went before.

"This easy chair, where I am, belonged to President Buchanan. He was an old man when he got to the White House, and he said, 'All my friends are dead, and all my enemies are now my friends.' Good line. I wonder who wrote it for him. To my left, your right, is a bookcase, used to have Sandburg's life of Lincoln, and the complete set of Lincoln's works, but I put them downstairs in the official library because I need the space here for books I'm reading now."

He paused. "I guess they can put Sandburg back. Only thing that's Lincoln in this sitting room now is a bust, the Volk bust, on the desk, here on my right."

"Put yourself at the center of a clock," said the therapist, "like in those air force movies, and say I'm 12 o'clock. Where's the desk?"

"Three o'clock."

"The phone?"

"Two in here. One on the desk, say at two o'clock, the other at my right hand, toward five o'clock."

"Window?"

"Behind me. Six o'clock."

"Bathroom?"

"Three o'clock, a john, no shower. My bathroom is down the hall, off my bedroom."

"Ready for lesson number one? Take me there."

Very slowly, the President rose, touched his visitor's shoulder and led him out of the Lincoln Sitting Room and Fowler could visualize him, arm outstretched, working along the walls he thought he could remember. The President passed through the Lincoln Bedroom, telling the agent not to help or to say anything.

As they reached what Fowler judged to be the central hallway that was his route in, the President moved ahead more confidently until his hand jabbed into a wall.

"That's a wall," Ericson announced. "That's a new wall, it's never been there until today. If you don't really want to use the can, I may kill you."

"Right back." Fowler crossed the room, sensed the doorway, quickly touched the shower curtain, sink, toilet and towel, and proceeded to take a pee, flush the toilet, rinse his hands, humming all the while, as if he were familiar with the bathroom.

He was well aware that Ericson must have spent agonizing moments there, making sure of his aim, groping for a towel, breaking bottles. He made a mental note to tell Abelson to change all the bottles and glasses to plastic and to install a grip for the bath.

"Now, let me lead you back to the Lincoln Sitting Room," he said briskly. "Grab my arm firmly and let's move quickly." He took the President out into the hall, through the doorway and back to where they had started, confidently, easily.

He worried about cane

Full Disclosure

"Good trick, Doc. Now tell me how you did it."

"Step count, obviously," Fowler told him. "Six steps out of the door, 27 steps down the hall, doorway, 12 steps to Mr. Lincoln's room, nine, through it to the Sitting Room. Now you want to know how to keep from banging into walls. We have a new gimmick for that." He produced a round, thick object on a watchband and pressed it into the President's hand. "That's a wrist sonar, not commercially available yet, but you can use it instead of a cane."

"I was worried about having to use a cane," said the President. "That would have made me an object of pity. This electronic gadget is much better, Hank."

Fowler decided to give him a dash of cold water. "It's not nearly as good as a cane, Mr. President. Skillful use of a long cane is still the best way for a blind person to go anywhere. The sonar watch is just a gimmick for you to use until you stop being self-conscious about arousing pity. Let me give it to you straight: a watch looks better, a cane works better."

"At this point," said Ericson, "I am infinitely more interested in the way it looks. If I go stumbling around, or act like a man who can't get from here to there without a blind man's cane, there will be those who will hand me a tin cup and tell me to change jobs."

After some banter, respectful but not obsequious, the therapist felt the time was ripe to slip in a question: "Have trouble when you wake up in the morning?" He could feel the President's chill in the silence.

"What do you mean, Hank?"

"I went blind in my thirties, result of an accident, same as you, and what used to bother the hell out of me was waking up in the morning. Before, you woke up, you opened your eyes — that was part of waking up. Not to see when you woke up — it was like not knowing you were up, or still dreaming, or what. Then I used to dream I was up when I wasn't and that made waking up worse. Eerie sensation. Started my whole day in a sweat."

"That doesn't happen to me," said the President. "I'm fine in the morning."

He'll be a tough one to open up, thought Fowler. And he won't adjust to the operations of his new job until he comes to grips with the reality of being a blind man. A lot was riding on this therapy — not just the smooth operation of the presidency, but the hopes of 20 million handicapped people in America.

Fowler would handle his patient with care. The President may be euphoric now, with his discovery of electronic aids and mental tymnastics, but he would soon slip into the inescapable depression of the newly blind, which Fowler remembered vividly.

"You think I can bring this whole thing off, Hank?"

"Any man who thinks he can run this country," said Fowler, "has to have an ego a mile high. Let's start with that. If you think you can run it at all, then you probably can convince yourself that you can run it with a handicap, like loss of speech, or sight, or hearing, or legs. So it's safe to say you have the motivation."

The President stood up, moved over to the desk, pushed some papers out of the way and sat on the desk top, Fowler following every motion with his ears. "Now I want to ask you something as an American, Hank, and not as a psychologist, or a blind man: do you think it's right for me to make the try?" Fowler knew what the President wanted to hear, but he decided to give him a taste of what life was like on the blind side.

"Never ask a blind man not to think like a blind man."

(NEXT: Debate on the President's removal begins.)

Senate condemns KGB's interrogation of reporter

Moscow (AP) — American newsman Robert C. Toth was grilled for 6½ hours Wednesday by angry Soviet KGB agents who told him he was a witness, and "not the accused," the Los Angeles Times correspondent said.

"They wouldn't say who the accused were or the charges. It was 'none of my business,' " said Toth, who was picked up by secret police after a Soviet scientist gave him an article on parapsychology.

In Washington, the U.S. Senate approved a resolution condemning Toth's detention as a "gross violation" of the 1975 Helsinki accords and called on the Carter administration to take "every appropriate means" to obtain Toth's safe return.

President Carter told reporters, "We've expresssed our strongest objections about what has been done about Mr. Toth." He said any attention given to the Toth case by the international media "will have an impact" at a time when an international conference in Belgrade is reviewing human rights progress since the Helsinki meeting.

"It is our understanding that Toth has been told he is not going to be formally charged," a U.S. State Department official in Washington said.

Other U.S. officials said the information came from Toth and not from Soviet officials.

Toth told colleagues in Moscow that he was still not certain whether he will face charges. He noted that during four hours of questioning Tuesday the word "spy" was used about his activities.

Los Angeles Times publisher Otis Chandler said Toth's harassment "marks an escalation — a dangerous escalation — of the historic Soviet abuse of journalists to make whatever diplomatic or political point the Russians want to make at the moment."

Reformed Church names Brouwer as chief executive

Sioux Center, Iowa (AP) — Delegates to the general synod of the Reformed Church in America Wednesday named a northwest Iowa native as general secretary, the church's chief executive post.

The Rev. Arie R. Brouwer, born in Inwood and raised in Minnesota, was recommended by the general synod's executive committee for the job.

Some 285 delegates to the general synod are meeting Monday through Friday on the Dort College Campus and the high school in Sioux Center.

Brouwer will assume the position Sept. 1, upon the retirement of Dr. Marion DeVelder, who has served in that capacity for 16 years.

Brouwer has been executive secretary of the 215,000-member Reformed Church since 1967.

New York (AP) — "To get across town in Manhattan, you have to have been born there," goes an often-used description of New York's east-west traffic congestion.

The Madison Avenue Sports Car Driving and Chowder Society set out to find the quickest way to cross the island and 16 spirited contestants, using everything from a Ferrari sports car to a skateboard, raced from United Nations Plaza to Sardi's restaurant.

A gasoline-powered moped, driven by former national sports car racing champion Bruce MacInnes, was the first to reach the West 44th St. restaurant, after racing a 2.4-mile course in just over eight minutes.

"It was the real thing," said MacInnes, who called the race "tough." He added that he encountered no problems "until the guy on the electric moped passed me. Then I had to go for it."

The race started with an assortment of mopeds, antique and modern cars, a rusty bicycle and a late-entry horse-drawn carriage lined up for the challenge.

Stewart Cuthrie, brother of race car driver Janet Guthrie, said he entered the race as a jogger for fun and "to promote the cause of pedestrianism in the city."

The Ferrari came in last.

Maine guards not so friendly

Augusta, Maine (AP) — Two men who had rented an armored car as part of a money-making scheme asked locals at a shopping center here to prove that Maine residents are the friendliest people in the country.

How? By contributing $1 for donations, which the men apparently said would benfit themselves.

The pair from Augusta managed to net all of $8 before their "friendly" outing was stopped after three guards who were hired along with the car drove off. The guards said they left after they realized what the men were up to.

Truckers to get hall

Widow pleads for clear record

Associated Press

Mrs. Slovik
. . . soldier's widow.

Washington (AP) — The Pentagon came face to face with an unusual war casualty Wednesday, the crippled widow of the only American soldier shot for desertion in this century.

Antoinette Slovik was slightly stooped in her wheel chair as she asked the Army Board for the Correction of Military Records to clear the name of her late husband, Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik.

Slovik confessed to twice fleeing combat and was executed by firing squad in France on Jan. 31, 1945. Mrs. Slovik seeks $68,000 — payment plus interest on the soldier's National Service Life Insurance policy.

Federal law says those convicted of desertion or killed by lawful punishment cannot receive insurance benefits.

However, Ray Williams, secretary of the Army Board, said previously that while the law clearly is against the widow's claim, "the board may correct any military record where, in its judgment, such action is necessary to correct an error or to remove an injustice."

Mrs. Slovik, 62, epileptic and arthritic, also asked the board to have her late husband's body removed from the dishonorable section of a small cemetery in France to a grave where she said he might rest in peace.

Mrs. Slovik was dressed in a white pants suit. She spoke slowly in a gruff voice to the five civilian panel members who voted in secret following the hearing on whether to grant her the requested relief.

The panel's vote is expected to be announced in three to four weeks, after it has gone for approval to Asst. Army Secretary Robert Nelson.

Wednesday was not Mrs. Slovik's first trip to the Pentagon. She was here in 1953, still trying after eight years to find out how her husband died. Until then, she had nothing but a two sentence telegram. To this date she has not received a death certificate.

Records released to the widow in 1953 painted a grim portrait of an impoverished youth from Detroit, terrified of combat, shot as an example to others

Allied forces had just suffered heavy losses in the Battle of the Bulge campaign. Soldiers shot off fingers and toes for a free ticket away from the front line to the relative safety of a hospital.

Slovik was one of 49 men sentenced to death for desertion. Only Slovik was executed.

He begged then Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for clemency in a handwritten letter which he signed: "Yours for Victory, Pvt. Eddie D. Slovik."

Eisenhower rejected the clemency appeal. Maj. Frederick J. Bertolet, who reviewed the sentence for Eisenhower, noted the importance of killing Slovik to set an example.

Gulf Oil, two officers accused of giving IRS man vacations

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Gulf Oil Corp. and two of its officers were indicted Wednesday on federal charges that the company gave paid vacations to an Internal Revenue Service supervisor who was investigating its tax returns and campaign contributions.

The nine-count indictment named Gulf Oil; Fred Standefer, its vice president for tax administration, and Joseph Fitzgerald, manager for federal tax compliance.

They were accused of paying $3,294.92 so Cyril J. Nederberger, the IRS supervisor in Pittsburgh, could take vacations in Florida, Nevada, California and New Jersey.

Gulf denied any violation of the law.

Disc-star shows how planets evolve

Atlanta (UPI) — An Arizona astronomer disclosed Wednesday that a disc-star, a new phenomenon of space, has been discovered in the constellation Cygnus.

Dr. Rodger I. Thompson said the future studies of the star, trillions of miles from Earth, will give scientists a chance to see how planets are formed.

Thompson presented a paper at the American Astronomical Society convention detailing his work in infrared plotting of the giant star and its planets.

He said the star is about 30 times the size of the sun, with a white-hot "disc" of circulating matter extending as far out from its center as Earth's orbit extends from the sun.

Beyond the visible portion, he said, there is a gravity field with planets circulating in darkness. Thompson said, however, that the planets give off no light of their own and cannot be seen.

"I think this is a spectacular step forward in theories of star formation," said Thompson, an associate professor of astronomy at the University of Arizona. "It's the first star we've been able to identify as being in its early stages of formation."

The star, known only as MWC 349, was first found in the 1930s, but its formation of planets was not known until now. Thompson said new observation methods, including use of a flying observatory, made it possible to study planetary evolution with infrared photography.

He said the star is 7,000 light years from Earth in the constellation Cygnus.

"Since the star is much more massive than our own sun, it will develop planets much faster," said Thompson. "But it will never be in the same shape as our own solar system because the central star is different. It's much hotter and more massive."

He said the new star will also flicker out more quickly than smaller stars.

"Our own system is good for about 5-billion years," he said. "This one will run out in about 100 million."

The star was discovered by a team of scientists from Arizona University and the NASA Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

Revived boy, 5, dies

Grand Rapids, Mich. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy who was revived after 30 minutes under water has lost his three-week battle for life.

Gerald Finkbeiner had been in a coma since he almost drowned May 24 while trying to rescue a 2-year-old brother from a pond on the family's farm. A new life-saving technique was credited with reviving Gerald despite the long time he spent in the water.

Hospital officials said Gerald suddenly stopped breathing and died about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

"I'm going to miss him . . . he was my right-hand man," the boy's father said.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Finkbeiner had completed their daily visit to their son's bedside just a short time before the boy died. They learned of their son's death by telephone when they reached home.

Leaping lizards, turtles and a pet 'Monty' python

How could any female iguana resist Naviaux's confident, handsome male pet?

Naviaux hoists "Monty" the python.

Story and photos by Harry Jackson

Lizards, snakes, frogs and turtles may seem like strange pets, but that depends on your point of view.

"They're not like dogs or cats," said John Naviaux, 15, an amateur herpetologist. "But then you don't have to housebreak them."

At Naviaux's 9th and Sycamore home, in his small but efficiently equipped basement room, he keeps about 25 different reptiles.

The collection includes exotic nonpoisonous frogs, lizards, an iguana and three turtles including a snapper. Topping it off are a four-and-a-half-foot Burmese python — named Monty — and a shorter, but meaner, reticulated python.

"That python's a redneck. He bites anything," Naviaux said describing his three-foot pet.

The youth has collected reptiles for more than a year. The collection had a spontaneous beginning.

He and his brother caught a lizard near South Bend. "We brought him home and kept him in a cooler with a Saran Wrap top," he said.

Since then, his collection has grown along with his facilities.

At one time, he had more than 35 reptiles until an illness killed all of one species of lizard.

The Saran Wrap-topped cooler has bowed to more sophisticated glass-fronted cases and aquariums — worth more than $1,200. Naviaux designed the new equipment and his older brother built it.

Sand once used in the bottom of the cooler, has been replaced by cedar shavings, artistic driftwood logs and pooted plants which flourish under the warm lamps in the cages.

He's invested more than $600 in the collection, a habit he supports with his job at the Ager Memorial Zoo and occasional help from his mom and dad.

With more than four linear feet of reference books and all of his experience at the zoo and home, Naviaux is still learning certain dos and don'ts — sometimes the hard way.

"I bought a sea anemone for a salt-water aquarium," he said. "I was kind of stroking it when it fired a stinger into my finger. I spaced out for almost 30 seconds. It was weird."

He's been bitten so often by the smaller pet python he's almost immune to the pain.

"I like the other one better," he said referring to his larger Burmese python. "It can be handled real easy."

Naviaux did have problems getting his hobby off the ground. Finding python stores isn't an easy task.

But youth's initiative won out.

"One day I was in (a local pet store) and they said they couldn't get what I wanted," he explained. "But I looked on one of the boxes their snakes came in and copied down the return address. I wrote them a letter and got a good answer.

"Then another time I was able to get a look in (the pet store's) price book and I copied down a lot of addresses then," he said.

But he found that many companies won't sell to collectors, only to retail pet stores and zoos.

"They'd send me price lists, but when they found I wasn't a pet store they wouldn't deal with me. But I kept looking," he said.

Naviaux's persistence paid off when he found an exotic animal store in New York state that was tickled pink to get his business.

His most recent order for a python and six lizards ran $110 plus about $20 in freight charges.

"And I just ordered a rainbow boa constrictor," he said. The addition will complete his snake collection.

Naviaux doesn't spend much time doing whatever 15-year-olds do nowadays; he has his wards to care for.

"When I have to be at work at 8 a.m. I'm up at six taking care of them," he said.

He keeps a log of feeding, on the snakes especially because they eat live food — usually mice and hamsters he gets from the zoo.

He raises mealworms and crickets for his other reptiles.

Convincing Mom and Dad of his hobby wasn't easy for the reptile collector.

"Mom didn't care for it at first, but after awhile she came down and held the lizards. But she still won't touch the snakes," he said.

"Dad's about the same," he said. "He doesn't mind anything but the snakes. He really doesn't care for them.

Dad, (John A. Naviaux, not senior) seconded that.

"Yes, the snakes are a bit disconcerting. I really don't know why he chooses this particular (hobby). But we have four other children and we've tried to encourage them in the things they do," he said.

"The school encourages his growth in this area too," the father continued. "We don't get complaints from the neighbors even though a lot of people are afraid of snakes. But then a lot of people are afraid of dogs too."

At times, dad's even philosophical about his son's endeavors:

"He's curious. This helps his curiosity," he said. "And then we've found that someone who respects animals will respect all forms of life."

Icebergs touted to aid drought

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — Tugging an iceberg up from the Antarctic to cultivate the world's deserts is feasible, a researcher says, and could prompt a tourist bonanza in the process.

The concept has been proposed before, but California water officials — suffering through the worst drought in the state's history — aren't rejecting it out of hand.

John Hult, president of Application Concepts and Technology Association in Santa Monica, renewed his proposal in a paper submitted to the two-week United Nations-California Department of Water Resources' conference on desert development.

Hult, who has written four papers on the subject since 1973, wants California to get involved in a $20 million pilot project.

"The California coast as a destination would also excite the greatest revenue recovery from first-day covers, souvenirs, film and literary returns, and publicity of all types," Hult said.

He said icebergs, wrapped in plastic "wet suits" to cut evaporation and melting, could be linked into trains and brought slowly to areas where they would be valuable. It would take less energy than is now required to desalt water or pump water long distances in aqueducts, Hult said.

Ronald Robie, state water resources director, said that "nothing is too crazy to give some thought to . . . I've only seen studies from proponents. I think the proponent is looking for money to spend on studies and I don't think the state is willing to spend money on that."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — jack of hearts.

Dear Mr. Becker: I suffer from nightmares — bridge nightmares, that is. I have this recurring dream where I'm South and always open the bidding with a club — because I play five-card majors and can't open a spade.

West and North pass and East doubles for takeout. Of course I know that if I pass West may also pass, but I also realize that a takeout double is taken out far more often than it is left in. In any case, if I run to one spade I may be jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

So I play the hand at one club doubled and West invariably leads the jack of hearts, which I duck. West leads another heart to East's king and East returns the nine of clubs.

I cover with the ten, which loses to the jack, and West cashes the A-K of clubs, drawing all my trumps. He then plays his last heart to East's ace and East cashes the nine, on which West discards his one and only spade.

East switches to the queen of diamonds, covered by the king and ace, and West returns a diamond to East's jack. East thereupon leads the jack of spades, which I cover with the queen, but West ruffs and wins the last three tricks with the 10-9-5 of diamonds.

So the result is that I never take a trick, going down 2,000 points, and things have now gotten to such a desperate state, healthwise, that I am beginning to seriously think that maybe I should give up playing five-card majors. Sorrowfully yours, Constant Reader.

The Staffer

Failure is quite a story

Being a feature writer is fantastic when it comes to meeting people, hearing idyllic stories and watching things others only read about or see on television.

But occasionally after writing about unbridled success, brilliant discoveries, and great hobbies I feel something's missing.

Somewhere in this porcelain world of mine, there must be someone who's a total failure. Someone who's tried everything and succeeded at nothing, a flop.

Finding someone who'll admit this is difficult. But, I was able to dig up a guy who must be the father of all failures.

He's Jim Dud's oldest boy, Fuddy. But that's the least of his problems.

He's not good looking. When he was born, the nurse then went to the waiting room and told his father: "Congratulations. We're virtually sure it's human."

Adding insult to injury, he had a brother who sweat cologne, whose hair grew naturally into the current style and whose skin had a natural tan.

As Fuddy got older, things deteriorated. He got a job in the mailroom of a major corporation and after 10 years rose to assistant clerk.

Things looked even brighter when he was promoted to head of the mailroom. But three days later, the firm got a government contract, instituted an affirmative action program and fired him in favor of a pregnant, homosexual, ethnic-surnamed woman of interracial parentage.

When I started to interview him, he told me , "I'd rather not talk about any of this. Isn't there someone more interesting you could talk to?"

I couldn't let it die that easily.

Come on, I said, what are your hobbies, your interests? You know, tell us about you.

"Okay, okay. Well, my favorite color is grey. My favorite musician is Hosefi Kufka . . ."

Who?

"Kufka, Kufka. He's third trumpet in Lawrence Welk's band," Dud said smiling through a chipped tooth. "Have you ever heard him do the second harmony for the Missouri River Polka . . ."

Yeah, yeah, I broke in. What do you do for relaxation?

"I sleep."

Dud's dog walked into the room, bit him on the leg and walked out again.

Don't some of these things depress you?

"I tried to kill myself once by shooting myself in the head, but just when I pulled the trigger I sneezed and missed. The bullet went through the front door and hit one of my neighbors in the knee. But I can't talk about it. It's still under litigation."

What are you doing for a living now since that unfortunate change in jobs.

"Right now I import bodies for medical schools."

Import bodies?

"Sure from Abrah, Saudi Arabia," he explained. "The company's called Abrah Cadavers, Inc."

He stood up to bid me goodbye and twisted his ankle.

I left the house, opening the screen door, which fell off the hinges, then walked to my car.

While walking I heard a massive crash from inside the house, then turned to see a puff of dust and smoke come from the front door. I didn't return to see what happened.

Readers disagree on trying marital bed

Dear Abby

By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You never gave worse advice than when you told that 20-year-old theology student to go ahead and get married without getting any premarital sexual experience. You said the mating instinct was natural, and he didn't need any lessons.

Well, mating and lovemaking are two different things. Any animal can mate, but lovemaking is an art that requires instruction and practice to perfect.

For a man to jump into the marriage bed without previous experience (assuming his bride is as innocent as he is), could result in disaster! It could ruin their marriage and their relationship.

It is a crime that you, with your old-fashioned moral values, are giving advice to millions.

MODERN MAN

DEAR MODERN: Call it "mating" or "lovemaking" or whatever you wish, it's the same act. A truly kind, loving, unselfish man does not need to be taught tenderness and consideration. That will come as naturally as the mating instinct. Almost every church has premarital counseling, and there are some excellent manuals on the subject.

Read on for another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for telling that young man that it wasn't necessary for him to rush out and get sexual experience before marrying.

When my wife and I were married, we were both virgins. Somehow we managed to learn together. We have been married for 22 years and have three children, and may I say that we have a fantastic sex life. There is something especially reassuring and sacred about our relationship, knowing that each has always been totally and exclusively committed to the other.

DUKE

And yet another:

DEAR ABBY: Talk about two dumb kids: My husband and I were about as inexperienced as two people could be. He was 20 and I was 17 when we married. That was 66 years ago, and now we can look back and smile, because we figured out exactly what had to be done and how to do it, and we may have invented a few new things, for all we know. And by the way, we may have slowed up a bit of late, but we haven't given up entirely.

A roll-away safe wasn't very safe

Calabasas, Calif. (UPI) — A roll-away safe is easier to move about, but that has its disadvantages, as Charles Cates discovered.

Thieves broke into Cates' house and rolled away his roll-away safe, containing $45,000 worth of antique jewelry and old coins, Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputies reported.

Fun, music mixed

Santiago, Chile (UPI) — An Argentine musical group named "Les Luthiers" caused a sensation in Chile recently. The group specializes in making music and fun simultaneously. It parodies classical and popular music and plays bizarre instruments of the musicians' own designs to sellout crowds in Santiago's Municipal Theater.

San Francisco — Here's To Your Health:
"Carriages without horses shall go,
"And accidents fill the world with woe . . ."

Mother Shipton said that. She was a prophetic, elderly woman who lived in 1641.

She'd have fit into our soothsaying community. In Marvelous Marin, CA. Home of gurus and hadjis. Witches who can make it thunder and turn milk sour in the pail.

We're all into analysis and bio-feedback. Into gestalt therapy and Werner Erhard's est. (cq)

So when the car wouldn't start this a.m., I didn't lose my cool. I called on my inner resources: ("That exists only as you wish it to exist.") I also called the AAA tow service.

☆ ☆ ☆

"The way to look at it is we grow every day," she said. "To be depressed by a piece of machinery is as if you thought it would last forever," she said.

"For instance, IF the car didn't start, eventually it would rust and disappear anyway."

"I never thought of it that way," I said. "What's the soup today?"

All the chicks who run the tables (where our sugar is unrefined) are way up on self-improvement. As a side order with the hamburger, we get instructions in things like the "primal scream."

☆ ☆ ☆

Hard to keep cool when cars don't start in the morning. (Somebody left the lights on.)

Cars are complicated now. I could start my last Model-T with a hairpin. By jacking up a back wheel before I spun the crank. By jiggling the needle valve on the carburetor.

It cost me $35. (Those were the days!) "It runs like a sewing machine," said the used car salesman.

It did, too. The Model-T had three foot pedals. Ahead. Reverse. Brake. You pumped on these exactly like my grandmother ran the Singer sewing machine.

Now I open the hood. All is mystery.

☆ ☆ ☆

"The soup is asparagus today," she said. "Very healthy."

In our Land of Oz we keep an eye on healthy food as well as on the psyche.

She said: "We must realize that disappointment can come from other sources. For instance, you may have low self-esteem. Unsatisfactory sexual functioning. Difficulty with interpersonal relationships and inability to relate intimately to others."

I had to admit, "That just about covers it. Except you forgot my bad back."

☆ ☆ ☆

The car is a Japanese bomber. Uses little gas. Runs like a top — except when somebody leaves the lights on all night. I have a short fuse when I've fastened the seat belts, step on the gas, turn the key and — nothing.

She said: "Have you tried Tai-Chi?" (That's Oriental dance exercise. Kind of funky chicken chow mein.)

I said: "I also take lecithin, cider vinegar, kelp and B-6 pills. Once in awhile a chaser of bee pollen. I eat fertile eggs and carob brownies."

☆ ☆ ☆

The primal scream is a good one. A Hollywood psych figured everybody has a scream inside that hasn't been expressed. His patients scream like banshees and feel better.

Around our house you could scream like an eagle. Nobody would hear you above wonderful Stevie Wonder on the stereo.

Tallest building in Cedar Rapids sold

Cedar Rapids, Iowa (UPI) — The I.E. Tower has a new owner.

The 21-story building has been sold by the Transamerica Investment Group of Tulsa, Okla., to Samuel Gary, an independent oil producer from Denver, Colo., officials announced.

The tower is Cedar Rapids' tallest building.

Iowa Electric Light and Power Co. is the building's primary tenant.

Young people can earn more without paying taxes

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — If your son or daughter has an after-school or summer job, it's going to be worth a lot more to him this year. The new tax law has increased the amount of money he can earn without paying income taxes. That's a saving not only for the youngster but for you, if you're counting on the child's income to help pay for college or contribute to expenses around the house.

A single person can now earn up to $3,200 without paying any federal income taxes. That's 25% more than he was allowed to earn tax-free just two years ago.

The new $2,200 standard deduction accounts for a good part of the increase. Another big saving is the general tax credit (just extended by Congress for another year). The remainder comes from the familiar $750 personal exemption.

If your child didn't pay income taxes last year and doesn't expect to this year, either, he can arrange not to have any tax money withheld from his paycheck. He does this by filing the tax-withholding form W-4E with his employer (rather than the usual form W-4). The employer may have this form himself; if not, you can get one from any Internal Revenue Service office.

It's well worth your time and trouble to get one of these forms. By eliminating withholding, it puts more money into your child's pocket right now. It also may save him the trouble of filing a tax return next April.

If a youngster makes $2,950 or less this year, he wouldn't normally have to file a tax return. However, if taxes were withheld from his paycheck, he'll have to file to get the refund.

If he makes more than $2,950, he has to file a tax return even if no taxes are due. But as long as the deductions and tax credits wipe out all his tax liability (as they will if his earnings were $3,200 or less), he's still eligible to avoid tax withholding through form W-4E.

Employers who hire young people might make a note about these forms and keep a stack on hand. It's something you can do to make your employees' take-home checks a little fatter without cost to yourself.

When young people are filing their own tax returns and taking their own personal exemptions, parents sometimes think they can no longer deduct those children on the family tax return. But that's not so. You can take a $750 deduction (plus a general tax credit) for every child under 19, or any child over 19 who is a full-time student, as long as you provide more than one-half of his or her support.

This holds true even if the child is working in your business and you're deducting his salary as a business expense. In that case, you'd get the business deduction plus the personal exemption on your own tax return; the child would get the personal exemption and standard deduction.

Longevity often its own reward for living full, active life

Life Begins At Forty

Not long ago the front page of our local paper carried the tragic story of an 82-year-old woman who was killed in the course of a mugging. Her assailant was captured quickly due to alert observation of several persons who were nearby at the time of the attack, which occurred too quickly for any effective intervention. The story had a picture with it, so it attracted much attention.

Some time later, as I read on through the paper, I came upon a little item on the bottom corner of an inside page. A 23-year-old male clerk in a sports shop had been murdered just at closing time. His name reported, along with the shop owner's comment that he had been a conscientious, honest worker. No one saw what happened; his friends discovered his body when they came to pick him up for dinner. His story got about two inches of space.

What does this tell us about the news values of that newspaper?

The old lady was a poignant victim, sure to excite feelings of anger and sadness on the part of many readers. The young man's untimely death was appraised by the news department as just another crime.

I was reminded of these two juxtaposed stories and my reaction to them when I read the following by Dr. Richard Kalish in the May issue of the Journal of Gerontology:

"Much of the popular media dealing with the elderly emphasizes what a terrible thing it is to be old. Their views parallel those of minority groups and women. I can't deny the efficacy of such propaganda in influencing political and economic decisions, but I often wonder what the effect is on the elderly person who is constantly confronted with a barrage of reading, television shows, and general discussion on the misfortunes of being old."

Christine R. Lyman put it a little differently: "Too often society has turned the aged themselves into a problem instead of using their wisdom to help solve our real dilemma. With its remorseless accent on youth, society forces people to become obsolete before their time. It forgets that people considered too old often have the youngest ideas of all."

She goes on to detail Frank Lloyd Wright's age when he designed the Guggenheim Museum (76), Grandma Moses' age when she painted "The Rainbow" (101) and Archibald MacLeish's present age (82), at which he has recently published "A Night Watch on Boston."

People of any age who can accept where they are in their lives and invest their energies in the here and now, don't waste time counting years, they are too busy living them. And aging brings with it the wealth of experience. Lyman, who graduated from college in 1929, views herself this way: "I am happy with my age. My perspective is broader than it was when I was younger and my prejudices are disappearing. I am more honest with myself. I am willing to accept things as they are."

Lower Loup opposes Carter water plan

Ord (UPI) — The Lower Loup Natural Resources District has decided to oppose Carter administration proposals on various water projects throughout the country.

The board Tuesday reviewed Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus' proposal to Carter on the status of various water projects.

The board said it felt the administration's proposals indicated "a tendency by the federal government to become more involved in ground and surface water regulation," said NRD Manager Dick Beran.

The board directed Beran to write a letter to the Nebraska congressional delegation opposing Carter administration views.

"The federal government should not get involved with the proposals for regulating ground water or surface water. This is purely a state matter and should be left in the hands of the states or other local subdivisions," Beran said.

The House, ignoring Carter's wishes, Tuesday rejected a move to slash 16 water projects from the public works appropriation measure. The appropriation bill now goes to the Senate.

2nd Niobrara area favored

Omaha (AP) — The Save the Niobrara River Association favors preserving a stretch of the river in its natural state but does not agree with the federal government on the proposed stretch.

The group said Tuesday it hopes to convince the Carter administration to protect the river in the area of the proposed Norden Dam, not just to the west.

Wayne Smithberg of Omaha, spokesman for the organization, said "the most scenic and wild part of the river" is east of Valentine.

The Carter administration recommended last month that a 120-mile stretch from the river's junction with Antelope Creek to the Sparks gauging station be studied for possible inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Rivers in that system are protected from development. Nebraska at present has no stretch of protected river.

Smithberg said the association will check with the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to see why the 120-mile stretch was chosen.

He said members hope to take federal officials down the river by canoe to convince them they have not recommended the best stretch.

The association re-elected Wes Sandall as president and Mrs. Elsie Leonard secretary at its annual meeting. Both are from the Bassett area.

Infant's death not a drowning

Omaha (AP) — Acting Douglas County Coroner James Keenan said Tuesday he had changed the cause of death of 22-month-old Ryan Lenz to sudden death syndrome.

Before he consulted with physicians, Keenan ruled the death Friday evening was a bathtub drowning. The infant was a child of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Lenz, Omaha.

Vets Hospital gets improvements

Grand Island (UPI) — A $1.5 million construction project has been approved for the Veterans Administration Hospital in Grand Island, said Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb.

The project will provide emergency generators for the hospital and correct various electrical deficiencies.

The design work should begin this fall and a construction contract will be awarded in August 1978, she said.

Doctor's blood test can't be evidence

Results of a blood test ordered by a doctor cannot be used later by police to determine whether a driver was intoxicated, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday.

In a 4-3 decision, the high court upheld a Morrill County District Court ruling on a civil case between John Wilkinson and Dolores Branch, the wife of a man killed in a one-car accident while a passenger in Wilkinson's car.

Mrs. Branch had sued Wilkinson for damages, charging him with negligence, including intoxication and speeding. But the district court had not allowed evidence of a blood test taken after the accident, while Wilkinson was unconscious, because the test was not ordered by law enforcement officials. The diagnostic test was ordered by a doctor treating Wilkinson, and only later became available to authorities.

The lower court said the blood test was privileged under the doctor-patient relationship, and the high court agreed.

The high court said the implied consent statutes, which require a driver to submit to an alcohol test requested by law enforcement officials, applies only in criminal cases and only when the driver has been arrested. This was a civil case and Wilkinson was never under arrest, the court noted.

The blood test showed he had .011% alcohol in his blood, below the state limit of .10%. Mrs. Branch had sought to include any evidence of alcohol consumption by Wilkinson, to bolster her charge of negligence against him.

In discussing the issue of speeding, the majority opinion, written by Chief Justic Paul White, said the facts of the case did not support a claim of gross negligence.

The car was traveling on a relatively straight portion of U.S. Highway 26 east of Bridgeport when it went off the road. It traveled 468 feet on the unpaved shoulder, returned to the highway, crossed the center line and struck a bridge abutment on the other side. The car then went 69 feet in the air, hit the ground, traveled 36 feet, flew or rolled another 31 feet, and finally came to a rest. The car was demolished.

In his dissent, Justice Thomas White said a jury could easily find negligence on the part of Wilkinson for speeding, not watching the road and not having the car under control. Justices Hale McCowan and L.M. Clinton agreed.

White also said the issue of the blood test was not properly submitted and should not have been ruled upon by the high court.

'Disorderly conduct law is too vague'

Rushville (UPI) — Sheridan County Associate Judge Frank Hutfless has ruled that the state law for disorderly conduct is unconstitutional, contending the law is vague in defining a criminal offense.

Dennis King, the deputy Sheridan County attorney, said Hutfless's ruling means that people facing a disorderly conduct charge in Sheridan County "can beat it because this judge has made this decision."

King contended the law "is clear and constitutional on its face."

Hutfless's ruling, made Monday and released Wednesday, came in the case of Francine Charging Thunder, who had been charged in connection with a disturbance at a Gordon tavern. Her case was dismissed.

In his ruling, Hutfless questioned "whether the statute (28-823) sets forth standards in a manner such that the average, intelligent person will be able to understand which of his or her actions might result in punishment."

The statute defines disorderly conduct as that intending to cause public inconvenience, an annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk, and Hutfless criticized the use of public inconvenience, annoyance and alarm.

"There are plenty of specific statutes to cover most of the crimes," he said, "and 28-823 is a catchall for those who are not prosecuted under those (other) specific statutes."

He described the law as a "convenient plea bargain device." When asked if he felt the law had been misused by prosecutors, he declined comment.

Beef checkoff 'winning support'

Omaha (AP) — Despite opponents' claims that the proposed national beef promotion checkoff program would be a waste of money, officials of Nebraska livestock groups say there is wide support for the program.

Nebraska Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher said while his department is not involved with the program and has not taken any position on it, he has found considerable support throughout the state for the checkoff. Kreuscher said he believes the program will pass in Nebraska.

Registration for the checkoff vote continues through Friday and the election is scheduled July 5-15. The Nebraska Beef Development Task Force said that as of Tuesday about 9,000 Nebraska cattlemen had registered to vote in the referendum.

Proponents say the checkoff will provide about $30 to $40 million increased funds for beef research, consumer education and promotion to counteract what they say is misinformation about their product.

"We see today a great deal of inaccurate propaganda that . . . tends to reflect adversely on meat," said Don Magdanz of the Omaha-based National Livestock Feeders Association (NLFA). "Much of it simply is not true."

Magdanz said existing cattlemen's groups don't have the funds for such promotion and research.

"None of us have the money," Magdanz said. "We're supported by membership dues. We frankly don't have the money."

The Feeders Association's 12,000 members have voted favorably on the proposed checkoff program on several occasions, he said.

Mickey Stewart said members of the Nebraska Stock Growers Association are very much in favor of the program and have been "working their hearts out" for its passage.

Stewart said many of the opponents base their opposition on misinformation and some view it as "just another tax."

And, Stewart said the funds are needed for more beef research not to "advertise our way out of trouble," but to develop foreign markets and provide accurate information on the product and what consumers want.

"We've got so much pressure for our product from supposed nutritionists and supposed consumer activists, who are just lashing out with total misinformation," he said. "We've got to finance it ourselves so we can work to maintain the integrity of our product."

South Omahans fuming over manure plant odor

Omaha (UPI) — City officials pledged Wednesday to make an attempt to sweeten the smell coming from the South Omaha Paunch manure plant.

Officials said odors from the packing house waste treatment facility have worsened in recent days because of work being done there and complaints have flowed into city hall.

Douglas County Board Chairman George Buglewicz, who lives three blocks from the plant, said he had to get up and to close his windows at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday because the smell was so bad.

Buglewicz subsequently asked Gov. J. James Exon to intervene.

In a letter to the governor, Buglewicz said South Omahans were sick and tired of empty promises from the city to correct the problem.

Buglewicz said the governor should "take a personal interest in forcing the city to solve the problems or close the plant down." The commissioner said some residents were considering a lawsuit.

Sewer Maintenance Engineer James Belina said experiments were being conducted with various fogging agents to mask the odor.

"They come in various flavors," Belina said. "I probably smell like a lemon orchard right now."

Rep. Smith blames Feds for greater rural burden

United Press International

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., Wednesday said low farm prices, combined with increasing government regulation and inflation, are at the root of rural America's economic problems.

Increased government regulation and inflation are caused by excessive federal spending, Mrs. Smith added.

In a telephone release from her Washington office, Mrs. Smith said she testified before a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee and outlined several problems facing rural America.

"The policies of the federal government impact very heavily on the people of my district," Mrs. Smith said. "Unfortunately, these policies usually bring some economic hardship to one segment or another of the population."

Wheat levy rises as marketing budget is increased

United Press International

The Nebraska Wheat Advisory Committee Wednesday said it has adopted a budget of $303,000 for wheat market development and research during the coming year.

The committee said a check-off levy of four mills, or four-tenths of one cent, per bushel would be required to fund the program.

The rate, which goes into effect Oct. 1, replaces the 2.5 mill levy in effect since the grower-financed program of foreign marketing, research and promotion began in 1955.

"We have a heavy surplus of wheat again in this country that must be relieved by expanding overseas markets," said committee chairman Ray Davis of Potter.

He said the budget includes an increase of 11% in Nebraska's share of funding the market development activities of two organizations with representatives in Europe, South America, the Middle East, Africa and throughout Asia.

County throws out budget 'timesaver'

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

County commissioners decided Wednesday that they can save time in this year's budget review process by eliminating a step that was designed to save time.

The commissioners had planned to sit down for several working sessions to study various budget requests before scheduling hearings with department and agency heads.

This preliminary review, it was felt, would give commissioners a better handle on the impact of each budget request, and help them decide what questions to put to the administrators during the actual hearings.

Administrators would know in advance what questions they would be asked, would be better prepared and the hearings would go faster.

Wednesday the commissioners started pouring over the budget documents, beginning with the county attorney's office.

The county attorney's request shows an increase of $200,000 over last year, largely because of added personnel and promotions.

Commissioners wanted to know why.

"Let's get (County Atty. Ron) Lahners up here and ask him," said Commissioner Bob Colin.

Administrative assistant Wayne Hart explained that review without the department heads present had been agreed upon.

"We could save more time by having the heads here," Colin said.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton agreed. "I don't want to put a lot of time into it just to put in time," he said, noting that after looking at 20 budgets the commissioners would forget what they wanted to ask about them.

So all three commissioners agreed to let Hart examine the budgets and prepare his own list of questions for department heads, then schedule reviews with the administrators present.

"Then he (Hart) will get the criticism," said Commissioner Jan Gauger.

"That's O.K., let him get the flack," said Colin.

County budget hearings will begin Wednesday, June 22. Joint city-county budgets will be reviewed Friday, June 17, by the City-County Common.

Artist Sachio will design building mural.

Rainbow-colored mural is Neligh town project

Neligh (AP) — Sachio Yamashita is bringing his rainbow to town.

The Japanese artist, 44, is well-known in the Chicago area for his bright, rainbow-hued wall paintings. He is in Neligh to work on a mural being painted on the Rice building.

Sachio, which he prefers to his last name, came to the U.S. in 1968 from Japan to cover the Democratic National Convention in Chicago as a newspaper cartoonist. He decided to stay after being invited to become an artist in residence at Prairie State College in Chicago Heights.

It was in 1970 that his first project in rainbow colors came into being. He painted a three-block long stretch of lower Michigan Avenue in horizontal stripes.

Other projects include "Running Horses," on a two-story stable, and "Moving Trucks," which is literally art in motion, rainbows on the sides of three of the Wells Trucking Co. semi-trailers.

He started his "One Thousand Water Towers" project in 1971. This is an effort to brighten the city's skyline by painting industrial water towers in his trademark rainbow colors.

So far, 16 have been painted, but Sachio sees it as only 984 to go.

Altogether, Sachio has done about 70 projects since coming to the U.S. Not all are located out-of-doors, he has painted indoor murals in homes and business establishments.

He also paints conventionally, on canvas, and has had many one-man shows.

Sachio was brought to Neligh through the efforts of Leslie Seeche, formerly a VISTA volunteer working in the area. Ms. Seeche, who now lives in Lincoln, was familiar with Sachio's work and proposed that the Neligh Arts Council sponsor him in an outdoor art project, similar to one that she had seen in a Chicago shopping center.

After determining that a grant could be obtained from the Nebraska Arts Council, on condition that the funds be matched, the council agreed to head the project. Sachio met with members of the Community during a three-day visit last month to lay the groundwork.

Two coats of white paint have been applied to prepare the Rice building for the mural, which will have an agricultural, or plains life theme. It will be drawn onto graph paper, a grid will be chalked onto the sides of the building, and the design then will be transferred to the walls.

Sachio probably will not do a lot of the actual painting. Children and adults from the community will do the painting under Sachio's direction.

Sachio uses ordinary oil-based house paints, selecting them by their brightness of color. He generally uses seven colors — red, orange, yellow, green, light blue, blue and purple — the colors of the rainbow and the prism.

He likes them for the cheerfulness.

"No one can be angry at a rainbow," he says.

Sachio will spend two to three weeks in Neligh.

He said he agreed to come to Nebraska because he had never been here and because he was raised in a farming community in Japan and still has a reverence for the farm.

Spouse abuse hearings' topic

United Press International

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln said Wednesday there apparently are many cases of spouse abuse and he would like to have all members of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee participate in interim hearings on the matter.

Barnett, chairman of the committee, and four other members met to organize the unit's activities this summer and fall.

Meetings on spouse abuse, Barnett indicated, will be scheduled in Omaha, Lincoln, central and western Nebraska, probably in conjunction with hearings on the criminal code.

He said he hopes committee members will attend "at least some of the meetings" on the revised code, which was enacted into law this year over the governor's veto.

"We will try to go through the entire code and see what amendments are needed," he said. The legislation is not scheduled to go into effect until July 1, 1978, and its implementation date may be postponed until Jan. 1, 1979.

Gambling and sexual assault statutes, as well as a proposal for fixed, rather than indeterminate prison sentences, will be considered as part of the code hearings, Barnett said.

Regional meetings will be announced to permit anyone interested to attend, and Barnett said he hopes the judicial branch will be among those providing reactions.

Sen. Pat Venditte of Omaha was appointed chairman of a subcommittee that will investigate marijuana abuses; Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers will head the investigation into civil statutes dealing with the statue of limitations, and Fremont Sen. Barry Reutzel will be in charge of a study of probation systems.

Studies on the need for intermediate juvenile corrections facilities and the rewriting of juvenile laws will be under the direction of Sens. Cal Carsten of Avoca and William Nichol of Scottsbluff.

House blown away after family fled

Bayard (AP) — Fifteen-year-old David Ericson insisted that his mother and sister flee for cover when a tornado touched down near their ranch Tuesday night. Ten minutes later, their home was flattened.

"It was due to my son. He was insistent that we leave. He just took off and got the car out," said Mrs. Lowell Ericson.

Their ranch house, 3½ miles west of Bayard, "was crumbled. Nothing was left. The barn, fences and trees were torn down.

We had a piano, TV and stereo and none is in sight. Insurance won't even cover it, because there was too much lost," said Mrs. Ericson.

"But then, earthly possessions just don't seem all that important right now."

The family heard a television report that a tornado had touched down at Minatare. "That's when we thought we had better get out," said Mrs. Ericson, who was at home with David and his sister, Ellen, 17, while their father was in the hospital.

"It's a total loss. Cattle are lost. Only a bathroom wall is standing and there's no furniture in sight. The nearest furniture we could see was one-half mile away," Mrs. Ericson said.

"As we drove to Bayard, we heard the tornado touched down 4½ miles west of town. We live only 3½ miles. That was when we stepped on the gas."

The Ericsons drove to a relative's house. Several hours later, Mrs. Ericson returned to the ranch, and, even though downed power lines kept her at a distance, saw that little remained.

Nemec retires early

New Orleans (AP) — Frank A. Nemec has resigned as president of Lykes Corp. to take early retirement, the company announced.

Drug cases prosecutor cited for success rate

Omaha (UPI) — A federal prosecutor Wednesday received a certificate of appreciation from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration for his success in obtaining convictions in drug cases.

Larry Orton, Assistant regional director from Kansas City, Mo., presented the award to Thomas D. Thalken, an assistant U.S. attorney since 1971.

Thalken, 34, was cited for his handling of major narcotics cases, including that of Ike "Papa Rock" Conway, former head of a multi-million dollar North Omaha heroin ring who turned government informant.

Thalken used Conway's testimony to obtain jury convictions in a heroin conspiracy case against former Omaha Police Department vice and narcotics officer Leonard Smith, two heroin dealers and their financial backer.

Smith and the two heroin dealers have appealed.

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — "Hull's Half Acher" is what Dr. Walter L. Hull calls his farm south of town. If it ever hosts a full family get-together, he'll also call it a dental convention.

Dentistry recently gained a third-generation double entry as two of Doc's grandchildren, William Walter and Mary Hull Lea, received University of Nebraska diplomas. The brother became a full-fledged D.D.S., his sister a dental hygienist.

Though the brother-sister act was recognized as a College of Dentistry first, the Hulls well know about a previous brother-brother combination.

The May 14 commencement in fact marked a 25th anniversary for the new grads' father, Dr. Darrell Hull of Fairbury, and his brother, Dr. William L., now of Loveland, Colo. Their 1952 graduation also had been without precedent.

"Until my generation, this was a family of preachers and undertakers," said Dr. Walter, an Edgar native whose father was a Methodist minister. "Now it's full of dentists, even to the in-laws and their in-laws."

Close behind Walter, who was graduated from Creighton in 1919, was brother Roy, now practicing in Scottsbluff following a short stint at Morrill. Walter practiced briefly at Polk before putting in 12 years at Edgar and 26 at Fairbury.

There had been hope that young Bill might join his father in a Fairbury clinic, where Walter also practiced until a hand ailment forced his 1960 retirement. But Bill decided instead to go to North Platte.

Mary probably will work in Lincoln, though that depends upon what materializes for her husband, Chad Lea. Though he's a long pull from dentistry, he also shared in the multi-graduation, receiving a master's degree in architecture.

And there are two other dentists among relatives of Walter L. Hull. Dr. William Upton of Superior and Dr. Robert Hull of Glenn Springs, Colo., are sons of cousins of the elder Dr. Hull.

Omaha man killed in Kansas

Wilson, Kan. (UPI) — An Omaha, Neb., man was killed early Wednesday in a one-car crash on Kansas 232 west of the Wilson Reservoir.

The victim, Allan Torrey, 47, was a passenger in the car which ran off a curve of the highway nine miles north of Wilson, hit a guard post and rolled over.

Two other occupants of the car were taken to a hospital in Ellsworth for observation.

Appeal to be made for Aurora center

Aurora (UPI) — A Bremer Community Center Inc. spokesman said a Tuesday night city council decision denying the center a permit to build a residential community facility would be appealed to the Hamilton County Board of Adjustment.

Center secretary Larry Carstenson, Aurora, said Mrs. Bertha Bremer, widow of newspaper publisher Gerald Bremer, stipulated in her will that a large amount of money be used to build a community center in Aurora.

Assets now are an estimated $350,000, Carstenson said, and an anonymous donor also has given $250,000 bringing the total to about $600,000.

"We are assuming the council is convinced the center would not fit in a residential area," Carstenson said. "It's our idea we want it in a residential area because its surroundings would enhance this structure rather than if it were stuck in a commercial or industrial section."

The proposed site was donated by Aurora businessman Ken Wortman. Carstenson said a major problem was that no comparable site has been offered for the center.

Apparent heart attack following fight kills man

Seward (UPI) — The Death of a Beaver Crossing man following a minor fight resulted from natural causes, Seward County Attorney Randy Stoll said Wednesday.

An autopsy on the body of Richard Wambold, a fur buyer in his early 40s, showed he died of a heart attack, Stoll said.

"It doesn't appear there will be a basis for any criminal charges," he said.

Stoll said he only had an oral report on the autopsy, and would wait until he received a written report before making a final decision.

Wambold died Monday night en route to a hospital after complaining of chest pains at his home.

A few hours earlier, authorities said he had been involved in a scuffle at a tavern. Authorities said the fight occurred at a tavern in Cordova instead of in Beaver Crossing as originally reported.

Ball will be rolling in downtown Lincoln

The wrecking ball will be flying again in the Centrum Block within the next few weeks. All the remaining buildings are to be flattened by Sept. 1.

The south half of the block, bounded by 11th, 12th, N and O Sts., was cleared last summer and this spring. In the first part of September work is to begin there on construction of a 1,000-stall parking garage.

The apparent low bid of $68,755 for demolition of the remaining buildings on the north half of the block was submitted Wednesday by the Anderson Excavating and Wrecking Co.

After demolition of those buildings, a retail facility is to be built on the north half. At this point city officials are favoring a proposal by Watson Centers, Inc. of Minneapolis, Minn.

Other bids submitted for demolition of the buildings were Tobler Excavating, $76,320; Whittmann Excavating, $82,326; Ark Wrecking of Tulsa, $89,105, and Ideus Construction $103,998.

Disclosure unit seeks director

Associated Press

Three members of the new Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission Wednesday finalized matters leading to advertising for an executive director and establishing a mailing address.

Chairman Mimi Waldbaum and member Jim Davis, both of Omaha, met informally with Secretary of State Allen Beermann in Beermann's office to iron out details in preparation for the next commission meeting June 29.

Beermann said Roy Gardner, state personnel director, had been authorized to advertise regionally to find candidates for the position of executive director for the commission. The post will pay $18,000 annually, according to statute.

Minimum qualifications listed on a draft copy of a Personnel Department memo on the position included a bachelor's degree in business administration or a related field, plus four years work with administrative or supervisory experience.

The mailing address was listed as:

Post Office Box 95086, Nebraska State Office Building station, Lincoln, Neb., 68509.

The commission members present also discussed whether offices would be located in the Capitol building on the 10th floor or in the new state office building, leaving any decision until later.

As commission chairman, Mrs. Waldbaum ordered that purchases of office supplies and equipment be inexpensive to help stretch the $120,000 budget set by legislation.

The commission was established to oversee and administer the so-called "sunshine" law on government accountability, which deals with campaign financing, lobbying and conflicts of interest.

Dodge Co. Register of Deeds office emptied by job dispute

Fremont (AP) — The Dodge County Register of Deeds office was left empty for about an hour Wednesday after the deputy register of deeds and the only other employe walked off their jobs.

Deputy Register of Deeds Zelma Panning earlier threatened to resign if she was not named to replace Register of Deeds Howard Johnson, who resigned last month.

The County Board of Supervisors Wednesday appointed Postmaster Jack Petrow to the post. Miss Panning resigned and Bernice Borg, the only other employe in the office, left her job at the same time.

The County Board, meeting in emergency session, appointed Carol Givens, a former employe in the office, as interim deputy register of deeds.

Criticism mystifies Gasohol members

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Members of the state Gasohol Committee agreed Wednesday they need to present a "united front" and work harder to tell Nebraskans about their motor fuel program.

Committee members voiced concern that there was a lot of misinformation being spread about the committee's efforts. Jack Quackenbush of Beatrice even called some of the anti-gasohol activities "a very active, vicious attack."

The panel, actually named the Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, also said they were mystified over recent comments made by Gov. J. James Exon questioning some of the committee members' objectivity.

Ronald Kelly of Alliance said the committee has been charged by the Legislature to work with private industry to build a grain alcohol plant in Nebraska. Gasohol, a mixture of nine parts gasoline to one part grain alcohol, would be used as a motor fuel.

Kelly claimed the committee is following the Legislature's directives and shouldn't be unduly criticized.

Committee member Paul Meierhenry of Norfolk blasted a recent report published by a University of Nebraska professor on gasohol.

Agriculture Economics professor James Kendrick said it would require considerable public subsidy to finance the production of the fuel and predicted a yearly loss at $8.8 million.

Meierhenry said Kendrick is "not really an expert in the field" and said the figure Kendrick used to calculate the annual loss failed to represent an adequate cost comparison.

It was "a gross distortion of fact," he argued.

Another NU professor, Dr. William Scheller, said Kendrick's report indicates "he's simply misinformed."

Scheller, a professor of chemical engineering, also is a technical adviser to the committee and has come under some criticism as a result. Scheller said he didn't think he had a conflict of interest because he also is involved in a private firm which is working on trying to build a grain alcohol plant. The firm is the Nebraska Grain Alcohol and Chemical Co.

"I want it known that it has been almost a year since I have been in the governor's office," Scheller said, noting he was turned down when he recently sought a meeting with Exon.

5 held for robbing hitchhiker

Hastings (UPI) — A 23-year-old Iowa man hitchhiking through Nebraska Wednesday was robbed at knife-point by five persons in a convertible with Ohio license plates, authorities said.

A spokesman for the Hamilton County sheriff's office would not identify the Iowa man or the five alleged robbers, who were taken into custody Wednesday for questioning.

The spokesman only said the incident occurred on a county road one mile south and one mile east of the Interstate 80 interchange at Aurora.

2. Independent owners did the comparing.
63% of those who tested a Ford LTD and a Chevy Impala chose the LTD.
In a recent independent test 50 Ford and 50 Chevy owners selected at random in the Los Angeles area rated both Ford LTD and Impala for:
- Overall styling
- Interior and exterior features
- Roominess
- Trunk space
- Parking
- Driving under city, freeway and residential conditions

There were 55 separate tests in total. At the conclusion of these tests, all were asked if they had to choose, which of these cars they would be more likely to buy. The answer? 63% or nearly two out of three chose a Ford LTD.

So if you're in the habit of buying an Impala without comparing, kick the habit and compare. Because this year there are surprising differences between Ford LTD and Impala.

Omaha — Randy Martz, South Carolina's 6-4, 210-pound all-American fastball pitcher, thinks of himself as a determined boxer with endurance.

He expects to get beat up, but he also figures to outlast the one throwing the punches.

Well, Southern Illinois jabbed the Chicago Cubs' first round draft choice around plenty in the College World Series battle of unbeatens before 9,022 at Rosenblatt Stadium here Wednesday night.

But Martz, fighting soreness, fatigue and two Saluki home runs, hung on for a 5-4 victory to move his season record to 14-0 and advance the Gamecocks into their second CWS championship round in three years.

"Four runs is the most I've given up in my life," Martz said afterwards. "Those two homers shocked me. But I knew I could come back. Being a fastball pitcher, I'm used to getting roped around the park one minute, then making batters look silly the next minute.

"I'm not a pretty pitcher at all," he admitted. "I'm too inexperienced and too nice to the batter. I may give up 11 hits and still go the distance. I thrive on pressure and battling back.

"I'm just throwing the way I know how now," he added. "Later on, I'm going to learn how to pitch."

Martz isn't kidding about his inexperience. He didn't even play baseball at South Carolina his first two years there. He was too busy trying to become the Gamecocks quarterback in football.

In high school, his pitching record was a mediocre 12-8. Martz earned more attention from pro scouts as a first baseman, hitting .350.

"Martz is going to give up a lot of hits because he's a power pitcher," South Carolina coach June Raines said after his team bunched its five runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

"But one thing about Randy Martz — he'll keep coming at you until the job gets done," Raines said. "That's why you have a tendency to leave him in when you wouldn't think of leaving someone else in the game."

Martz showed his endurance last Friday, pitching South Carolina to a 3-2, 10-inning win over Baylor. His regular season earned-run-average was 1.80.

Jim Reeves gave Southern Illinois a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth with a 370-foot solo homer over the left centerfield fence.

Rick Murray, the Salukis' No. 6 hitter, also leaned into a Martz fastball for a solo shot in virtually the same spot to lead off the seventh.

That gave Southern Illinois a 3-2 cushion and Neil Fiala expanded it to 4-2 with a successful squeeze bunt down the first base line to score Jim Robinson, who had singled.

Don Repsher's run-scoring triple and Bart Murphy's run-scoring double had pulled the Gamecocks into a 2-2 tie in the top of the seventh.

Disaster continued to plague SIU pitching in the eighth when the Gamecocks sent eight batters to the plate for three more runs.

Mark Van Bever, Mookie Wilson and Chuck McLean — South Carolina's Nos. 1, 2 and 3 hitters and the first three to the plate in the eighth — each singled and eventually scored, thanks subsequently to a pair of walks, a pair of fielder's choices and a sacrifice fly by Steve King.

SIU coach Itchy Jones said "Rick Keeton pitched six good innings for us, but he couldn't get his breaking pitch over in the end. I guess he just ran out of gas and we didn't get the help out of the bullpen (from Kevin Waldrop or Jim Kessler)."

Regardless of the outcome of Thursday night's games, South Carolina is assured of playing in Friday's national championship game since the Gamecocks are the only unbeaten team remaining in the tournament.

South Carolina lost, 5-1, to Texas in the 1975 national championship game. Southern Illinois has finished second twice in the CWS (in 1968 and '71), but has never won the championship.

"There are three teams left in the same boat as we are," Jones noted, "so we're not dead yet."

Kingman goes to SD Padres

San Diego (AP) — The New York Mets, completing their second blockbuster deal within hours, will send dissident slugger Dave Kingman to the San Diego Padres for utility infielder Bobby Valentine and left-handed pitcher Paul Siebert, a source close to the deal said Wednesday night.

After the Mets dealt star pitcher Tom Seaver to Cincinnati hours before the passing of the trade deadline, General Manager Joe McDonald told The Associated Press that more deals were in the works.

"We've already made the deals," he said by telephone from the apartment of Mets Board Chairman M. Donald Grant. "We're just holding up so that the players will learn it first."

But at least one of those deals involved Kingman, the 28-year-old powerhouse purchased from the San Francisco on Feb. 28, 1975, the source said.

Kingman insisted during spring training on renegotiating his contract with the Mets. When the National League baseball team's management refused to rewrite the pact, Kingman decided to play out the option year of his contract and become a free agent.

Eastwick to Cards

Cincinnati (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Wednesday night they have traded right-handed relief ace Rawly Eastwick to the St. Louis Cardinals for minor league pitcher Doug Capilla.

Jack, Tom Open picks, but hungry horde lurking

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, with a slightly sprained right ankle, and Tom Watson, with the best record in golf, are solidly entrenched as the men to beat in the 77th U.S. Open Championship.

Although neither really needs an added incentive in the physically and mentally exhausting test that makes up the most prestigious of all the game's tournaments, each has at least one.

For the courageous Watson, a Tom Sawyer who grew up to become the Masters champions, there's the opportunity to extend his chances for the unaccomplished Grand Slam of golf.

For Nicklaus, the greatest player the game has produced, there's the opportunity to acquire a record-matching fourth national championship, extend still further his unequalled domination of the Big Four events and—again—reassert himself as golf's No. 1 performer.

Should either falter in the strength-sapping, 100-degree heat forecast for Thursday's start of this 72-hole chase, there's an impatient, jostling horde of the world's finest shotmakers eagerly awaiting the tiniest chance, willing and able to take the longest gamble to acquire the crown for their own.

They come in assorted sizes and shapes and ages, each fired by his own special and distinct need for the title that confers instant star quality to the man who owns it.

There's Jerry Pate, who was transported from the comfortable anonymity of a non-winning rookie to the hectic status of international celebrity with his come-from-behind triumph in the Open last year. He seeks to become the first man since Ben Hogan in 1951 to successfully defend his Open championship.

"I didn't feel it. For the first time there was no pain. I wasn't even aware of it until somebody mentioned it to me," Pate said Wednesday on the practice tee at the 6,873-yard, par 70 Southern Hills Country Club course.

He was referring to a pinched nerve in his neck that has sidelined him most of the year and allowed him only one tournament in the weeks since the Masters.

There's Tom Weiskopf, a winner two weeks ago who gives every indication he's again the Tom Terrific who scored such spectacular successes a couple of seasons back.

"I'm playing very well right now, very well," said that deeply talented man who climb to greatness has encountered the boulder-sized obstacle of his own temperament.

There's doughty little Gary Player, twice a runner-up this season, who wants so desperately to acquire a second American national championship and thus complete a twice-around sweep of the Big Four titles.

"I am playing, from tee to green, the best golf of my life," said the diminutive globe-trotter with the perpetual Pollyanna attitude.

There's the challenging Australia duo, David Graham tournaments and the Heritage Classic.

Gals invade world of weightlifting

Madison, Wis. (AP) — In the weight room of the University of Wisconsin stadium, the lifters grunt and strain through the squats, arm curls, bench press, clean and jerk and dead lift.

But when most of the sweaty musclemen hit the showers, a few head the other direction.

Toward the women's locker room.

"The more muscular I get, the happier I am," says Pam Jacobsen, 20, a junior majoring in psychology. "It's really changed me. And I don't feel that I'm any less feminine."

Jeff Everson, the manager of the weight room, says more and more women are becoming lifters and body builders.

"It's really become a popular thing across the country for women to get involved in weightlifting," he says. "It's not something that should be just for the man."

He says most of the women who use the Wisconsin weight facilities say they feel better, have quicker reflexes and are stronger.

Some of the women, like senior high jumper Denise Laitsch, began weight training to better their track performances.

"I wasn't worried about losing my femininity," she says. "In fact, I think it enhances it, if anything, because it tones up your muscles."

Everson, who trains about half a dozen women lifters regularly, emphasizes that hormone differences allow women to work out hard without losing their natural curves or sprouting huge man-size muscles.

But not everybody appreciates her weightlifting.

"My parents aren't too thrilled about it," she says. "They don't like me doing it at all. They've always promoted me in sports, but they think the reason I'm a large woman is because of the weights. But if I didn't lift I would just be a big fat slob."

For the record, any of the male lifters around the weight room and most any guy on campus, for that matter, would agree that Lori Wasserburger is definitely not a big fat slob.

She claims attitudes toward women weightlifters are changing.

"More and more women are getting interested in the weights," she says. "Before, people would call you an amazon or other things. But things have changed. I think it looks nice to be muscular."

Seaver traded to Reds for Zachry, 3 others

Cincinnati (AP) — Star pitcher Tom Seaver, dubbed "The Franchise" for his 10 years of premium performance, was traded by the New York Mets to the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night, the clubs announced jointly.

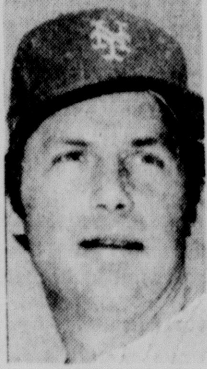
The Reds, two-time defending world champions, will be giving up four players to get Seaver, regarded the best in his craft in the past decade. The new Mets will be pitcher Pat Zachry, infielder Doug Flynn and top minor league prospect Steve Henderson, an outfielder.

The Associated Press also learned that a fourth player would be included in the deal, but it is not known who he is or whether he is a major or minor leaguer.

The Reds announced a major news conference for after their Wednesday night game against Philadelphia to announce the trade. The Mets were expected to do the same.

Zachry, co-rookie of the year last season with pitcher Butch Metzger, has been stumbling in his sophomore season. The 25-year-old right-hander has compiled a 3-7 record and a 5.04 earned run average.

In 1976, he helped the Reds get into the World Series against the New York Yankees by posting a 14-7 mark and an ERA of 2.74. Zachry won a playoff game against the Phillies and was 1-0 in the World Series.



Seaver

Zachry

Besides leaving the Reds, Wednesday was a big day for the 25-year-old Zachry because he took out a marriage license. He plans to marry on June 23.

Flynn, 26, is a versatile infielder, who was hard-pressed to crack the all-star infield in Cincinnati. He has spelled second baseman Joe Morgan, third baseman Pete Rose and shortstop Dave Concepcion. He considers shortstop his best position.

In his third year in the majors, Flynn was batting .250 going into Wednesday night's game. In 32 at-bats, he has knocked in five runs but has yet to hit a home run.

Last season, he hit .283 in 219 at-bats.

NU hires Cyclones' Harshman

Dave Harshman, the No. 1 assistant basketball coach at Iowa State, is joining Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano's staff. Harshman replaces Lonnie Parter, who resigned to become the head coach at St. Regis College in Denver.

Harshman, 28, was at Iowa State one season after two successful years as the head coach at Spokane Falls (Wash.) Community College where he posted a 39-18 record.

A 1970 graduate of Washington State University, Harshman was three-year baseball letterman in addition to lettering on the Cougar basketball squad. He was an all-Pac 8 baseball selection in 1969.

Dave is the son of University of Washington head basketball coach Marv Harshman. Cipriano starred for the Seattle school as a three-year starter in the early '50s.

A native of Pullman, Wash., the new Nebraska assistant earned all-American mention as a prep basketball player.

Academic upgrading one answer

Atlanta (UPI) — Fred Davison, chairman of the newly-formed college football association, said Wednesday if colleges could agree on adequate academic standards that many of the other problems facing bigtime football would fall into place.

"Solution of academic problems will, of course, create some other problems," said Davison, also president of the University of Georgia.

"We'll create some problems as we solve others, but the feeling is that as the big problems fall by the wayside, the smaller ones will start taking care of themselves."

Sixty of the top college football powers were here Wednesday and Thursday for the organizational meeting of the CFA, founded earlier this year after many schools expressed displeasure with the economy trends taken within the NCAA.

"We plan to work within the NCAA and, at this time, there is no move to form a seperate organization," Davison said.

Lincoln mother travels circuit with tennis-playing son

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — It makes little difference that Donna Johnson never has played the game, she's a tennis pro anyway.

In her seventh summer, Mrs. Johnson certainly would be qualified for the label of a professional tennis mother if there were such a title.

Lincoln is the home of Donna Johnson, her husband Dwight and their sons, Randy and Craig. But home for Mrs. Johnson these days is usually a motel room somewhere on the junior tennis circuit as she chaperons, counsels and cajoles 14-year-old Craig.

She is one of a breed of parents who believes competitive tennis is good for children and who is willing to sacrifice long hours and a bundle of money so the offspring can enter tournaments from St. Joseph, Mo., to Ft. Worth, Tex.

"We'll be gone 10 to 12 weeks this summer at tournaments," Mrs. Johnson said here Wednesday.

This is a special week for the Johnsons. Craig is entered in the Nebraska Open Tennis Tournament under way at Omaha's Dewey Park.

A tournament so close to home is a rarity. It means mom and son can look forward to a good night's sleep in their own beds instead of another motel room.

Sleeping at home apparently agrees with Craig. Competing in the juniors' 14-year-old class, the Pound Junior High student advanced to Thursday's semifinals with a pair of wins Wednesday.

While Craig whipped Larry Station of Omaha 6-0, 6-1 Wednesday morning and earned a semifinal berth with a 6-0, 6-1 afternoon victory over Omaha's Larry Goodman, mother Johnson sat two courts away intently watching her son.

"I still get nervous but at least I can watch him," Mrs. Johnson said. "It used to be that I couldn't watch so I would just roam around and worry."

Mrs. Johnson conquered her roaming and worrying days back when older son Randy started on the circuit seven years ago. Now a student at the University of Nebraska, Randy has retired from tournament tennis for the time being.

Craig has picked up where Randy left off. A win two weeks ago in a St. Joseph, Mo., tourney and a second last week in Kansas City has stamped the Lincoln student as one of the hottest young players in the Midwest.

In the next few weeks, Craig will enter tennis events in Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa. Mother will be by his side when she's needed.

"I think it's good that I never took up the game," Mrs. Johnson said. "That way I can't be critical. Craig knows if he does something wrong and we talk about it."

Why has she agreed to spend her summers on the road watching and worrying as her son competes?

"We have to go out of Lincoln and out of the state for the competition," Mrs. Johnson said. "Craig has to play against college players to get the competition he needs in Lincoln.

"Of course, on this level you can get knocked down pretty fast. But they are all nice kids, a different caliber than most."

Mrs. Johnson admits there are drawbacks, with the travel topping the list. "It's very tiring," she said. "We are gone so much it doesn't give us a chance to do anything else. It really limits you."

And, of course, there is the cost. In addition to gas, motel bills and food, there is the equipment factor.

"Craig can go through a pair of shoes in two weeks," she said. "I just bought him a new pair. That's $25. Rackets cost as much as $30 or $40."

Mrs. Johnson knows there are parents who push their children, parents who have visions of grandeur when it comes to their kids and tennis. But she's not one of them.

She has no secret dreams that one of her boys will be on the professional circuit someday. "They have to enjoy it," she said. "If they don't, I don't. Sometimes Craig pushes himself too hard.

"I want him to realize there are other things in life besides tennis. Parents have to stay on top of these things. It's my job to point these things out to Craig."

Despite all the trophies Randy and Craig have won and the awards that seem bound to come in future tournaments, Mrs. Johnson has realized a couple of intangible rewards from the game.

"I've become very close to my boys," she said. "And the money and time have been worth every bit because I don't have a child that's in trouble. That means a great deal. I've never had one of my boys come to me and say, 'boy, what can I do.' They are always busy."

In her own quiet way, Mrs. Johnson is just as busy behind the scenes.

"You have to love it or you'd go crazy," Donna Johnson said with a smile that said she loves every minute of it.

Johnson was the only Lincoln entrant to remain alive in the singles division of the tournament which winds up Thursday with the adults taking over Friday through Sunday.

In other matches involving Lincoln players Wednesday, Mark Neumeister was ousted in the 18-year-old class by Gary Saddler of St. Louis, 6-4, 7-5. Art Weaver, also competing in the 18-year-old division, lost to Todd Landauer of Bettendorf, Iowa, 6-0, 6-1; Ruth Anderson lost to the tourney's No. 6 seeded 18-year-old women, Barb Ketterman, while Leslie Hinrichs of Lincoln battled to the semifinals of the 14-year-old class before dropping a rugged 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 match to Kristy Haden of Kansas City.

'Slew ownership investigated

New York (UPI) — The "very complicated" ownership group of Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew is under investigation by the New York State Racing and Wagering Board.

The Board's probe, expected to last two more weeks, is so far focused on veterinarian James M. Hill, one of the two principals of Seattle Slew's ownership group, Wooden Horse Investments, Inc.

Hill said in an application for a renewal of his thoroughbred vet's license before the Belmont Stakes last week that he was not an owner of any racehorse. Hill qualified his answer, however, saying that he participated in "a pension and profit-sharing plan that has made loans to an investment corporation that bought thoroughbred yearlings."

Seattle Slew was purchased for $17,500 at a yearling sale in Kentucky in 1975 by Wooden Horse, a company put together by Hill and Mickey Taylor. Hill and Taylor each owned a share of Wooden Horse and each was to receive income from a profit-sharing pension trust that would defer income taxes on possible earnings.

Hill's interest is under investigation to determine whether he treated racehorses belonging to other owners or whether he deliberately tried to circumvent a New York State racing regulation rule which bars practicing vets from also owning horses that compete in the state.

"There was absolutely no unethical practice," Hill told Newsday Tuesday night. "We have given them all the information they asked for. My record in this business has been a damned good one and as far as I'm concerned, let the chips fall where they may."

Hill and the five other coowners of Seattle Slew, including Taylor, were granted temporary ownership licenses a few days before the Belmont Stakes after Hill turned in his racing vet's license.

A spokesperson for the Board said Wednesday "there might have been some violations but that doesn't mean it was enough to keep them from granting him a temporary license."

A temporary license, the spokesperson said, may be used indefinitely until suspended, revoked or a regular one-year license is granted. Seattle Slew's owners will retain their temporary license, "pending the outcome of the inquiry."

Seattle Slew's victory and purse from the Belmont will not be affected by the inquiry.

"The Board will take at least two weeks to go through it all," the Board spokesperson said. "The problem is there are so many sides to it. It's very, very complicated, not just cut and dry."

Kentucky's racing steward, Keene Dangerfield, said the owners of Seattle Slew also had been "in technical violation" of racing rules there when the colt won the Derby at Churchill Downs May 7.

Daingerfield said, at the request of Kentucky racing officials, Seattle Slew's owners filed additional information May 18, bringing them into compliance and no action against them was planned in Kentucky.

NBA helps troubled teams

Coronado, Calif. (AP) — The Board of Governors of the National Basketball Association announced Wednesday the adoption of a plan to ease the financial strain on the four teams which joined the league from the American Basketball Association one year ago.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said the plan would "assure the continued viability of our four newest franchises," the Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs.

The plan, designed to alleviate the toll of debts which total more than $30 million among the four teams, contains two significant points.

The four teams owed the league $200,000 apiece, due this month, as the final payment on their $3.2-million entrance fee. The Board of Governors agreed to extend this deadline from June, 1977 to June, 1980.

That new deadline coincides with the time the four new teams will begin to share in the NBA's television revenues, which under the current contract amount to approximately $500,000 per year per team.

The second point of the agreement carries long-range implications.

Other tennis

Jimmy Connors, citing a sore thumb, withdrew from the $100,000 Queen's Club Tournament Wednesday, five days before Wimbledon. Suspicions were that Connors was upset at having to play on indoor courts instead of grass because of rain.

Unheralded Hank Pfister of Bakersfield, Cal., ranked 44th in the United States, upset Stan Smith 6-3, 6-4 and Ilie Nastase 6-2, 6-3 in the Queen's Club tourney in London.

Gordon Johncock, who was unconscious and listed in critical condition Sunday night after a crash in the Rex Mays 150, plans to drive as scheduled in Saturday's Camaro Challenge race against Cale Yarborough.

Two of Europe's premier racing drivers, Lella Lombardi of Italy and Christine Beckers of Belgium, have entered the July 4 Firecracker 400 stock car race at Daytona International Speedway.

Other sports

The Chicago Bears Wednesday reduced their list of quarterbacks to three, selling Pat Sullivan to the San Francisco 49ers.

Twins sign McManaman

Steve McManaman, the University of Nebraska's hard-hitting outfielder-pitcher, signed with the Minnesota Twins organization Wednesday morning.

A 13th-ranked pick in the recent pro draft, McManaman will fly from Lincoln Thursday morning, arrive in mid-afternoon in time to suit up for the Wisconsin Rapids of the Midwest League that night.

"There isn't going to be a wasted motion before I start swinging a bat," McManaman observed. "I was drafted as an outfielder, but they told me I might also get a chance to show what I can do as a pitcher."

McManaman says becoming a minor league baseball player "is a step backward financially for now. I'm leaving a good job with Shell Chemical. It was quite a decision to make. But they've been very understanding and are giving me a leave of absence to give this a try.

"I hope to also play winter ball and see if I can make it to the majors in three or four seasons," the Lincoln Southeast High grad adds.

McManaman hit .302 for the Cornhuskers this spring and compiled a 6-0 record on the mound.

Killanin to probe IOC script change

Prague (UPI) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, Wednesday officially opened the IOC's 79th session and then set up an inquiry to discover why the published Czechoslovak version of his speech was different from the French and English texts.

The major part which did not appear in the Czech version was a section where Killanin referred to the problems of mixing politics with sport.

Killanin said he welcomed government assistance in the development of sport and then continued: "However, at the same time the national Olympic committees and individual athletes must be protected from becoming the instruments of government direction."

In the Czech version, the words "government direction" were changed to "commercial influence."

Then followed a large section which was omitted completely.

Killanin said: "If they (the national Olympic committees) find that their governments make this impossible, then unfortunately it may be that the athletes suffer for some time until this situation is remedied.

"In the world today there are governments of the left, right and center which for reasons which may be absolutely justifiable to themselves take actions which in the interests of their own security prevent complete freedom and liberty.

"Personally I regret any restraint on personal liberty but would reiterate this matter of amateur sport, and especially Olympic sport, is for the International Olympic Committee, the International Federations and the National Olympic Committees alone," Killanin said in his opening address.

When Killanin's attention was drawn to the alterations in the Czech version distributed to the session and guests, he said he would start an immediate investigation "to discover the facts."

Killanin's speech ranged across the major problems of the Olympic movement, the question of siting the Games and the program of sports.

He said the IOC would look at the idea of spreading the Games throughout an area, even across international frontiers, but he did not want to see the Olympics split up into a series of world championships in various sports.

Don rejoins Howard, Frank

New York (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Don Meredith will return to ABC Television as a commentator on Monday Night Football, it was learned Wednesday.

Sources said that Meredith will replace Alex Karras on the Monday Night broadcast team that also includes Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell.

Chet Simmons, vice president of sports, confirmed the report, saying Meredith left with NBC's best wishes.

"He just felt he wanted to go back to ABC and rejoin Frank and Howard," said Simmons. "We had lengthy talks with him but that's what he wanted to do so we wished him godspeed.

"Our talks were very friendly and he left with our blessing."

An ABC spokesman said the network would not comment on the report.

Zurlo retains boxing title

Cagliari, Sardinia (UPI) — Franco Zurlo, European bantamweight boxing champion, retained his title Wednesday by stopping challenger Jacky Bihin of France at the start of the eighth round of their scheduled 15-round fight.

Zurlo, 37, weighed 118 pounds, one more than the 30-year-old Bihin.

Officer bound over on murder charge

A Lincoln police officer charged with the shooting death of his wife on June 1 waived a preliminary hearing in Lancaster County Court Wednesday.

William Welsh III, 31, appeared before County Court Judge Robert Camp a day before his preliminary hearing on the matter had been scheduled. He answered the routine questions concerning the waiver and was bound over to district court for arraignment July 15.

Welsh was arrested by fellow officers after the alleged shooting at his 5125 Linden St. house in the early morning hours of June 1. His wife Christine, 26, died at Bryan Memorial Hospital about an hour after the incident. An autopsy showed she died from six bullet wounds inflicted after a reported domestic disturbance.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said that he and Welsh's attorney, Patrick Healey, exchanged information on the case and agreed on the waiver action. Lahners indicated the exchange was equivalent to what could have been learned from a preliminary hearing.

Lahners said Welsh will continue to be housed in his one-man cell in the city jail. He added that the officer was taunted by fellow inmates for a day or two, but that has subsided.

The chamber endorses city transportation office

The formation of a transportation department for Lincoln was endorsed Wednesday by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber agreed with Mayor Helen Boosalis that transportation functions in toher city offices could be consolidated into one transportation office without the addition of much staff.

The mayor made the commendation in May but no final action has been taken.

A request by local businessman Mike Grieger, operator of the airport limousine service, to the Public Service Commission to allow competitive taxi service in Lincoln also got the chamber nod.

Although the Yellow and Checker Cab systems in Lincoln began as competitiors, they now operate under the same corporation. The chamber feels one more in the city wouldn't hurt.

Two federal bills were opposed by the chamber: one to revise the Hatch Act to allow more political participation by federal employes, and another to improve the Federal Trade Commission.

A report on the Junior Olympics scheduled for Aug. 12-14 included the announcement that a drive to raise $22,000 to supplement the $37,000 budget was under way.

Bennett named to public buildings' safety board

Gov. J. James Exon has appointed Allan D. Bennett of Lincoln to the Public Buildings Safety Advisory Committee.

Bennett succeeds Nancy Erickson of Lincoln who resigned from the committee. Bennett's term will expire Sept. 12, 1978.

Exon also named W. Gale Rumpeltes to the Public Employes Retirement Board, succeeding Richard Weber of Hastings. Rumpeltes is the budget and systems coordinator for the Beatrice State Development Center. His term will expire on Jan. 1, 1979.

School to heal financial cut

Omaha (AP) — University of Nebraska Medical Dean Perry Rigby said Wednesday that he is not ready to say how the medical college will operate with at least $1.3 million less during the next year.

The college is losing about $1.3 million in federal funds, and the Legislature did not allocate state tax dollars to fill the loss.

The college's general instruction budget for the year just ending was about $10.9 million. According to a preliminary estimate, that budget for the year starting July 1 will be about $9 million.

"We will survive, but it is going to be painful," Dr. Rigby said. He said a revised operating plan has been prepared, but will not be announced until approved by the University.

Creighton University Medical School went through a similar situation about a year ago.

Man sentenced for sexual assault

A Lincoln man convicted of sexually assaulting two women at the same time last November has been sentenced to 10-15 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex.

District Court Judge William Hastings sentenced Leonard Leo Franklin, 35, formerly of 401 W. Garber Ave., Tuesday afternoon. He was initially charged with first-degree sexual assault, second-degree sexual assault and breaking and entering with intent to commit sexual assault. The second degree charge was dropped during plea bargaining and Franklin agreed to plead guilty to the other two charges.

Franklin was arrested after two women told police they were assaulted by a knife-wielding intruder in their north central Lincoln apartment. They claim he raped one of them while fondling the other, holding both at bay with a knife.

The incident happened a week after Franklin had been paroled from the penal complex where he served two and a half years of a three- to five-year sentence for assault with intent to rape on a 1974 incident.

Chicago mobster Vogel dies

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Edward D. Vogel, a founding father of the Chicago crime syndicate and one of its wealthiest members, is dead at the age of 81.

Vogel died of leukemia Sunday and was buried after a private funeral, a service attended by none of his old gangland colleagues.

Vogel, along with Al Capone, was one of the founding figures of the Capone gang, the hoodlum organization that evolved into the present crime syndicate.

A nonviolent type, Vogel was one of a few gangsters who was said to have reached the top of his profession without firing a shot.

Many moonshiners turning to marijuana

Nashville, Tenn. (AP) — Many moonshiners, rather than fight rising sugar prices, are turning to another cash crop — marijuana.

The price of sugar, a prime moonshine ingredient, soared a few years ago, said Riley Oxley of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. And that, he said, combined with stricter enforcement of white lightning laws and a market that's going dry, discouraged many long-time whisky runners.

"The thing with young people seems to be marijuana and not booze — that's the market now," Oxley said in an interview. "The last moonshine we got was going for about $20 a gallon and that was the wholesale price. So by the time the retailer sells it, he's about the same price as bonded whisky."

Said another agent: "Most moonshiners are farmers, so the next available thing for them to grow is marijuana, and we think it'll get more prevalent as time goes on."

From 1960 to 1968, federal alcohol agents in Tennessee seized more than 1,000 stills a year. In 1976 they broke up only eight.

"More than a year and a half ago, authorities found a marijuana field in Cocke County and it was tied to an ex-bootlegger," Oxley said. "There was enough to fill a couple of police cruisers."

The alcohol bureau learned in April that a onetime Tennessee moonshiner was flying marijuana into Memphis from Mexico. Two former bootleggers were linked to importation of marijuana in South Carolina. One bought two planes and learned to fly, agents said.

"There are a lot of examples, I can assure you, that ex-bootleggers are getting into narcotics. It's a big thing today, you understand, and the illegal liquor business is a declining occupation," Oxley said.

The Sevier County Sheriff's Department raided a county-line farm in May and discovered 4,000 marijuana plants and two stills. The plants were well-cultivated, dusted for bugs and irrigated from a nearby stream. The jagged-leaved hemp grew in a corn field behind the barn.

Another alcohol bureau agent, who asked not to be identified, said agents have uncovered as many as 10 marijuana fields during the past three years in areas of east Tennessee where moonshine businesses once were legend.

"Moonshiners and marijuana people want to make some easy money, a fast and easy buck," he said. "So as the moonshine business disappears, they've got to come up with another gimmick."

General contract set for new Lincoln prison

Kingery Construction Co. of Lincoln has received the general contract for construction of a new $7.6 million minimum-medium security prison in Lincoln.

The bid of $4,183,626 was approved Wednesday by the Department of Correctional Services and sent to the governor, according to Jack Falconer, deputy director. Awarding of the contracts, received the week of April 18, was delayed because of a legal search necessary to identify the low mechanical bidder, he added.

As directed by the 1977 Legislature, the bids include a central chiller to save energy and exclude an additional housing unit for the chemical dependency program. The chiller was an addition modifying the air conditioning system.

Other low bidders are Reinhardt Brothers, Lincoln, $1,927,518, mechanical; David A. Baxter and Sons, Omaha, $740,964, electrical; O'Keefe Elevator Co., Omaha, $64,535, elevators; and Pegler and Co., Lincoln, $275,704, food service.

Contracts are expected to be signed early next week after review by the governor and the Department of Administrative Services.

Law may require charge at Detoxification Center

Lincoln's Detoxification Center may have to charge for its services — or do without state alcoholism services funding.

No program receiving less than 8% of its funding from client fees will qualify for funds under the state's new alcoholism services law, Dr. Bill Ford, state alcoholism director said Wednesday.

The Detoxification Center provides free 24-hour emergency care.

The 8% requirement "could be a hardship" on the city's planned application for state alcoholism funds, said Bob Clark, city-county human services administrator.

To qualify, the detoxification center may have to assess fees to "those who are able to pay," Clark said.

The state's new alcoholism services funding mechanism created by passage of LB204 will pour $1 million into programs statewide. The 16-county region, which includes Lincoln and Lancaster County, will receive $245,083 for residential and outpatient care, including detoxification services.

Robin K. Meter, son of Robert Meter of Gering, is the other Nebraska delegate.

Selected as alternates to the session, to be held July 15-23, were Kevin J. Morrow and Barry E. Epstein of Omaha, and Steven J. Goll of Blue Hill.

Man is injured in cycle mishap

A Lincoln man is in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital following a motorcycle accident early Wednesday in which he broke his leg.

Jody Harwood, 20, of 2640 W. O St., was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Dennis W. Haakenson, 19, of 3534 N. 10th.

Police said Haakenson apparently fell asleep while traveling west on P St., and drove off the road near Sunvalley and Bell. Haakenson and Harwood were thrown from the vehicle.

Summer jobs increase Nebraska employment

Associated Press

The usual spring increase in agricultural and construction jobs caused a slight decrease in unemployment during May, according to the state Labor Department.

The state's unemployment rate was 3.4% last month, down from 3.7% in April. There were 24,400 Nebraskans without jobs in May, compared with 26,300 in the previous month.

Lincoln unemployment fell from 2.8% to 2.6%, with the number of jobless going from 2,800 to 2,600.

In Omaha, the rate dropped from 5.6% to 5.1%, representing a reduction in the number of unemployed from 14,150 to 13,050.

Unemployment also declined in outstate Nebraska, where the percentage went from 2.7% to 2.4%.

The number of persons without jobs stood at 8,750, down from 9,550 in April.

A year ago the unemployment rate was 4.4% for Nebraska, 3.7% for Lincoln and 7.2% for Omaha.

The seasonal decline in unemployment probably will be followed by an increase in June, a Labor Department official said, because of the large number of young people entering the labor force when school is out.

Stock market is mixed

Dow Ind. —5.00

New York (AP) — The stock market was mixed Wednesday, pulling back from a strong rally the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which jumped more than 10 points on Tuesday, gave back half of that as pressure focused on blue chips.

The Dow, down more than 8 points during the day, closed off 5.00 at 917.57.

Big Board volume came to 22.64 million shares down from the 25.39 million traded in the previous session.

But gainers and losers were almost evenly matched among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Of 1,905 issues traded on the NYSE, 711 advanced and 695 lost.

Analysts said blue chip issues, which have been under market pressure recently, apparently reached a resistance level in Tuesday's brief-lived rally, creating an impetus to sell.

Others noted that the Federal Reserve move to prop up the Federal Fund rate ran counter to an earlier rumor that the Fed might be relaxing its monetary policy.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks declined .28 to 109.90. S&P's 500-stock composite index dropped .24 to 99.62.

Monroe Auto Equipment, off ¼ to 12, topped the active list as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Trading included a 136,900-share block at that price.

Other actively traded issues included British Petroleum, unchanged at 15¾; Twentieth Century Fox, up ½ to 22; and Columbia Pictures, down ½ to 14¼.

Trading on British Petroleum included a block of 70,000 shares at 15⅜.

Among other issues, General Motors, up a point on Tuesday, dropped ⅜ to 69. Ford declined ⅛ to 56⅝.

American Telephone and Telegraph closed up ⅜ in active trading.

The utility announced quarterly earnings of $1.80 a share against $1.51 a year earlier. It also said it intended to seek rate revisions to bring charges on calls to Alaska, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico in line with charges for calls on the U.S. mainland.

Farm energy may change

Kansas City (AP) — American farmers must prepare for significant changes in production methods to help conserve energy as commonly-used fuel sources dwindle, a University of Nebraska expert said Wednesday.

The speaker at a one-day American Farm Bureau Federation national energy conference, Dr. William Splinter, predicted farmers may eventually see a return to steam power as an energy source in food production.

Splinter, however, disputed suggestions by environmentalists that farmers should consider substituting animal and human labor for gasoline-powered farm machinery. The efficiency lost would not be worth it, he said.

He advised the conference that farmers should relate their energy needs to increased use of solar collectors, windmill generators and methane gas from animal waste.

Splinter also forecast more fish farming, which he said makes the most efficient protein-production use of energy.

"You can go to any supermarket and see more and more fish products, and the reason is because that's a more efficient area of production," he said. "I think we are going to see a nationwide move toward more animal production in the fish area."

NNG enters coal business

Omaha (AP) — Northern Natural Gas Co. Wednesday announced its entry into the coal business with the formation of two coal companies.

Northern Coal Co. will be involved in coal mining and marketing and Northern Minerals Co. will be involved in leasing and exploration, the parent company said in a news release.

Jack O. Osborne, president of Peoples Natural Gas, will be president of the new coal companies.

Northern said it is considering several coal development and production projects in the Rocky Mountain area. The company said it expects its primary coal market to be utilities and industries changing from natural gas and oil to coal.

Northern also announced creation of an Exploration Division headquartered in Houston, Tex.

A Natural Gas Group has been formed from the wholesale natural gas operations and the Peoples Natural Gas retail division. The group will be headed by Gordon Severa, who has been president of wholesale natural gas operations.

Northern's operations also include natural gas, liquid fuels and petrochemicals, according to W. A. Strauss, board chairman.

Farmer's market season to open

Lincoln Center's Farmers Market will start the new season with a "Milk-Off," scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Mayor Helen Boosalis and Ms. Betty Hoffman will participate in the second annual goat-milking event. Ms. Hoffman submitted the highest bid during the ETV Auction for the right to participate.

The Farmers Market, on 13th St. between O and P Sts., will run for 14 weeks. The market is open each Saturday from 9 a.m. until noon.

Season permits and weekly stalls are still available, according to Julie Laessle of the Lincoln Center Association.

Water code proposals okayed by NRD

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

State law should prohibit pumping groundwater for irrigation to the extent that it causes a "harmful" reduction in surface water.

This is one of 10 recommendations to the Nebraska Legislature approved Wednesday night by the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District directors regarding a proposed water code for state.

The directors added the word "harmful" after a committee had debated the recommendation for two hours.

All directors except Fred Retzlaff voted in favor of the list, which will be forwarded to the Nebraska Association of Natural Resource Districts to present to the Legislature.

Retzlaff said the measure could have the effect of "shutting down all irrigation" in the state.

State Geologist Vince Dreeszen said the force of the proposed law would "depend on how 'harmful' is interpreted by the courts." Any well has an effect on surface water, he said. "The people of Nebraska don't understand this."

The directors also recommended a law permitting transfer of water from one river basin to another "with proper safeguards for the basin of origin."

Again, it would be left to courts to determine what safeguards would be proper.

Legislation should also set priorities for water use, prohibit water waste, and protect the rights of landowners to the water beneath their property, the directors recommended.

By a 12 to 1 vote with two abstaining, the NRD board refused to take a position on the proposed coal slurry pipeline which would use water from wells in Wyoming to transport coal across Nebraska and other states to a power plant in Arkansas.

After listening to twenty minutes of arguments pro and con by Bob Crosby, legal counsel for the pipeline company, and Phil Kenney, president of the Nebraska Railroad Assn., the directors acted on a motion of director Paul Amen to take no stand.

Amen said the pipeline issue has no connection "with those things which we're charged with accomplishing." The Lower Platte South NRD, as do all NRD's in the state, controls soil and water conservation within specific areas.

"I know it (the resolution) is dealing with water, but it's not our water," Amen said.

Dreeszen told the directors the pipeline would have "no effect" on Nebraska's water supplies.

Even though a small portion of the aquifer, or underground water pool, supplying the pipeline is under western Nebraska, it is too deep to be of use to Nebraskans, he said.

In other action, the board voted to pledge $800 toward the cost of a $1600 airplane flight to take aerial photos of Lancaster County.

The photos, to be taken by a U.S. Dept. of Agriculture plane, would show changes in land use since the last aerial map was made in 1971.

City-County Planning Director Doug Brogden is looking into the possibility of the city or county picking up the other half of the bill, since the photos would also be of use in the planning process.

Western — Word has been received here of the recent death of Dr. Robert C. Winter, of Manteca, Calif., formerly of Western.

A practicing physician in Manteca for 31 years, Dr. Winter was credited for establishing the Manteca Hospital.

A native Nebraskan, he was graduated from the University of Nebraska School of Medicine in 1939 and later served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

Surviving are his wife, Dolly; two sons; a daughter; his mother, Mrs. Alvena Winter of Western; three brothers, including Richard and Rolland of Western; a sister and two grandchildren.

Two men hurt in fire

Two men, one a fireman, were injured Wednesday afternoon after a car engine caught fire in the garage of Urban Motors, 1021 N. 48th St.

A worker was cleaning the engine of a car with a solvent, fire officials said, when the engine caught fire.

The worker, identified by fire officials as William D. Andersen, 29, was treated for burns on the right arm and face at Bryan Memorial Hospital and released.

Fireman Richard Grell suffered chemical burns on his leg when he stepped into a "mud pit" and the solution in the pit filled his boot, officials said. He was treated for burns and released.

The fire caused considerable damage to the car and minor damage to the roof of the garage, fire officials said.

$500 taken from VA machines

More than $500 in bills and coins was taken from three vending machines at Veterans Hospital, 600 S. 70th St., and the thief apparently had a key to the machines.

Police said there were no signs of forced entry on the machines, one of which was a bill-changer.

The money was taken sometime between 1 p.m. Tuesday and 6 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

State wiretaps total 6 in 1976

There were six court approved wiretaps in Nebraska in 1976, about half the number used the previous year, according to figures released by the U.S. Court's office in Washington, D.C.

Two of the six were in Lancaster County, the other four in Douglas County, according to local officials. The two in Lancaster County were in Lincoln and involved a murder case and a drug case.

Convicted murderer Wesley Peery's residence was tapped with a microphone eavesdrop, according to Deputy County Attorney Bob Gibson. None of the information gained from the tap was used in the trial against Peery, who was sentenced to die in the electric chair for the murder of Marianne Mitzner at her Havelock coin shop last year, he added.

The other wiretap was a phone type which resulted in six narcotics arrests on charges of conspiracy and possession of marijuana and amphetamines. One of the six pleaded guilty, three were accepted into pretrial diversion and one case is still pending, Gibson said.

Three of the Omaha taps involved a gambling case and resulted in 13 arrests. The other one was drug related and two men were sentenced to the Nebraska Penal Complex as a result, Omaha officials said.

The 1975 taps, 11 in number, were spread among Douglas, Lancaster, Scotts Bluff, Hall and Sarpy counties. Nationally, state-approved wiretaps were down 7% from 593 in 1975 to 549 in 1976. Federally approved wiretaps were up 27% from 108 to 137.

There were a total of 1,181 incriminating intercepts made in the country last year, at a cost of $19,070.

BY Firestone

1. THE OWNER:
is moving out of town. This your chance to get quick possession on this four-year-old, Firestone custom-built, 3 bedroom ranch. Sliding glass doors to a patio and large fenced-in back yard. Carpet, custom draperies, and wallpaper in beautiful earthtones. This one is a "must-see"!

2. CHARMING:
3 bedroom brick and frame split level with wood burning brick fireplace in the family room. This three-year-old beauty has a lovely fenced in back yard, double car garage and a corner lot. Adds up to lots of liveability for the price.

3. OWNERS HAVE ADDED:
a 25 X 18 upper level addition to this 2 plus bedroom brick home — suitable for a variety of uses to suit your individual needs. Fenced in back yard on a quiet street. The bedroom in the lower level could be your teenager's delight.

4. ENGLISH TUDOR:
. . . split level. Clinker bricks on the exterior add to the old world charm of this sparkling new Firestone quality constructed home. The master bedroom has a built-in vanity and mirror in the dressing area. So many extras that you must see this one.

5. CUSTOM:
. . . made birch cabinets including a bread board, stained to your exact choice of color, and sealed and lacquered to a glowing patina. Wouldn't you choose this over a factory pre-assembled, pre-stained, pre-fab model? Only one feature of the quality construction which sets a Firestone built home apart from the crowd. If you're thinking about building a new home, don't you owe it to yourself to examine and compare? Four model homes are available for your inspection.

"DID DOCTOR BLOG TELL YOU WHY THAT RUN-DOWN FEELING DOESN'T AFFECT YOUR MOUTH?"

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, June 16, 1977

Aquarian whose legend grows: Jack Benny. The comedian exemplified the qualities of his sign — Uranus was there in the surprise and timing elements. The generosity, symbolized by the Eleventh House, was also present, despite this "cheap image." Jack was "friendly" to astrology, had a sense of humor which translated into laughter and good will. If all Aquarians were like Jack Benny, I would sleep better at night!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New Moon highlights journeys, reports, more activity, ideas, collections, payments, new understanding of close neighbors, relatives. Check diet. Your digestive system may be "sensitive." What you've been seeking is made available. Mail could contain good news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New financial arrangement is indicated. Be confident — ask questions, make inquiries. Horizons expand. Travel, vacation or holiday spirit prevails. You shake off lethargy. Tensions are dissolved — if you so permit. Spotlight on collections, payments, personal possession.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New Moon in your sign emphasizes fresh starts, independence, creativity, personality, striking appearance, publicity. You're able to break through barriers, red tape. You can "dismantle" for ultimate purpose of rebuilding on more attractive, solid site.

CANCER (June 21-Juuly 22): Greater ability to make known your feelings — this is indicated. Areas previously shouded in mystery receive benefit of greater light. You gain access to special or privileged data. Member of opposite sex aids in making this a stimulating, romantic period.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on beauty, refreshment, change of scene, romance, fulfillment of desires. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure in scenario. You receive go-ahead on creative project. Member of opposite sex pays compliment — and means it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New chance for prestige, standing in community, achievement — this is highlighted. New Moon specifies refinement of techniques, opening up lines of communication with community leader, professional superior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Philosophical beliefs, concepts are strengthened. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Your message — or manscript — reaches more persons than anticipated. Long-distance call is harbinger of "most favorable report."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dip deep — reject superficial responses. One with legal expertise wants to delve into tax, money affairs. Partner or mate is directly affected. You get views on record; you also become involved with a "cause."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on publicity, legalities, partnership, marriage. New start, open line of communication — these are featured. Leo, Aquarius and Gemini persons figure prominently. You break from past — you can begin now to create your own tradition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You take definite steps to insure, to reinforce, to be more secure. Cancer individual is in picture. Another Capricorn could also play significant role. Collect data — analyze information. Deal with person who has proven track record.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New moon position signifies — for you — love, revitalization, creative changes, emotional fulfillment, better communication with young person. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently and so does the number "4."

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Obtain valid hint from Capricorn message. Be thorough in checking details. Stand tall for principles, even if it may seem you stand alone. Recognition is due and could come faster than imagined. Bargain in "property" is available.

IF JUNE 16th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are a perfectionist, antistic, sensitive, restless and creataive. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You began new phase of activity this year — July could be your most significant month of 1977. You can reinforce, strengthen contracts and contacts. Your originality and persistence are due to pay dividends. What was a breach, an apparent "double-cross" rebounds in your favor.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Design flaw investigated

(c) Washington Star

Washington — Engineers at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have quietly begun an investigation into what appears to be a design flaw in about half of the nation's 67 operating nuclear power plants, a flaw that could lead to the total shutdown of a plant's multiple safety systems

According to internal documents obtained on the matter by the Washington Star, the problem is in a battery system that operates the switches and valves necessary to control all of the plant's safety devices if a plant's operating power should suddenly be cut off

New York (AP) — Laetrile proved to be of no value whatever in either preventing or curing cancer in a four-year study in which the substance was injected into rodents, scientists reported Wednesday

But the scientists said their experiments indicated Laetrile had no harmful effects except when excessive doses were given orally or by faulty injection They said they could not test whether Laetrile may lessen pain, as its supporters claim.

General recalled after speech

(c) New York Times

Washington — Secretary of the Army Clifford L Alexander Wednesday ordered a three-star general to report to him to discuss a speech the officer made in Germany last week saying that the United States would probably become involved in a Sino-Soviet war in the future

The officer, Lt Gen Donn Starry, commander of the Fifth U S Corps in West Germany for the last 16 months and a rising figure in the Army hierarchy, also condemned "liberals" and ' the liberal press," in his lengthy speech at the Frankfurt American High School graduation last Friday night

' The liberal press," Starry said, "are not interested in the truth, only in 5% or so of the news that deviates from the norm Presumably they would be willing to muckrake around every public administration just to see it fall, without concern for the consequences to the country "

Col Ralph E Ropp, chief of the Army's public information division, said Starry was being called to the Pentagon by Alexander and the Army chief of staff, Gen Bernard W Rogers, to discuss the speech Army officials said they were uncertain whether or not Starry would be reprimanded

Alexander s move came in the aftermath of the controversy involving Maj Gen John K Singlaub, the former third-ranking U S Army officer in Korea Singlaub was called home by President Carter and reassigned after the officer said the administration's plan to withdraw American troops from Korea would lead to an invasion from the North Since then, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Alexander, in speeches at the Air Force Academy and at West Point, have told future officers that they must adhere to official policy or leave the service

Starry, 52, was scheduled for promotion shortly to four stars, one of only 10 Army officers with the rank of full general He had been scheduled to depart Germany Friday to take command of the Army s Training and Doctrine Command in Ft Monroe, Va , a position calling for a four-star general

In the speech, Starry told the high school graduates that ' there will probably be war in your lifetime "

"Peace is an illusion," he said in his speech, which was made available Wednesday by the Pentagon ' The absence of peace in the world is, always has been, always will be a fact of life Conflict of some kind is a natural state of man "

' In your lifetime," Starry said, "the Soviets will fight the Chinese, possibly simply continuing their 10 year old border conflict but more probably in a major war Difficult as it may be to see the United States becoming involved in such a war it is likely we would ' be involved if it became apparent that one or the other of the antagonists was about to win and gain absolute control over the bulk of the Eurasian land mass

In the speech Starry scored liberals and said at one point Several years ago the liberals buried God He wasn t important to them They found their God in a liturgy which denies that anything — peace, truth God even life is worthy of reverence

Maj Gen Gordon Hill, the Army s chief spokesman said Starry s remarks were his personal opinion and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Army

Acreages in county protested

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Two rural Lancaster County women tried Wednesay to block the proposed 90-acre development of 55 country acreages planned south of Lincoln

We believe we better preserve some of the tillable acres in Lancaster County," Lavon Hoppes urged the City-County Planning Commission Mrs Hoppes, who lives on an acreage south of Lincoln, said she does not want urban sprawl outside the city limits

Mrs Jack Paulsen, who also lives on an acreage south of Lincoln, told the planning commission acreage developments in recent years are springing up "hop, skip and jump all over

When they get full then they petition to go into the Norris School District," requiring more school construction, she said

Complicating the situation is the location of the proposed development, Dahlberg Acres, east of S 14th and north of Yankee Hill Road That puts it in an area designated "urban reserve ' in the new Comprehensive Plan

The so-called urban reserve areas are to be held for future urban development, which would rule out acreages

Nonetheless Planning Director Doug Brogden has recommended that the proposal be approved, a decision planning commission members found confusing

Brogden told the commission that the term ' urban reserve' is new and that regulations have not been adopted to govern development in these areas Because of that, he said, his recommendation is based on existing regulations, which would allow the development

Discussion on Brogden's recommendation rambled for a half-hour At one point, commission member Moneta Matthews said it seemed to her that we re going to have to implement what we all voted for (in the Comprehensive Plan) '

"We have to do something or we won t have any urban reserve left, ' she said Regulations are currently being drawn up but it is uncertain when they will be ready, according to Brogden

The commission will decide what to recommend on the proposal next week, following its normal procedure

On another matter, residents living near Bethesda Hospital voiced support for a proposal to turn the building into a medical education center

The residents were strongly opposed to a previous proposal to turn the hospital into a care center for the elderly, which would have involved construction of an apartment building

The proposal to turn the hospital into an education facility came from the Lincoln Health Education Center, which was incorporated primarily to purchase the building to "bring together many diverse health education programs." according to Dr. Jay Upright All four Lincoln hospitals are represented on the foundation's board of directors

On another point, the South Salt Creek Neighborhood Organization opposed a requested change of zone from residential to light industry north of L between 1st and 2nd.

'Brain pacemakers' help mentally ill

New Orleans (AP) — Mental patients once considered hopelessly ill are on the road to recovery with "brain pacemakers" implanted in their skulls, doctors at Tulane University said Wednesday

"It's like I'm living in a calm after a storm had ended," said one patient describing the change in her condition after surgery That patient and two others appeared in a videotaped interview shown to reporters at a news conference Wednesday

Ten of 11 patients who voluntarily underwent the operation have shown considerable improvement, some within a matter of days, Dr Robert G Heath, chairman of the psychiatry and neurology department at Tulane's School of Medicine, said at the news conference

' I think it's too early to advocate that we have an overall cure now. But the results speak for themselves," he said

The device implanted in the patients consists of three to five electrodes placed on the surface of the brain under the back of the skull These electrodes receive power from an external battery pack through an under-the-skin antenna

The pacemaker sends a tiny current into areas of the brain associated with pleasurable feelings The current can t be felt by the patient, but Heath said it stimulates the so-called "pleasure circuit ' which inhibits the unhappy and angry feelings associated with psychosis

Schizophrenic, neurotic and uncontrollably violent persons who had been under heavy medication for years were able to leave the hospital and live nearly normal lives after the operation, he said

Heath, who said he delayed doing his first human "brain pacemaker" operation for two years because of fear of criticism, held the news conference to respond to a published report which accused him of Nazi-type medical practice

He said he does not believe the device could be misused and that "I don't think I could control anyone s mind by doing this I don t think it could overrule one's free will '

The only surgery which failed among the 11 initial operations was on a patient who had prior brain damage at the area where the electrodes are placed, Heath said

He said about six more operations have been performed since results were first announced last month at an international scientific conference but it is too early to report on the results of those

All operations thus far have been performed on patients who showed no response to psychoactive drugs shock treatment and other forms of therapy for extreme cases Heath said

"But I think it s indicated now that we should maybe use the operation a little early as soon as it is clear all drugs will fail ' he said ' The less time these patients spend in that dream world out of contact, the better their responses after the operation "

Whelan: 'I have opportunity to be best prepared'

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles on Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan by The Star's political writer.

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Jerry Whelan is unique.

The former Hastings attorney was picked ("Indeed, he did recruit me for this") by Gov. J. James Exon three years ago to be the first full-time lieutenant governor in Nebraska's history.

Democratic voters accepted Exon's choice in their primary election in 1974, and the Exon-Whelan ticket won Nebraska's first governor-lieutenant governor team election that autumn.

Since he took office in 1975, Whelan not only has filled the traditional role of presiding officer of the Legislature, he has assumed the newly directed constitutional requirement of performing "such duties as may be delegated him by the governor."

That, Whelan believes, has given him the opportunity to be the best prepared gubernatorial aspirant in Nebraska history — if he seeks the office (as expected) next year.

"It would be presumptuous of me to say I would be the best qualified," Whelan says "It would not be presumptuous to say I've had the opportunity to be the best qualified candidate to seek the office "

Whelan's delegated duties have ranged across the fabric of state government, concentrating on such problems or concerns as energy, drought, education, aging, political accountability and disclosure, governmental paperwork.

(As head of a commission studying the problem of proliferating paperwork, he says, he came to the conclusion that government must be reorganized not so much to tidy up any organizational chart, but to "deliver services more effectively ")

Whelan views his role outside the legislative chamber as serving as "an extra set of eyes, ears and hands" for Jim Exon

' I pinch hit for the governor," he says

But when the Legislature is in session, his role is sharply different Whelan says

"I'm not his man over there, the lieutenant governor said "He has never asked me if I could get something done We never talk legislative strategy Once the day's over, we talk, and he asks me what happened But that s it "

When the Unicameral is in session, Whelan may go four or five days without seeing Exon But the two talk on an almost daily basis otherwise.

"Quite often, we meet on specific matters But more often it's just a case of sharing observations

"Jim Exon's personality is so secure that he feels no threat from anyone around him He's perfectly at ease and comfortable for me to pretty much go my own way. But I do check in with him on things '

Whelan is generally pleased with his job ("I do enjoy it"), happy that it "exposes you to many things "

His schedule over the next couple weeks will take him to North Platte, Sidney, South Sioux City, Ogallala, Hastings, and to Omaha many times

There will be exposure to the arts and conversations with Bob Hope, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and an Israeli diplomat

(Whelan's eyes light up at the prospect of playing a few holes with Nicklaus in Omaha next Monday The lieutenant governor shoots around 80 and would dearly love to play one hole as well as the world s greatest golfer)

For him, golf is ' an aesthetic experience," Whelan says I walk I think it's a unique blend of the athletic and the natural '

Whelan also plays a good game of tennis, enjoys riding his bike and appreciates most forms of the arts ' in an uneducated fashion."

You ll find him not only at Husker football games, but at NU basketball and track events

But being with his grandchildren is the best thing of all, ' he grins ' Now that s fun'

Whelan also has become fascinated by the building in which he works Prints of the original architectural drawings of the Statehouse line his office

"I am enthusiastically lending my support to a renaissance of this building, he noted It has a proper place to fill in our cultural life

As he gears up for an almost certain gubernatorial campaign next year more Nebraskans will become more familiar with their lieutenant governor

Politically he is in tune with Jim Exon

His firm hand as presiding officer at the Legislature reminds one of Phil Sorensen

And his personality, the sharp wit which sometimes cuts as well as pokes, the air of self-assurance which makes him seem at ease with himself, the candor with which he sometimes speaks, is not at all unlike Nobby Tiemann

Republican gubernatorial aspirants Vance Rogers and Bob Phares are already out getting acquainted You can look for Jerry Whelan to show up sometime later.

Panel erases funds for 8 projects

Washington (AP) — In a compromise move, a Senate subcommittee voted Wednesday to eliminate funds for eight of 17 water projects that were narrowly approved by the House over President Carter's objections.

Sen John Stennis, D-Miss , chairman of the subcommittee on public works appropriations, said his panel tried "to make some adjustments with some consideration for what the President said "

"I don't want to see this bill vetoed," Stennis told reporters after the committee acted in a closed-door session on the $10 2 billion public works appropriations bill.

Earlier Wednesday, both President Carter and Senate Majority Leader

Carter, asked at the White House if he felt a veto could be sustained, said, "I think so "

But he declined to say whether he would veto the bill if funds are left in for dams and canals he feels are not worth their economic and environmental costs.

Byrd urged a compromise, citing the House's close 218-194 vote Tuesday to keep nearly $170 million for the disputed projects

Byrd said "a veto cannot be overridden."

Projects eliminated by the Senate subcommittee although they were approved by the House were LaFarge Lake, Wisconsin, $2 million, Lukfata Lake, Oklahoma, $200,000; Meramec Park Lake, Missouri, $10 million, Yatesville Lake, Kentucky, $7 2 million, Fruitland Mesa, Colorado, $7.7 million; Savery-Pot Hook, Colorado and Wyoming, $5.10 million; Narrows Unit, Colorado, $9.7 million; and Oahe Unit, South Dakota, $16.96 million.

The bill now goes to the full Senate Appropriations Committee for review, after which it will be submitted to the Senate floor and then to a conference committee to settle differences with the House version.

The Senate bill originally contained funds for 506 projects.

As did the House, the subcommittee followed Carter's suggestion to eliminate the Grove Lake project in Kansas, for which an expenditure of $1 million was originally proposed.

Projects approved by the subcommittee over Carter's objections were: Applegate Lake, Oregon, $7.4 million; Atchafalaya River, Louisiana, $5.1 million; Cache Basin, Arkansas, $2 million; Hillsdale Lake, Kansas, $14 million; Richard B. Russell Lake, Georgia and South Carolina, $21 million; Tallahala Creek, Mississippi, $5 million; Columbia Dam, Tennessee, $20 million, and Auburn Dam, California, $39.7 million.

It also approved expenditure of funds on the Bayou Bodcau Project in Louisiana, but cut the amount from $2.4 million to $1.2 million. Stennis said the money would be used for levee construction.

The subcommittee concurred in Carter's proposals to modify the Mississippi River-Gulf Outlet project in Louisiana, the Central Arizona Project and the Tensas Basin Project in Arkansas and Louisiana.

House panel okays end to buying food stamps

Washington (AP) — With a Southern conservative leading a break in Republican ranks, the House Agriculture Committee voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to end the requirement that food stamp recipients pay cash for the coupons.

The 34-12 vote virtually assures that Congress will overhaul the food stamp program along the lines recommended by President Carter.

However, the bill before the House committee would cost about $100 million more than Carter proposed. A Senate measure with a less costly food stamp section already has been threatened with a veto for exceeding budget targets in its other provisions.

Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La., who unsuccessfully proposed a partial elimination of the purchase requirement, unexpectedly told the panel he would vote for the Carter approach.

He cited mail that is "not from drunkards, not from spendthrifts, but from victims of circumstances in my district who are simply unable to get the money to buy the stamps so they can obtain more food."

Four Republicans then joined Moore and all but two Democrats to abolish the payment provision.

Food charity ban lifted

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday overturned a ban on charitable food contributions to needy nations that seized property belonging to U.S. firms, and then passed a $1.6 billion foreign aid bill.

The Senate also voted, 90 to 2, to prohibit aid funds for Vietnam, Cambodia or Laos and to urge President Carter to get a full accounting of missing Americans in those countries.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the amendment was to support administration policy toward those countries since the bill has no direct assistance to them.

House panel promotes insulation

Washington (UPI) — A House banking subcommittee Wednesday approved legislation to help Americans insulate houses, but declined to go along with a provision requiring an "energy efficiency" certificate on every house sold after 1982.

The subcommittee voted 21 to 0 for a bill to authorize $400 million in four years to help needy people install energy-saving devices in their houses. The measure also would require utility companies to help homeowners discover what devices their houses need.

Under the measure, moderate income families could get special low-interest loans to install energy-savers in their houses, and the relatively prosperous could get loans at higher interest rates for big energy projects, such as solar power systems

House denies military benefits to some vets

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Wednesday to deny Veterans Administration benefits to any Vietnam combat veteran whose military discharge is upgraded. It also voted down a regulation that provides housing aid to homosexuals living together

The effort to nullify President Carter's program of reviewing and upgrading less than honorable discharges given Vietnam combat veterans passed on a 273-136 vote as an amendment to a $70 2 billion money bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and several other independent agencies including the VA.

Monday the House banned funds in the Justice Department appropriation bill from [illegible] to carry out Carter's program of pardons for Vietnam ERA deserters and draft evaders.

Sandcastle building class is offered

San Diego (AP) — Are your sandcastles falling down a lot lately? Try "An Introduction to Sandcastle Building" at the University of California at San Diego.

The teacher of the university extension class, Gary Kinsella, usually a pottery instructor, says the class will not only help students build castles that stand up but will help thm deal with the inevitability of the tide knocking them down.

"I look at it the way I look at a good game of tennis," Kinsella said. "You play it. You experience the challenge. If you've done well you feel good. But when it's over there's nothing to take home with you.

"These things are ephemeral," he said. "They last only one day. But there's something perfect about te cycle. Building it. Watching the erosion of the sun and the wind. And then sitting on the beach at sunset and watching it wash away with the tide."

Kinsella, joined on the beach by fellow instructor John Laver, said the best way to build sandcastles is to sculpt the sand from the top down never going back once you've finished a section.

You use wet sand — about 500 gallons of water for two tons of sand to make a four-foot-high castle.

And don't let it dry out or it will blow away before it can be washed away.

Commonwealth condemns Amin regime

(c) New York Times

London — The Commonwealth heads of government, in an unprecedented attack on a member nation, Wednesday condemned President Idi Amin's regime in Uganda for its "disregard for the sanctity of human life" and its "massive violation of basic human rights."

In a connunique marking the end of the eight-day Commonwealth conference here and in Scotland, representatives of 34 nations asserted that "excesses" in the East African country were "so gross as to warrant the world's concern and to evoke condemnation by heads of government in strong and unequivocal terms." But as the result of a compromise they avoided mentioning Amin by name.

Even before the communique was issued, Radio Uganda broadcast a reply from the president, quoting him as suggesting that Israel, South Africa and Rhodesia should be admitted to the Commonwealth, which, he asserted, has become an "imperialist and racist club."

The group's strong language again raised questions about the fate of 250 to 300 Britons who live in Uganda. Special concern was voiced about Robert Scanlon, a 44-year-old motor company executive who was born in Britain but took Ugandan citizenship in 1975. His relatives do not know whether Scanlon, who was arrested on spying charges last week, has been executed or is still alive.

Prime Minister James Callaghan said in a news conference Wednesday that the Commonwealth leaders had carefully considered the fate of the Britons in Uganda. But the Britons knew when they decided to stay in Uganda what might befall them, he added, and the leaders felt that the Commonwealth "must set out what it feels on certain issues.

"I am bound to say I do not recollect any occasion in which condemnation has been so strongly expressed by so many people," the prime minister declared.

During a three-hour discussion Tuesday night and further talks Wednesday, Nigeria — and, to a lesser degree, India and Malawi — expressed reservations about attacking Uganda by name. Commonwealth countries, whose forms of government range from autocracy to democracy, traditionally have been reluctant to probe into each other's domestic affairs.

In the end, it was decided to omit Amin's name and to speak of the "overwhelming view" of the conferees, rather than of a "consensus" or a "unanimous opinion" — to allow objectors to maintain their privately stated reservations.

The communique also drew a distinction between the government and the people of Uganda, remarking that Ugandans remained "within the fraternity of Commonwealth friendship" and expressing the hope that they would soon "once more fully enjoy their basic human rights which now are being so cruelly denied."

Commonwealth officials said the nearest parallel to Wednesday's attack was a somewhat milder protest against South Africa in 1961, which led to South Africa's withdrawal from the group.

Idi Amin

. . . condemned.

Exiles: Amin slit man's throat, drank his blood

London (UPI) — Uganda President Idi Amin slit the throat of one of his victims and drank the man's blood, according to a doctor who fled the country.

The doctor and another exile, appearing anonymously on a commercial television program, said they were prepared to swear statements about the killing of Amin's late minister of public works.

They said the minister was "bound hand and foot like a trussed chicken" on the big desk in Amin's private study.

"Amin, dressed in a white gown and wearing a White Moslem cap, knelt and prayed," the doctor said.

"Amin then cut the man's throat and drank the man's blood to prevent his spirit from haunting him."

The two refugees, interviewed in Nairobi, said Amin was suffering from hallucinations and mental disorders.

Mayors support ERA, tax reform

Tucson, Ariz. (UPI) — The U.S. Conference of Mayors Wednesday approved 117 resolutions, including support of tax reform, national health insurance and the Equal Rights Amendment. If enacted, the measures would cost over $142 billion.

Items expected to be the most controversial — handgun control, national health insurance and location of oil pipelines — turned out to draw little interest as the mayors concluded their five-day national meeting.

The handgun control resolution, tabled in committee Sunday, would have reversed a 1972 policy of the mayors supporting handgun control. However, the resolution was not brought up again before the full membership.

The national health insurance proposal passed on voice vote without comment, and the oil pipeline location measure was tabled for further study.

Many of the 110 mayors in attendance commented freely, however, on the resolutions dealing with the Equal Rights Amendment, support for President Carter's plan for a balanced budget by fiscal 1981 and the right to counsel before a federal grand jury.

Tucson Mayor Lewis C. Murphy, the conference's host who cast the lone resolutions committee vote against the ERA resolution, argued the motion was "the most drastic proposal for amendment of the Constitution" and would make state governments "meaningless zeroes" because Congress would have the power to enact legislation in the field.

Next year's conference host, Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, strongly defended the ERA, saying the country is engaged in a war against poverty, deteriorating cities and economic pressure of all kinds.

"When you go to war you don't disqualify half the troops," he said. "It is right. It is right. It is right. It is right."

The ERA resolution, co-sponsored by 10 mayors, passed on a voice vote.

The mayors accepted amendments from Savannah, Ga., Mayor John P. Rousakis and Jackson to a budget resolution to "laud" Carter's effort to balance the federal budget as long as it does not diminish federal funding to the cities.

The grand jury resolution to allow for counsel was praised as one which would curb abuses in the criminal justice system.

Spanish premier's coalition has big lead

Madrid, Spain (AP) — Premier Adolfo Suarez' centrist coalition rolled up a large early lead Thursday in Spain's first free parliamentary elections in 41 years, unofficial returns showed.

With 9 per cent of the vote counted, the reformist premier's coalition had 35 per cent of the popular votes for the Chamber of Deputies and appeared to be headed toward a lopsided victory in the Senate, the Interior Ministry said.

The Socialist Workers party ran second with 19 per cent, the neo-Francoist Popular Alliance polled 7.2 per cent and the newly legalized Communist party got 4.4 per cent in the voting for the Chamber of Deputies, or lower-house of Spain's Cortes.

Suarez candidates led the race for lower-house seats in three-fourths of Spain's provinces.

The premier's candidates were running strongly in areas that opinion polls had rated as a tossup with the Socialists, led by 35-year-old Felipe Gonzalez. Suarez was even leading in some areas, such as the Basque province of Navarre, that had been considered Socialist strongholds.

Four policemen and three civillians were injured Wednesday in 13 bombings across the nation, most of which occurred before the polls opened. An additional half-dozen unexploded bombs were found at polling places.

Police and soldiers kept a tight security blanket on key government installations to prevent attacks by Basque separatists and terrorists of the extreme right and left.

Interior Minister Rodolfo Martin Villa said reports indicated a turnout of more than 80 per cent of the nation's 23 milllon eligible voters in what he called an election held in "peace and liberty."

The voters chose among 157 parties and 5,000 candidates to select a 350-member Chamber of Deputies and 207 senators. The new parliament will replace the old rubber-stamp, unicameral body apointed by dictator Gen. Francisco Franco, who died 19 months ago.

Suarez, joined by leftist leaders he admitted to political life after years of persecution under the rightist Franco regime, led the nation to the polls.

He said he was calm and hopeful of enough votes to stay in power. The premier was appointed by King Juan Carlos to serve until 1981, but said he would step down unless his middle-of-the-road coalition received an election mandate to govern.

Girl Scouts' death probe continues

Locust Grove, Okla. (AP) — One man was questioned Wednesday in the sex murders of three young Girl Scouts, but authorities said the importance of the interrogation was "being blown way out of proportion."

Three highway patrolmen and a deputy sheriff went to Miami, Okla., about 60 miles from here to question a man arrested on a complaint of public drunkenness. The man later was returned to his cell.

Mayes County District Atty. Sid Wise said the questioning was not unusual, that officers were talking to many people in the northeastern Oklahoma area.

The nude and battered bodies of Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, and Michelle Guse, 9, of Broken Arrow, were found early Monday in a wooded area of Camp Scott, a summer retreat for girls. About 100 other Girl Scouts were camping out in various parts of the 410-acre retreat when the girls were killed.

An autopsy showed the two younger girls died from blows to the head and the older girl was strangled. All three were sexually molested.

As the investigation widened, Girl Scout leaders throughout the nation reported a steady flow of calls from concerned parents.

"People mostly want to talk to us about security," said Merle Neal, executive director of the Mid-Continent Council of Girl Scouts in Kansas City, Mo., which is scheduled to have 1,100 girls from the eight-county area at camp this summer.

"We have checked the police department, which has been our security consultant all along, and it said we should go right on doing what we've been doing. They say the girls are safer in camp than they probably would be when involved in most other summertime activities," she said.

The search for clues, meanwhile, shifted from Camp Scott to a ranch adjoining the camp site in rolling, heavily underbrushed countryside. Three specially trained German shepherds were flown in from Pennsylvania to assist in the search.

Western alliance disagrees on rights stand

James Reston

Bonn — The closer you get to the borders between Western Europe and Communist Eastern Europe, the more the issue of "human rights" becomes intensely human and personal. In Washington, and even in London and Paris, it is mainly a philosophic question, but here in the Federal Republic of Germany, it is a question of divided families, parents and children, husbands, wives and lovers.

No wonder, then, that President Carter in Washington and Chancellor Schmidt here in the capital of the Federal German Republic agree on the principle of human rights, but disagree on the political tactics of how to get the people and the principle together.

Jimmy Carter didn't think much about the German problem when he started his human rights campaign, but he is running into problems here he didn't expect and, despite his serious discussions with Chancellor Schmidt at the summit meeting in London, didn't resolve.

Schmidt was very excited about the Helsinki agreement of two years ago in which the Soviets and their allies in Eastern Europe agreed that human rights in their countries should be respected and could be negotiated with the nations of the West.

Since the Helsinki agreement, Schmidt arranged for about 70,000 ethnic Germans from Eastern Europe to come into West Germany. Over 9,000 of these were negotiated out of Poland on a case-by-case basis. He has also been making progress with the GDR in Eastern Germany and even with the U.S.S.R. to increase the communications and to unite families — all this in very cautious and private negotiations.

Jimmy Carter helped this process by dramatizing "human rights" at the beginning, officials here say, but they add, that maybe he's pushing it too far, at least in Germany. He's creating tension and even fear in Eastern Europe and Moscow now, they say, and the more tension, the less chance of getting people out of East Germany, Eastern Europe, or the Soviet Union.

West Germany has some special problems. It has over a million workers from other countries in its economy. Berlin, for example, is the third largest Turkish city, with more Turkish residents than any other city except Istanbul and Ankara. It wants to bring its own German people from Eastern Europe back home, and put them to work, but this requires, they insist, not pronouncements or provocations but careful and difficult negotiations.

Consider the "human rights" problem from the German view, they say. Some progress has been made quietly here in the last few years. Last year, about eight million Germans from Western Germany visited their families and friends in Communist East Germany. And at the same time, some 1.6 million old people and about 40,000 others from East Germany were allowed to visit West Germany on special occasions.

Meanwhile, as long as the idea of detente between Moscow and Washington existed, the communication by radio and television in sports, the arts and even news increased, but whenever Washington and Moscow begin to differ publicly, emigration and communication slow down.

What may be much more important is that Chancellor Schmidt discussed this dilemma between the principle and the practical with President Carter at the summit meeting in London, and thought they had come to an agreement.

The press reported after the London meeting that Carter and Schmidt had resolved their differences, but that's not what I have been hearing in Bonn.

Even as the Belgrade conference on European security and "human rights" opens, officials here say, President Carter seems to be in the headlines every day proclaiming his allegiance to the Western alliance but provoking the Soviets.

This has created a problem for the chancellor of the Federal German Republic, the president of France, and even the prime minister of Britain, who is Jimmy Carter's greatest supporter in this part of the world.

Apparently, they all came away from the summit believing President Carter was going to moderate his "human rights" campaign. In fact, officials here, at least, say he recognized their problem and promised to do so, but has continued to envenom the issue as before.

After the summit meeting in London, Chancellor Schmidt tried to moderate the "human rights" controversy. He got in touch with Brezhnev in the Soviet Union and with the other leaders of the Communist states of Eastern Europe, including Tito in Yugoslavia and tried to persuade them that Carter was dealing with a domestic political problem, but having made his point, would now avoid dramatizing the problem.

Instead, they insist, Carter has kept inciting the Congress and American public opinion on the human rights issue, and is making things worse.

Obviously, there is either a serious problem or misunderstanding here within the alliance and particularly between President Carter and Chancellor Schmidt.

Their agreement at London last month has clearly broken down, and it is not only human rights but on consultation over arms control, and the Middle East. Chancellor Schmidt is going to Washington in the middle of July to discuss all of this, but that may not be soon enough. Washington and Bonn are the heart of the NATO alliance, and for the moment, if I hear the melody here, they are clear out of touch.

President Carter would probably be startled to hear the longings and doubts being expressed here. They say that in Chancellor Schmidt in Bonn, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in Paris and Prime Minister Callaghan in London, Carter has allies who believe in his objectives, but that he has disappointed them, and particularly Schmidt, since they met him last month in London.

In older neighborhoods, multiple dwellings do hurt

The gentleman protesting the use of federal funds for development of multiple family dwellings in the Malone area has a good point. He believes such a development would produce an unwanted exodus from the area of many of the single family residents now living there.

In the process, the residents now living there would be paid "peanuts" for their homes and find it difficult to relocate. We have come to wonder ourselves about the multiple family situation in the city and what it might mean 50 years from now.

We are not so sure much of anything can be done about it, but we have not been overly impressed with the large apartment complexes we have seen from time to time. And there is no question that they alter the character of a neighborhood.

Apartments and apartment living is not the same as single family living, either socially or in the area of economics. A multiple dwelling unit simply is not very compatible with a single family residence.

Yet, the multiple dwelling is coming to be the only answer we have for many of the older areas of the city such as Malone. When it happens, it means the final end of the single family concept in that area.

There are exceptions to this, of course, but even the exceptions are not all good. We can understand and appreciate why the people in the area of 40th and Normal do not want multiple dwelling units constructed along the south side of Normal east of 40th.

Such multiple dwelling developments frequently are investments and investments only. They have nothing to do with family living or traditional neighborhood concepts.

Too many of them are left to run down at the heels while their owners milk them for all the money they can produce on their investment. Many of them will "age" two and three times as fast as single family developments.

What will some of them be in 50 years? Some of them will be tomorrow's slums and a whole new kind of rejuvenation will need to take place. They do offer a means of reclaiming, so to speak, land and buildings that have become economically depressed but they are a long way from the perfect answer.

Battle lost, but war not over

Congress continues in its attempt to ram through funding for water projects deemed unfeasible and environmentally damaging by President Carter. This week the House rejected a move to cut funding for 16 of the projects on Carter's hit list from a public works appropriations bill.

But there was some good news in the anti-administration vote: there appeared to be enough support for the Carter position to sustain a veto of the appropriations bill if it is ultimately passed.

Carter has threatened to veto a bill containing money for the projects he has deemed unnecessary and wasteful, projects of a kind characterized by one administration supporter in Congress as "dinosaurs of a bygone era.".

The vote rejecting an amendment to cut money for the 16 projects from the budget was narrow: 218-194. Thus it would appear that marshalling the necessary two-thirds majority to override in event of a veto would be difficult.

If the public works appropriations bill passes Congress containing funding for the projects Carter has opposed, we hope the President backs up past threats with action and vetoes the bill — forcing Congress to face an override attempt — which would be forcing Congress to advertise its taste for pork barrel politicking and irrational spending.

This is one of many crucial tests the administration is facing in its relationship with the Congress.

If the President vetoes the appropriations for some of these projects and is sustained, the news is good not only for those who care about environmental concerns, but for taxpayers in general.

But if a Democratic president who has campaigned for a balanced budget, prudent spending and environmental sanity cannot convince a heavily Democratic Congress to break the old bad habits, there is not too much hope left for controlling federal spending.

Patchwork Prairie Country

By La Verna
Hassler

Springtime has turned to summer now that mid-June and ninety degree temperatures are here. June, the best month of them all with its gentle things, the softest things to heal the earth's fears. Soft things like:

The satiny feel of a puppy's ear.

A small bird's wing yet untried for flight.

The silken petals of roses in the early morning impearled with dew.

And the cottonwood fluff sifting through the air

The scarcely audible snake-quaver in the grass.

Sunlight softly touching the garden wall.

Raindrops, soft-toned, falling upon the quiet sod

And the slender thread of a cricket's song in the hay field

There's the whispered ripple of the green running vines on the trellis.

The hushed flutter of butterfly wings on a flower stalk

And the warmth of a little boy's hand softly touching mine

Far away the pillaging bees are brawling over the clover blossoms

And a quiet breeze at eventide brings stardust drifting over the countryside

Over by the pond the shore birds feather stitch the water's edge where the cattails are mirrored in the motionless water while nearby the penciled shadow of the cattle trail crosses to the north pasture.

There's the whispered sigh of tall prairie grass as it bows to a gentle breeze and the stir of wings from a hidden nest.

All this as the wonderful pageant of June is quietly unfolding. It is taking place without much fanfare but it welcomes all spectators.

The corn and milo grow quickly in the long days of warming sunlight now and farmers travel from field to field cultivating their crops. Between the tilling of crops they must find time to put up the hay.

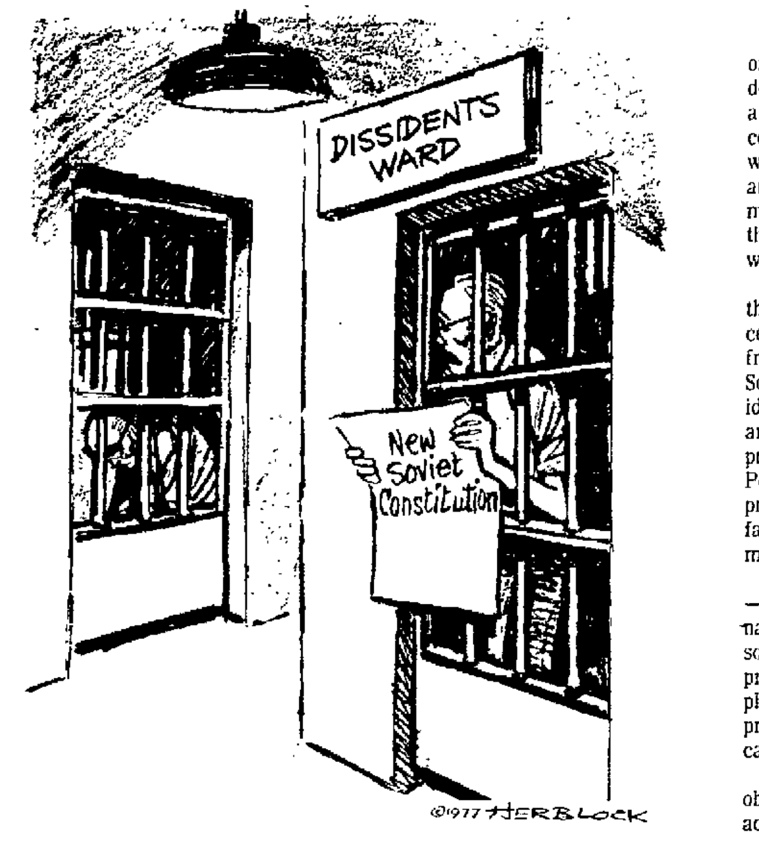
The Farmer disked the pasture land again that he plowed up early in the spring. The rains helped to settle the sod but it also sprouted the weed seeds. Today he will put the mower on the tractor and take another swing at the weeds. Mowing the roadsides and farmlot will take most of the day.

It seems weeds have the nasty habit of growing too fast. In the spring they green-carpet the winter-bare earth. Then suddenly they are tall and unsightly. Once they have matured enough to go to seed another year and another generation of plants will be more difficult to combat. Despite most farmers attempts to combat them their energy seems to be wasted. As rapidly as one weed is cut another takes its place. It doesn't seem much of a legacy to leave weeds to the next generation but I'm certain they will have an ample supply. The price of grain now almost tempts farmers to let his fields grow up into weeds. At least he wouldn't have the expense of high priced seed in the spring and expensive fuel bills.

Appropriate human rights battleground

C. L. Sulzberger

"YOU FEEL STRONG ENOUGH TO HEAR MORE ABOUT ALL OUR RIGHTS, COMRADE?"



Belgrade — This capital is extraordinarily well-suited for its role as host to the first conference reviewing the Helsinki accord on European security. That agreement, signed two years ago after lengthy negotiations, outlined East-West understandings on how detente and freedom should jointly be pursued.

The draft managed curiously to omit any mention of the word "democracy" in its 95 pages (except in names of signatory nations like the "Algerian People's Democratic Republic"). Yet more "democracy" was the object of the exercise. The draft pledged freer travel, information, and civil liberties.

That these promises have not been impressively honored is obvious. President Carter recently released an assessment tabulating arrests of dissidents in the Soviet bloc. Lord Thomson, British chairman of the Helsinki monitoring group, has accused the Eastern bloc of breaches in its undertakings on human rights and an "unabated military effort" that "casts doubt on the sincerity of the Soviet Union's detente policy."

Moscow is now engaged in a perceptibly souped-up effort to jam broadcasts from Western radio stations. And organized attempts to gain more liberty for citizens in Warsaw Pact countries — like this year's Czechoslovakian "Charter 77 Manifesto," calling for less police controls and a freer life — have been met with official hostility and considerable repression.

The reason Belgrade is such an excellent place for discussions of this situation — discussions only now beginning and bound to continue intermittently for many, many weeks — is that Yugoslavia is a half-way house between the contradictory currents involved and the opposing viewpoints symbolized by Moscow and Washington.

Throughout history the south Slavs have been afflicted with a kind of schizophrenia. Their ideology tended to come from the East, their economic sustenance from the West. Their majority looked to Byzantium for their religion and Venice for their trade. And then they were irreparably split when the Ottoman and Habsburg empires partitioned them.

This has left, in modern Yugoslavia, a kind of dichotomy. When Churchill and Stalin divided the Balkans in a secret 1944 treaty, they agreed Yugoslavia should be on a fifty-fifty basis as far as East-West spheres of influence were concerned. Tito started off the postwar period with East Europe's most Stalinist regime; today his is the freest.

Every paradox and confrontation of the current situation is reflected here.

According to government admission, 502 political prisoners are in jail which is less, proportionately, than in other Marxist lands but more, proportionately, than Yugoslavia has been accustomed to during most of its history.

Moreover, some dissidents are refused the customary human rights of free travel and free speech. Thus Milovan Djilas, once among Tito's two or three closest colleagues but a subsequent intellectual rebel, is no longer allowed a passport and, although an internationally famous writer, none of his works can be published here.

A group of 93 intellectuals, professors and authors, signed a pledge of support for Czechoslovakia's dissident Charter 77. But this group, although frowned upon and discouraged, has not been persecuted. And while contentious figures like Djilas are not allowed out, many thousands more Yugolsavs wander about the West than from all the rest of the Communist world together.

Even Djilas, a resolute opponent of the system (twice-imprisoned) concedes: "This country is more than half-free. It cannot be compared to the Soviet bloc. In the strictly political and ideological sense it can be compared and the situation of dissidents is probably not better than in Hungary or Poland. But there has been great improvement in the standard of living, a far wider choice of consumers goods, much more freedom to travel."

There is some open repression here — especially directed against Croatian nationalists, Albanian Irredentists, and so-called "cominformists" (meaning pro-Moscow). And there is more implied repression. A general amnesty prepared for last May 1 was suddenly canceled.

Charter 77 sympathizers certainly object to all these aspects. Yet Djilas acknowledges: "Things in Yugoslavia are superior, even despite political stultification, to other Communist societies." He adds: "Detente is essential and it is important that it continue. Even for human rights in East Europe, in the long run detente will be favorable."

Almost every type of argument that will arise at the 35 nation Helsinki review exists already in minuscule concerning Yugolsavia itself. This is a crossroads for East-West contradictions: ideological, political, military, legal, commercial, cultural.

As a middle ground Belgrade is an admirable site for the diplomatic bazaar which started Wednesday.

Democrats face '78 mischief

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — The Democrats met here the other day to plan their party's mandatory midterm conference with all the enthusiasm of a kid facing a visit to the dentist. They know they have to go, but they don't have to like it.

Because the 1976 Democratic national convention ruled that a midterm conference must be held, the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee spent several hours waggling over just when it should be held and how many delegates of various shapes and sizes should be invited. But what many clearly would rather have done was finesse the whole idea.

The White House had wanted to get this bad tooth pulled in advance of the 1978 Congressional elections, on the theory that the mini-convention could busy itself with those elections and not get mixed up in early meddling in the 1980 Presidential campaign. But Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and House Speaker Tip O'Neill quickly passed the word that Congress didn't want any ad hoc fussing with their campaign, either. The conference, they said, should be held after the off-year balloting. As is often the case these days, the voice of Congress won out.

So the question now is — and it was raised repeatedly in private conversations among executive committee members — what will the mini-convention do? It is not its business to write a party platform or to plan a presidential campaign. The experts who did that for Jimmy Carter last year are in place in the White House they have never shown any particular desire to have help or advice from party regulars, whom they regard as failures in the business of president-electing.

Those who are most skeptical about the mini-convention are fearful it will disintegrate into little more than a glorified pep rally, wasting resources and risking disputes, which are as natural to any Democratic gathering as acne to a teenager.

If Carter retains his popularity, the potential for intraparty mischief will be checked. But what if he should continue to have serious troubles with Congress over his proposals on energy, tax reform, election reform or any of the other ambitious initiatives he has sent to Capitol Hill — or will have sent by next year?

The makeup of the mini-convention will give congressional leaders and their grass-root allies a lot to say at the midterm conference should an all-out fight be in progress at the time between the White House and the Democratic Congress. And if the Democrats have suffered losses in the off-year elections, the mini-convention could be Saturday night in Dodge City.

Members of the executive committee such as the placid but shrewd Don Fowler of South Carolina declined to anticipate such a gloomy outlook. Fowler says there is nothing in sight to indicate the kind of intraparty squabble that would have taken place, for instance, had there been a midterm Democratic conference in 1966, when the idea was first proposed by dissidents who hoped thereby to curb Lyndon Johnson's conduct of the Vietnam war.

Only Joe Crangle, the Erie County, N.Y., party leader, sought in vain at the executive committee meeting to get some discussion of what the purpose of the mini-convention would be, before worrying about how many Democrats would be there. But the consensus was to proceed with the planning and see what there is to do when the conference draws closer.

Crangle sees the meeting not so much as a potential arena for a fight between the White House and Congress as an opportunity for the rank-and-file to express itself on issues before Congress and the country.

The White House had indicated that Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale and Cabinet members will be trotted out for the midterm meeting. But others may be of a mind to make use of the forum as well, especially if there is no major work to be done at it. Should Gov. Jerry Brown, for instance, decide to challenge the incumbent — a possibility few who know the maverick Brown will rule out — the mini-convention would be made to order for him to showcase his alternatives to the Carter presidency.

No one can forecast now what may happen, but the opportunities for mischief are many, and the Democrats know it.

Water project costs include interest

Today's Mail

Monumental jump

Omaha, Neb.

Governor Exon and the Legislature, during the recent session, used their good offices to keep the Norden and North Loup irrigation projects afloat and urged Congress to keep supplying federal funds for the projects.

The projects are good, of course, as long as the Federal Government supplies the funds, and according to the Bureau of Reclamation, 95% of the cost will be repaid, so why be concerned? Twenty-five percent will be repaid by those who receive project water and revenues from electrical power generated on the Missouri River will pay the other 70%.

It sounds good, but like most oversimplified statements it is completely untrue. I invite the governor and those legislators who are interested to pick up a pencil and discover what the real costs are and who will be paying them.

First they should understand how the debt will be repaid. The landowners receiving project water are scheduled to pay back 25% of the project cost over 40 years starting ten years after the project has been completed at no interest. According to the bureau's payment schedule, power revenues will begin paying off irrigation projects in about 2024. Other requirements in the Missouri River Basin have a higher priority and must be paid off first.

Since the Norden project was authorized in 1972, the estimated cost has gone from $118,000,000 to $180,000,000 in 1977. Using the same rate of increase, about 10%, the estimated cost of the project would top $500,000,000 by 1986, only ten years down the road.

However, once construction starts, contractors and suppliers are paid off as work is completed, so the estimated increases would be reduced accordingly. Assuming that construction got underway in 1978 and the project was completed in 1986, a conservative estimate of the final cost would be near $350,000,000. But, this is peanuts — we have just begun to pay for the project.

The contractors and suppliers have now been paid off, and the $350,000,000 has become a debt owed to the Federal Government and must be added to the deficit, costing American taxpayers a minimum of 7% interest. During the next ten years at 7% interest, while the beneficiaries are receiving free water, the cost of the project will soar to over $640,000,000 or put another way the public will subsidize the project to the tune of over $400,000 a year for each landowner.

But then comes the monumental jump. With the same interest rate carried forward to 2024, when power revenues are scheduled to begin repayment, and after the no interest payments made by the beneficiaries have been deducted, the debt will zoom to over $4,000,000,000 or an average subsidy of $105,000,000 a year.

It doesn't require a CPA or a mathematical genius to understand that true costs include interest on borrowed money. All the bureau would have to do is ask any homeowner.

Passions of passing majorities

Anthony Lewis

London — In voting to repeal a local law that protected homosexuals from discrimination in jobs and public accommodations, the people of Miami, Fla., sent an unintended message. They reminded us that the rights of minorities are too important to be trusted to the passions of passing majorities.

That message has a trans-Atlantic resonance. For many voices in Britain these days are questioning the idea of unlimited majoritarian democracy, the political theory that has prevailed here for a long time. There is more talk than ever before of protecting individual liberty by setting limits — constitutional limits enforced by the courts — on what parliaments and governments may do in the name of the popular will.

The United States was founded on the belief that even representative government and regular elections are not enough to guarantee liberty. The framers of the Constitution feared not only the tyranny of George III but the tyranny of the majority. They therefore divided governmental power and restrained it by checks and balances. And they looked to judges, as Hamilton said in the Federalist, to assure "adherence to the rights of the Constitution, and of individuals."

Law has turned out to be an essential stabilizing influence in the unruly and often emotional politics of America. Judges, enforcing the Constitution, have kept presidents and Congresses, state legislatures and sheriffs from abusing their power.

The courts have hardly been consistent defenders of individual liberty, but the United States would surely have been much less free without them. Judges have been especially important in protecting the rights of what Chief Justice Harlan Stone called "discrete and insular minorities." Blacks and Jehovah's Witnesses, radicals and Indians would all have suffered a good deal more than they have if they had had to rely entirely on the good will of the majority for their rights.

The American Constitution protects individuals and minority groups only against mistreatment by official bodies. Ending discrimination by private employers or hotels or restaurants requires civil rights legislation of the kind Miami's voters vetoed for homosexuals.

But constitutional protection, albeit limited, can still be extremely significant. If the intolerant religiosity of Miss Anita Bryant persuaded the Florida Legislature to pass a law requiring all homosexuals to wear a yellow star, even the present Supreme Court would probably find the law so invidious as to be unconstitutional.

In Britain, there are no legal limits whatever on political power. There is no written constitution, and judges must enforce as law whatever Parliament enacts. If a bill were passed tomorrow that said a notch must be cut in the left ear of every left-handed person in England and Wales, nothing in British law could prevent its enforcement.

Britain has in effect relied on the wisdom and tolerance of its governing elite to prevent abuse of power. And for most of the last 200 years that system of self-restraint — of recognizing that some things are simply not done — has worked. Karl Marx wrote happily away in the British Museum, protected in his revolutionary theorizing not by a constitution but by the self-confidence of Victorian Britain.

But the conditions that once maintained British freedom have changed. This country is no longer governed by a small elite — Plantagenet Palliser and his friends. It is no longer so homogeneous; it has diverse immigrant and racial groups. And it is no longer such a self-confident country. Accordingly, it is in greater danger of over-reaching public emotion, of demagoguery, of abuse of power by politicians and bureaucrats.

In recent years there have been troubling examples of official intrusion on individual rights — actions that would have run into constitutional barriers in the United States. One was the law, rushed through Parliament by Harold Wilson's Labor government, that excluded from Britain East African Asians who held British passports and had no place else to go.

In short, this country reposes enormous, unreviewable discretion in those who temporarily hold political power. It is a system, as has been said, of alternating autocracies — of men, not laws. Confidence in the fairness of that system has been shaken. Many are no longer willing to trust fundamental freedoms to transitory majorities in the House of Commons, anymore than Americans would want to leave their fundamental freedoms to the voters of Miami.

Arab foothold in Panama?

Jack Anderson

Washington — There is disturbing evidence that Panama's strongman Omar Torrijos has struck a secret deal with Libya's wildman Muammar Qaddafi to give the Arab extremist a foothold in the Americas and to cooperate with the Arab boycott against the Jews.

The erratic Qaddafi is regarded as one of the world's most irresponsible rulers. He has armed radical terrorist groups, tried to purchase nuclear weapons, subsidized Uganda's zany Idi Amin and engaged in various harum-scarum intrigues.

Two months ago, he invited Torrijos to Tripoli for some joint rhetoric against the United States. With much bluster, they pledged political allegiance to each other, arranged to exchange military delegations and agreed upon economic cooperation.

But indications are beginning to leak out that the two leaders also reached a secret understanding, with some ominous overtones. Here are the details:

—A secret Panamanian document certifies that a contractor, who is constructing a hydroelectric project in Panama, "has never had any ties of any kind with Jewish or Zionist firms nor persons."

—Torrijos has quietly agreed to grant Libya one hectare of land in Panama for "commercial, industrial, financial and other international activities." This has raised a red flag with Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla. He has written a private letter to Vance, citing Qaddafi's "rather detailed record of terrorist support" and asking tersely: "What interpretation do you give to 'other international activities'?"

—Qaddafi has also arranged to establish a $100 million Arab bank in Panama. Government analysts are worried that he might use the bank to launder the money he hands out to terrorist groups.

In the past, Torrijos has been a mild Israeli supporter. But government analysts fear Panama is in such desperate financial straits that he might be willing to change his attitude toward the Jews in return for Arab petrodollars.

Beware of orange juice haters

Ron Hendren

Washington — Misguided religion is not required in the process of taking a tempest in a teapot and turning it into a hurricane, but it helps. And that, as much as the right to worship freely, is one reason why we should thank Almighty God for imbuing the Founding Fathers with the good sense to separate church from state constitutionally. Consider Dade County, Fla.

It may be hard to believe, but the recent wreckage there was the product of the most fearsome flapping of wings over four words that in this day would scarcely produce a worthwhile guffaw out at the Moose Lodge: 'Affectional or sexual preference.'' Those were the words, and they appeared tacked on to the end of a long list of thou - shalt - not - discriminate - on - the - basis - ofs, a local ordinance which sounds nice on paper, but which in reality has all the clout of the Pope at a Bar Mitzvah. (You doubt my word? Check your local statute; there's a good chance such a law is on the books in your town. And then look at the reality around you. Feel threatened? I doubt it.)

But down in Dade County, Anita Bryant felt threatened by the ordinance, and by the gays. And she lent her wholesome good looks, her famous name and her considerable energy to wiping out both — in the name of the Lord.

And that last part is what bothers me most. Miss Bryant is a born-again Christian of unusual fervor, who claims guidance from a higher authority in respect to her crusade. I can't help but believe the message got garbled somewhere along the way. My check of the New Testament turned up one instance in all His earthly sojourn when Christ picked up the whip; and that was to run the moneylenders out of the temple. Even then, there is no recorded evidence that He did more than pecuniary damage to any of them.

Miss Bryant, on the other hand, in confusing her cause with some of her Lord's children, has publicly whipped a large number of the latter. Even if she were right — that homosexuality is a disease — she has ended up stoning the bearers, trying to banish them, if not from the earth, at least to some isolated colony far from society.

It won't work and it is wrong. And the heartening part is that at least a third of Miss Bryant's Dade County neighbors recognized that it is wrong. But that isn't enough. Miss Bryant has said she is going national. Before more damage is done in His name, some of the Lord's more persuasive servants ought to sit down with her and discuss her crusade in the light of His mission.

Neither His cause nor this nation's can be benefited by a war of persecution waged on the secular stage against a small minority who are not doing Him, nor the nation nor yet Miss Bryant any perceptible injury.

For all the religious and political sense it makes, Miss Bryant might as well have chosen to pick on that dangerous minority, of which I admit to being one, who cannot abide orange juice.

By William Safire

Above all, he was determined not to make a mistake Every interview, every dedication speech presented new opportunities to the vice president to commit a blooper, every tie breaking vote in the Senate a chance to make a misstep Arnold Nichols was conscious of his ability to blow it all every time he opened his mouth He would be careful and he would someday be president Let others play to win all he had to do was to play not to lose

The vice president never looked forward to these weekly briefings on economic affairs by the treasury secretary because Bannerman was an impatient pedagogue, just as he was an incautious politician More important than the information conveyed was the regularity of their get-together It showed that Arnold Nichols was being kept closely informed and not by any mid-level assistant, either, but by the man who mattered in financial circles around the world, T Roy Bannerman

T Roy Bannerman was not talking economics today

' Mr Vice President" —that was the formal salutation, giving Nichols a feeling that the meeting was momentous — ' you and I have to discuss a matter that nobody else seems willing to face up to "

' The President's illness," suggested the vice president

The President s blindness," said Bannerman Everybody s pussyfooting around pretending it's all just an ailment that s going to go away in a few days, but it s not And what we've got right here, right now, is a goddam national crisis "

The vice president made soothing sounds, but Bannerman barreled ahead "I have it on the best authority that the President is permanently blind You know I don't jump to conclusions, Arnold But this was too important a matter to be left to one mortal man and a handful of sycophants who like to ride around in flight jackets, with presidential seals embroidered over their hearts

"The odds are that the president is blind for good That s bad news, tragic news But it won t go away, and it s malfeasance to go around as if we don t know what our responsibility is '

Do you believe, Mr Secretary" — Nichols could get formal, too — "that this is a matter in which it is correct for me to play any kind of role — I mean, any kind at all?"

"I know what you are getting at," Bannerman said slowly "You cannot ever be in a position that might be considered as being anxious to usurp power But a discussion of the President's disability is right and proper, because you have certain responsibilities to discharge — that is, if you think he is disabled.

"I think I know Sven Ericson, said Bannerman, "we've had a few battles in our time He's an intellectual, and a theorist, and a darling of the Georgetown crowd, and all the columnists love him, because he looks Lincolnesque But he's not He ll hang in there no matter what it does to the country, because he has some kind of messianic complex "

' You re being unkind," the vice president demurred

'He thinks you're a horse's ass, Arnold," Bannerman continued, ' and you know that He's said that on a dozen occasions, ever since the convention when I insisted that you be his running mate He'll use you as an excuse to hang on "

The vice president swallowed Bannerman was right on his facts, but wrong to drag him into this, and unnecessarily blunt Maybe someday he would have to testify to a Congressional committee about this, Nichols did not want to have to talk about a discussion of disability that he might have had today

Output surges 1.1% in May

Washington (UPI) — Industrial production surged 1 1 in May on the strength of stronger output of iron steel consumer products and business equipment, the Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday

The jump in the output of mines factories and utilities outstripped the 0 8% increase in April and was a solid sign the economy is expanding enough to create new job opportunities for the unemployed and June graduates

The increase was in the range of the 1 4% in March that was spurred by the resumption of manufacturing and mining after cold weather shut down operations in the East Midwest and South

President of the United States at the moment — and for the foreseeable future — can't find his way across the room! Stop feeling sorry for him, feel sorry for the country — if he can't bring himself to do his duty, somebody will have to do it for him."

"Please remember my words, Roy," said Nichols. "The words are 'tell the President, don't tell me.' I'll repeat, so we both never forget: 'tell the President, don't tell me.' "

"Your response is quite proper," Bannerman allowed, ignoring it as the vice president knew he would, "but you're the one who will have to call the cabinet meeting if a blind President will not resign. The secretary of state never will — he's in Ericson's pocket, and now he'll see his chance to act like a real secretary of state — and he outranks me. But you could call the meeting —"

"Do I have the authority?"

"You have the Nixon precedent during the Eisenhower illness. Have somebody research all that," Bannerman added.

"Don't trust Curtice," Bannerman warned, "he sees this as state's big chance, to be a bigshot while the country limps along without a president who can legally sign his name. Watch out for the attorney general, too. He's a down-the-line Ericson man, and so is Reed at defense."

"Don't rush into anything." Nichols wondered how to put his next point, so it wouldn't appear later that he had a hand in the situation. "The President faces some terrible difficulties in the next four days. I mean, simple things, that he may not realize now, will cause him great trouble. His first reaction — yours, mine — is to fight back. But he knows the country comes first. When he sees what it's like to be blind, how it hampers the Presidency, then, who knows? We may have to do nothing but applaud his sacrifice."

"Good sense," said Bannerman, and Nichols wished there were not a note of surprise in the comment. "I hadn't thought that through, the human element. I'll buy that. We'll wait a few days. But if nothing happens then —"

The vice president shrugged, and repeated his catechism: "Tell the President, don't tell me."

"I understand you bring some first-hand experience to your job," the President of the United States said. Fowler said only "yes." The last thing blind people wanted to hear was the problems of other blind people. The newly blind also did not look forward to meeting new people, whose voices could not be connected to known faces.

"Let me describe myself, Sir," he said, keeping his voice low but speaking rapidly. "I'm a little guy, square-built, round-faced. Fifty-two years old, liberal, hair thinning on top, striking black mustache."

"You trim it yourself?"

"I do everything myself, Mr. President. Not because I have to, my wife could do it for me, but I run my own life because it makes me feel cocky, and I need that." His contact made, the therapist induced the patient to perform a simple task. "This is the famous Lincoln Sitting Room. Could you describe it to me?"

"Sure." Presidents would like describing parts of the White House, Fowler imagined; it established their connection with all that went before.

"This easy chair, where I am, belonged to President Buchanan. He was an old man when he got to the White House, and he said, 'All my friends are dead, and all my enemies are now my friends.' Good line. I wonder who wrote it for him. To my left, your right, is a bookcase, used to have Sandburg's life of Lincoln, and the complete set of Lincoln's works, but I put them downstairs in the official library because I need the space here for books I'm reading now."

He paused. "I guess they can put Sandburg back. Only thing that's Lincoln in this sitting room now is a bust, the Volk bust, on the desk, here on my right."

"Put yourself at the center of a clock," said the therapist, "like in those air force movies, and say I'm 12 o'clock. Where's the desk?"

"Three o'clock."

"The phone?"

"Two in here. One on the desk, say at two o'clock, the other at my right hand, toward five o'clock."

"Window?"

"Behind me. Six o'clock."

"Bathroom?"

"Three o'clock, a john, no shower. My bathroom is down the hall, off my bedroom."

"Ready for lesson number one? Take me there."

Very slowly, the President rose, touched his visitor's shoulder and led him out of the Lincoln Sitting Room and Fowler could visualize him, arm outstretched, working along the walls he thought he could remember. The President passed through the Lincoln Bedroom, telling the agent not to help or to say anything.

As they reached what Fowler judged to be the central hallway that was his route in, the President moved ahead more confidently until his hand jabbed into a wall.

"That's a wall," Ericson announced. "That's a new wall, it's never been there until today. If you don't really want to use the can, I may kill you."

"Right back." Fowler crossed the room, sensed the doorway, quickly touched the shower curtain, sink, toilet and towel, and proceeded to take a pee, flush the toilet, rinse his hands, humming all the while, as if he were familiar with the bathroom.

He was well aware that Ericson must have spent agonizing moments there, making sure of his aim, groping for a towel, breaking bottles. He made a mental note to tell Abelson to change all the bottles and glasses to plastic and to install a grip for the bath.

"Now, let me lead you back to the Lincoln Sitting Room," he said briskly. "Grab my arm firmly and let's move quickly." He took the President out into the hall, through the doorway and back to where they had started, confidently, easily

He worried about cane

"Good trick, Doc Now tell me how you did it"

"Step count, obviously," Fowler told him "Six steps out of the door, 27 steps down the hall doorway, 12 steps to Mr Lincoln's room, nine, through it to the Sitting Room Now you want to know how to keep from banging into walls We have a new gimmick for that" He produced a round, thick object on a watchband and pressed it into the President's hand

"That's a wrist sonar, not commercially available yet, but you can use it instead of a cane"

"I was worried about having to use a cane" said the President "That would have made me an object of pity This electronic gadget is much better, Hank"

Fowler decided to give him a dash of cold water "It's not nearly as good as a cane, Mr President Skillful use of a long cane is still the best way for a blind person to go anywhere The sonar watch is just a gimmick for you to use until you stop being self-conscious about arousing pity. Let me give it to you straight. a watch looks better, a cane works better."

"At this point," said Ericson, "I am infinitely more interested in the way it looks. If I go stumbling around, or act like a man who can't get from here to there without a blind man's cane, there will be those who will hand me a tin cup and tell me to change jobs."

After some banter, respectful but not obsequious, the therapist felt the time was ripe to slip in a question· "Have trouble when you wake up in the morning?" He could feel the President's chill in the silence

"What do you mean, Hank?"

"I went blind in my thirties, result of an accident, same as you, and what used to bother the hell out of me was waking up in the morning Before, you woke up, you opened your eyes — that was part of waking up. Not to see when you woke up — it was like not knowing you were up, or still dreaming, or what. Then I used to dream I was up when I wasn't and that made waking up worse. Eerie sensation. Started my whole day in a sweat."

"That doesn't happen to me," said the President. "I'm fine in the morning."

He'll be a tough one to open up, thought Fowler. And he won't adjust to the operations of his new job until he comes to grips with the reality of being a blind man. A lot was riding on this therapy — not just the smooth operation of the presidency, but the hopes of 20 million handicapped people in America

Fowler would handle his patient with care The President may be euphoric now, with his discovery of electronic aids and mental tymnastics, but he would soon slip into the inescapable depression of the newly blind, which Fowler remembered vividly

"You think I can bring this whole thing off, Hank?"

"Any man who thinks he can run this country," said Fowler, "has to have an ego a mile high. Let's start with that. If you think you can run it at all, then you probably can convince yourself that you can run it with a handicap, like loss of speech, or sight, or hearing, or legs. So it's safe to say you have the motivation."

The President stood up, moved over to the desk, pushed some papers out of the way and sat on the desk top, Fowler following every motion with his ears. "Now I want to ask you something as an American, Hank, and not as a psychologist, or a blind man: do you think it's right for me to make the try?" Fowler knew what the President wanted to hear, but he decided to give him a taste of what life was like on the blind side.

"Never ask a blind man not to think like a blind man."

Senate condemns KGB's interrogation of reporter

Moscow (AP) — American newsman Robert C Toth was grilled for 6½ hours Wednesday by angry Soviet KGB agents who told him he was a witness, and "not the accused" the Los Angeles Times correspondent said

"They wouldn't say who the accused were or the charges. It was 'none of my business'" said Toth, who was picked up by secret police after a Soviet scientist gave him an article on parapsychology

In Washington, the U S Senate approved a resolution condemning Toth's detention as a "gross violation" of the 1975 Helsinki accords and called on the Carter administration to take "every appropriate means" to obtain Toth's safe return

President Carter told reporters, "We've expresssed our strongest objections about what has been done about Mr. Toth" He said any attention given to the Toth case by the international media "will have an impact" at a time when an international conference in Belgrade is reviewing human rights progress since the Helsinki meeting

"It is our understanding that Toth has been told he is not going to be formally charged," a U.S. State Department official in Washington said.

Other U.S. officials said the information came from Toth and not from Soviet officials.

Toth told colleagues in Moscow that he was still not certain whether he will face charges. He noted that during four hours of questioning Tuesday the word "spy" was used about his activities.

Los Angeles Times publisher Otis Chandler said Toth's harassment "marks an escalation — a dangerous escalation — of the historic Soviet abuse of journalists to make whatever diplomatic or political point the Russians want to make at the moment."

Widow pleads for clear record

Associated Press

Mrs. Slovik
. . soldier's widow

Washington (AP) — The Pentagon came face to face with an unusual war casualty Wednesday, the crippled widow of the only American soldier shot for desertion in this century

Antoinette Slovik was slightly stooped in her wheel chair as she asked the Army Board for the Correction of Military Records to clear the name of her late husband, Pvt Eddie D Slovik

Slovik confessed to twice fleeing combat and was executed by firing squad in France on Jan 31, 1945 Mrs Slovik seeks $68,000 — payment plus interest on the soldier's National Service Life Insurance policy

Federal law says those convicted of desertion or killed by lawful punishment cannot receive insurance benefits

However, Ray Williams, secretary of the Army Board, said previously that while the law clearly is against the widow's claim, "the board may correct any military record where, in its judgment, such action is necessary to correct an error or to remove an injustice "

Mrs Slovik, 62, epileptic and arthritic, also asked the board to have her late husband's body removed from the dishonorable section of a small cemetery in France to a grave where she said he might rest in peace

Mrs Slovik was dressed in a white pants suit She spoke slowly in a gruff voice to the five civilian panel members who voted in secret following the hearing on whether to grant her the requested relief

The panel's vote is expected to be announced in three to four weeks, after it has gone for approval to Asst Army Secretary Robert Nelson

Wednesday was not Mrs Slovik's first trip to the Pentagon She was here in 1953, still trying after eight years to find out how her husband died Until then, she had nothing but a two sentence telegram To this date she has not received a death certificate

Records released to the widow in 1953 painted a grim portrait of an impoverished youth from Detroit, terrified of combat, shot as an example to others

Allied forces had just suffered heavy losses in the Battle of the Bulge campaign Soldiers shot off fingers and toes for a free ticket away from the front line to the relative safety of a hospital

Slovik was one of 49 men sentenced to death for desertion Only Slovik was executed

He begged then Gen Dwight D Eisenhower for clemency in a handwritten letter which he signed "Yours for Victory, Pvt Eddie D Slovik "

Eisenhower rejected the clemency appeal Maj Frederick J Bertolet, who reviewed the sentence for Eisenhower, noted the importance of killing Slovik to set an example

Disc-star shows how planets evolve

Atlanta (UPI) — An Arizona astronomer disclosed Wednesday that a disc-star, a new phenomenon of space, has been discovered in the constellation Cygnus

Dr Rodger I Thompson said the future studies of the star trillions of miles from Earth will give scientists a chance to see how planets are formed

Thompson presented a paper at the American Astronomical Society convention detailing his work in infrared plotting of the giant star and its planets

He said the star is about 30 times the size of the sun with a white-hot "disc ' of circulating matter extending as far out from its center as Earth s orbit extends from the sun

Beyond the visible portion, he said, there is a gravity field with planets circulating in darkness Thompson said, however, that the planets give off no light of their own and cannot be seen

I think this is a spectacular step forward in theories of star formation," said Thompson an associate professor of astronomy at the University of Arizona ' It s the first star we've been able to identify as being in its early stages of formation

The star, known only as MWC 349, was first found in the 1930s, but its formation of planets was not known until now Thompson said new observation methods, including use of a flying observatory, made it possible to study planetary evolution with infrared photography

He said the star is 7,000 light years from Earth in the constellation Cygnus

Since the star is much more massive than our own sun it will develop planets much faster, said Thompson But it will never be in the same shape as our own solar system because the central star is different It s much hotter and more massive

He said the new star will also flicker out more quickly than smaller stars

' Our own system is good for about 5-billion years he said This one will run out in about 100 million "

The star was discovered by a team of scientists from Arizona University and the NASA Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif

Revived boy, 5, dies

Hospital officials said Gerald suddenly stopped breathing and died about 5 30 p m Tuesday

I m going to miss him he was my right-hand man," the boy s father said

Mr and Mrs Gerald Finkbeiner had completed their daily visit to their son s bedside just a short time before the boy died They learned of their son s death by telephone when they reached home

Gulf Oil, two officers accused of giving IRS man vacations

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Gulf Oil Corp and two of its officers were indicted Wednesday on federal charges that the company gave paid vacations to an Internal Revenue Service supervisor who was investigating its tax returns and campaign contributions

The nine-count indictment named Gulf Oil, Fred Standefer, its vice president for tax administration, and Joseph Fitzgerald, manager for federal tax compliance

They were accused of paying $3,294 92 so Cyril J Nederberger, the IRS supervisor in Pittsburgh, could take vacations in Florida, Nevada, California and New Jersey

Gulf denied any violation of the law

Leaping lizards, turtles and a pet 'Monty' python

Story and photos by Harry Jackson

How could any female iguana resist Naviaux's confident, handsome male pet?

Lizards, snakes, frogs and turtles may seem like strange pets, but that depends on your point of view.

"They're not like dogs or cats," said John Naviaux, 15, an amateur herpetologist. "But then you don't have to housebreak them."

At Naviaux's 9th and Sycamore home, in his small but efficiently equipped basement room, he keeps about 25 different reptiles.

The collection includes exotic nonpoisonous frogs, lizards, an iguana and three turtles including a snapper. Topping it off are a four-and-a-half-foot Burmese python — named Monty — and a shorter, but meaner, reticulated python.

"That python's a redneck. He bites anything," Naviaux said describing his three-foot pet.

The youth has collected reptiles for more than a year. The collection had a spontaneous beginning.

He and his brother caught a lizard near South Bend. "We brought him home and kept him in a cooler with a Saran Wrap top," he said.

Since then, his collection has grown along with his facilities.

At one time, he had more than 35 reptiles until an illness killed all of one species of lizard.

The Saran Wrap-topped cooler has bowed to more sophisticated glass-fronted cases and aquariums — worth more than $1,200. Naviaux designed the new equipment and his older brother built it.

Sand once used in the bottom of the cooler, has been replaced by cedar shavings, artistic driftwood logs and pooted plants which flourish under the warm lamps in the cages.

He's invested more than $600 in the collection, a habit he supports with his job at the Ager Memorial Zoo and occasional help from his mom and dad.

With more than four linear feet of reference books and all of bis experience at the zoo and home, Naviaux is still learning certain dos and don'ts — sometimes the hard way.

"I bought a sea anemone for a salt-water aquarium," he said. "I was kind of stroking it when it fired a stinger into my finger. I spaced out for almost 30 seconds. It was weird."

He's been bitten so often by the smaller pet python he's almost immune to the pain.

"I like the other one better," he said referring to his larger Burmese python. "It can be handled real easy."

Naviaux did have problems getting his hobby off the ground. Finding python stores isn't an easy task.

But youth's initiative won out.

"One day I was in (a local pet store) and they said they couldn't get what I wanted," he explained. "But I looked on one of the boxes their snakes came in and copied down the return address. I wrote them a letter and got a good answer.

"Then another time I was able to get a look in (the pet store's) price book and I copied down a lot of addresses then," he said.

But he found that many companies won't sell to collectors, only to retail pet stores and zoos.

"They'd send me price lists, but when they found I wasn't a pet store they wouldn't deal with me. But I kept looking," he said.

Naviaux's persistence paid off when he found an exotic animal store in New York state that was tickled pink to get his business.

His most recent order for a python and six lizards ran $110 plus about $20 in freight charges.

"And I just ordered a rainbow boa constrictor," he said. The addition will complete his snake collection.

Naviaux doesn't spend much time doing whatever 15-year-olds do nowadays; he has his wards to care for.

"When I have to be at work at 8 a.m. I'm up at six taking care of them," he said.

He keeps a log of feeding, on the snakes especially because they eat live food — usually mice and hamsters he gets from the zoo.

He raises mealworms and crickets for his other reptiles.

Convincing Mom and Dad of his hobby wasn't easy for the reptile collector.

"Mom didn't care for it at first, but after awhile she came down and held the lizards. But she still won't touch the snakes," he said.

"Dad's about the same," he said. "He doesn't mind anything but the snakes. He really doesn't care for them.

Dad, (John A. Naviaux, not senior) seconded that.

"Yes, the snakes are a bit disconcerting. I really don't know why he chooses this particular (hobby). But we have four other children and we've tried to encourage them in the things they do," he said.

"The school encourages his growth in this area too," the father continued. "We don't get complaints from the neighbors even though a lot of people are afraid of snakes. But then a lot of people are afraid of dogs too."

At times, dad's even philosophical about his son's endeavors:

"He's curious. This helps his curiosity," he said. "And then we've found that someone who respects animals will respect all forms of life."

Naviaux hoists "Monty" the python.

Icebergs touted to aid drought

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — Tugging an iceberg up from the Antarctic to cultivate the world's deserts is feasible, a researcher says, and could prompt a tourist bonanza in the process.

The concept has been proposed before, but California water officials — suffering through the worst drought in the state's history — aren't rejecting it out of hand.

John Hult, president of Application Concepts and Technology Association in Santa Monica, renewed his proposal in a paper submitted to the two-week United Nations-California Department of Water Resources' conference on desert development.

Hult, who has written four papers on the subject since 1973, wants California to get involved in a $20 million pilot project.

"The California coast as a destination would also excite the greatest revenue recovery from first-day covers, souvenirs, film and literary returns, and publicity of all types," Hult said.

He said icebergs, wrapped in plastic "wet suits" to cut evaporation and melting, could be linked into trains and brought slowly to areas where they would be valuable. It would take less energy than is now required to desalt water or pump water long distances in aqueducts, Hult said.

Ronald Robie, state water resources director, said that "nothing is too crazy to give some thought to . . . I've only seen studies from proponents. I think the proponent is looking for money to spend on studies and I don't think the state is willing to spend money on that."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — jack of hearts.

Dear Mr. Becker: I suffer from nightmares — bridge nightmares, that is. I have this recurring dream where I'm South and always open the bidding with a club — because I play five-card majors and can't open a spade.

West and North pass and East doubles for takeout. Of course I know that if I pass West may also pass, but I also realize that a takeout double is taken out far more often than it is left in. In any case, if I run to one spade I may be jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

So I play the hand at one club doubled and West invariably leads the jack of hearts, which I duck. West leads another heart to East's king and East returns the nine of clubs.

I cover with the ten, which loses to the jack, and West cashes the A-K of clubs, drawing all my trumps. He then plays his last heart to East's ace and East cashes the nine, on which West discards his one and only spade.

East switches to the queen of diamonds, covered by the king and ace, and West returns a diamond to East's jack. East thereupon leads the jack of spades, which I cover with the queen, but West ruffs and wins the last three tricks with the 10-9-5 of diamonds.

So the result is that I never take a trick, going down 2,000 points, and things have now gotten to such a desperate state, healthwise, that I am beginning to seriously think that maybe I should give up playing five-card majors. Sorrowfully yours, Constant Reader.

Failure is quite a story

The Staffer

By Harry
Jackson

Being a feature writer is fantastic when it comes to meeting people, hearing idyllic stories and watching things others only read about or see on television.

But occasionally after writing about unbridled success, brilliant discoveries, and great hobbies I feel something's missing.

Somewhere in this porcelain world of mine, there must be someone who's a total failure. Someone who's tried everything and succeeded at nothing, a flop.

Finding someone who'll admit this is difficult. But, I was able to dig up a guy who must be the father of all failures.

He's Jim Dud's oldest boy, Fuddy. But that's the least of his problems.

He's not good looking. When he was born, the nurse then went to the waiting room and told his father: "Congratulations. We're virtually sure it's human."

Adding insult to injury, he had a brother who sweat cologne, whose hair grew naturally into the current style and whose skin had a natural tan.

As Fuddy got older, things deteriorated. He got a job in the mailroom of a major corporation and after 10 years rose to assistant clerk.

Things looked even brighter when he was promoted to head of the mailroom. But three days later, the firm got a government contract, instituted an affirmative action program and fired him in favor of a pregnant, homosexual, ethnic-surnamed woman of interracial parentage.

When I started to interview him, he told me, "I'd rather not talk about any of this. Isn't there someone more interesting you could talk to?"

I couldn't let it die that easily.

Come on, I said, what are your hobbies, your interests? You know, tell us about you.

"Okay, okay. Well, my favorite color is grey. My favorite musician is Hosefi Kufka . . ."

Who?

"Kufka, Kufka. He's third trumpet in Lawrence Welk's band," Dud said smiling through a chipped tooth. "Have you ever heard him do the second harmony for the Missouri River Polka . . ."

Yeah, yeah, I broke in. What do you do for relaxation?

"I sleep."

Dud's dog walked into the room, bit him on the leg and walked out again.

Don't some of these things depress you?

"I tried to kill myself once by shooting myself in the head, but just when I pulled the trigger I sneezed and missed. The bullet went through the front door and hit one of my neighbors in the knee. But I can't talk about it. It's still under litigation."

What are you doing for a living now since that unfortunate change in jobs.

"Right now I import bodies for medical schools."

Import bodies?

"Sure from Abrah, Saudi Arabia," he explained. "The company's called Abrah Cadavers, Inc."

He stood up to bid me goodbye and twisted his ankle.

I left the house, opening the screen door, which fell off the hinges, then walked to my car.

While walking I heard a massive crash from inside the house, then turned to see a puff of dust and smoke come from the front door. I didn't return to see what happened.

Readers disagree on trying marital bed

Dear Abby

By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You never gave worse advice than when you told that 20-year-old theology student to go ahead and get married without getting any premarital sexual experience. You said the mating instinct was natural, and he didn't need any lessons.

Well, mating and lovemaking are two different things. Any animal can mate, but lovemaking is an art that requires instruction and practice to perfect.

For a man to jump into the marriage bed without previous experience (assuming his bride is as innocent as he is), could result in disaster! It could ruin their marriage and their relationship.

It is a crime that you, with your old-fashioned moral values, are giving advice to millions.

MODERN MAN

DEAR MODERN: Call it "mating" or "lovemaking" or whatever you wish, it's the same act. A truly kind, loving, unselfish man does not need to be taught tenderness and consideration. That will come as naturally as the mating instinct. Almost every church has premarital counseling, and there are some excellent manuals on the subject.

Read on for another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for telling that young man that it wasn't necessary for him to rush out and get sexual experience before marrying.

When my wife and I were married, we were both virgins. Somehow we managed to learn together. We have been married for 22 years and have three children, and may I say that we have a fantastic sex life. There is something especially reassuring and sacred about our relationship, knowing that each has always been totally and exclusively committed to the other.

DUKE

And yet another:

DEAR ABBY: Talk about two dumb kids: My husband and I were about as inexperienced as two people could be. He was 20 and I was 17 when we married. That was 66 years ago, and now we can look back and smile, because we figured out exactly what had to be done and how to do it, and we may have invented a few new things, for all we know. And by the way, we may have slowed up a bit of late, but we haven't given up entirely.

A roll-away safe wasn't very safe

Calabasas, Calif. (UPI) — A roll-away safe is easier to move about, but that has its disadvantages, as Charles Cates discovered.

Thieves broke into Cates' house and rolled away his roll-away safe, containing $45,000 worth of antique jewelry and old coins, Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputies reported.

Fun, music mixed

Santiago, Chile (UPI) — An Argentine musical group named "Les Luthiers" caused a sensation in Chile recently. The group specializes in making music and fun simultaneously. It parodies classical and popular music and plays bizarre instruments of the musicians' own designs to sellout crowds in Santiago's Municipal Theater.

Young people can earn more without paying taxes

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — If your son or daughter has an after-school or summer job, it's going to be worth a lot more to him this year The new tax law has increased the amount of money he can earn without paying income taxes That's a saving not only for the youngster but for you, if you're counting on the child's income to help pay for college or contribute to expenses around the house

A single person can now earn up to $3,200 without paying any federal income taxes That s 25% more than he was allowed to earn tax-free just two years ago

The new $2,200 standard deduction accounts for a good part of the increase Another big saving is the general tax credit (just extended by Congress for another year) The remainder comes from the familiar $750 personal exemption

If your child didn't pay income taxes last year and doesn t expect to this year, either, he can arrange not to have any tax money withheld from his paycheck He does this by filing the tax-withholding form W-4E with his employer (rather than the usual form W 4) The employer may have this form himself, if not, you can get one from any Internal Revenue Service office

It s well worth your time and trouble to get one of these forms By eliminating withholding, it puts more money into your child s pocket right now It also may save him the trouble of filing a tax return next April

If a youngster makes $2,950 or less this year he wouldn t normally have to file a tax return However if taxes were withheld from his paycheck, he ll have to file to get the refund

If he makes more than $2,950, he has to file a tax return even if no taxes are due But as long as the deductions and tax credits wipe out all his tax liability (as they will if his earnings were $3,200 or less), he's still eligible to avoid tax withholding through form W-4E

Employers who hire young people might make a note about these forms and keep a stack on hand It s something you can do to make your employees take-home checks a little fatter without cost to yourself

When young people are filing their own tax returns and taking their own personal exemptions, parents sometimes think they can no longer deduct those children on the family tax return But that's not so You can take a $750 deduction (plus a general tax credit) for every child under 19 or any child over 19 who is a full-time student, as long as you provide more than one-half of his or her support

This holds true even if the child is working in your business and you re deducting his salary as a business expense In that case you d get the business deduction plus the personal exemption on your own tax return, the child would get the personal exemption and standard deduction

Life Begins At Forty

Not long ago the front page of our local paper carried the tragic story of an 82-year old woman who was killed in the course of a mugging Her assailant was captured quickly due to alert observation of several persons who were nearby at the time of the attack, which occurred too quickly for any effective intervention The story had a picture with it, so it attracted much attention

Some time later, as I read on through the paper I came upon a little item on the bottom corner of an inside page A 23-year old male clerk in a sports shop had been murdered just at closing time His name reported along with the shop owner s comment that he had been a conscientious honest worker No one saw what happened, his friends discovered his body when they came to pick him up for dinner His story got about two inches of space

What does this tell us about the news values of that newspaper'

The old lady was a poignant victim sure to excite feelings of anger and sadness on the part of many readers The young man s untimely death was appraised by the news department as just another crime

I was reminded of these two juxtaposed stories and my reaction to them when I read the following by Dr Richard Kalish in the May issue of the Journal of Gerontology

Much of the popular media dealing with the elderly emphasizes what a terrible thing it is to be old Their views parallel those of minority groups and women I can t deny the efficacy of such propaganda in influencing political and economic decisions, but I often wonder what the effect is on the elderly person who is constantly confronted with a barrage of reading television shows and general discussion on the misfortunes of being old '

Christine R Lyman put it a little differently Too often society has turned the aged themselves into a problem instead of using their wisdom to help solve our real dilemma With its remorseless accent on youth society forces people to become obsolete before their time It forgets that people considered too old often have the youngest ideas of all

She goes on to detail Frank Lloyd Wright s age when he designed the Guggenheim Museum (76) Grandma Moses age when she painted The Rainbow (101) and Archibald MacLeish s present age (82) at which he has recently published A Night Watch on Boston '

People of any age who can accept where they are in their lives and invest their energies in the here and now don t waste time counting years they are too busy living them And aging brings with it the wealth of experience Lyman who graduated from college in 1929 views herself this way

I am happy with my age My perspective is broader than it was when I was younger and my prejudices are disappearing I am more honest with myself I am willing to accept things as they are

Lower Loup opposes Carter water plan

Ord (UPI) — The Lower Loup Natural Resources District has decided to oppose Carter administration proposals on various water projects throughout the country

The board Tuesday reviewed Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus proposal to Carter on the status of various water projects

The board said it felt the administration s proposals indicated a tendency by the federal government to become more involved in ground and surface water regulation said NRD Manager Dick Beran

The board directed Beran to write a letter to the Nebraska congressional delegation opposing Carter administration views

The federal government should not get involved with the proposals for regulating ground water or surface water This is purely a state matter and should be left in the hands of the states or other local subdivisions Beran said

The House ignoring Carter s wishes, Tuesday rejected a move to slash 16 water projects from the public works appropriation measure The appropriation bill now goes to the Senate

2nd Niobrara area favored

Omaha (AP) — The Save the Niobrara River Association favors preserving a stretch of the river in its natural state but does not agree with the federal government on the proposed stretch

The group said Tuesday it hopes to convince the Carter administration to protect the river in the area of the proposed Norden Dam not just to the west

Wayne Smithberg of Omaha spokesman for the organization said the most scenic and wild part of the river is east of Valentine

The Carter administration recommended last month that a 120 mile stretch from the river s junction with Antelope Creek to the Sparks gauging station be studied for possible inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System

Rivers in that system are protected from development Nebraska at present has no stretch of protected river

Smithberg said the association will check with the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to see why the 120 mile stretch was chosen

He said members hope to take federal officials down the river by canoe to convince them they have not recommended the best stretch

The association re elected Wes Sandall as president and Mrs Elsie Leonard secretary at its annual meeting Both are from the Bassett area

Doctor's blood test can't be evidence

Results of a blood test ordered by a doctor cannot be used later by police to determine whether a driver was intoxicated, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday

In a 4-3 decision, the high court upheld a Morrill County District Court ruling on a civil case between John Wilkinson and Dolores Branch, the wife of a man killed in a one-car accident while a passenger in Wilkinson's car

Mrs Branch had sued Wilkinson for damages, charging him with negligence, including intoxication and speeding But the district court had not allowed evidence of a blood test taken after the accident, while Wilkinson was unconscious, because the test was not ordered by law enforcement officials The diagnostic test was ordered by a doctor treating Wilkinson, and only later became available to authorities .

The lower court said the blood test was privileged under the doctor patient relationship, and the high court agreed

The high court said the implied consent statutes, which require a driver to submit to an alcohol test requested by law enforcement officials, applies only in criminal cases and only when the driver has been arrested This was a civil case and Wilkinson was never under arrest, the court noted

The blood test showed he had 011% alcohol in his blood, below the state limit of 10% Mrs Branch had sought to include any evidence of alcohol consumption by Wilkinson, to bolster her charge of negligence against him

In discussing the issue of speeding, the majority opinion, written by Chief Justic Paul White, said the facts of the case did not support a claim of gross negligence

The car was traveling on a relatively straight portion of U S Highway 26 east of Bridgeport when it went off the road It traveled 468 feet on the unpaved shoulder, returned to the highway, crossed the center line and struck a bridge abutment on the other side The car then went 69 feet in the air, hit the ground, traveled 36 feet, flew or rolled another 31 feet, and finally came to a rest The car was demolished

In his dissent, Justice Thomas White said a jury could easily find negligence on the part of Wilkinson for speeding, not watching the road and not having the car under control Justices Hale McCowan and L M Clinton agreed

White also said the issue of the blood test was not properly submitted and should not have been ruled upon by the high court

'Disorderly conduct law is too vague'

Rushville (UPI) — Sheridan County Associate Judge Frank Hutfless has ruled that the state law for disorderly conduct is unconstitutional, contending the law is vague in defining a criminal offense

Dennis King, the deputy Sheridan County attorney, said Hutfless s ruling means that people facing a disorderly conduct charge in Sheridan County "can beat it because this judge has made this decision '

King contended the law " is clear and constitutional on its face

Hutfless's ruling, made Monday and released Wednesday, came in the case of Francine Charging Thunder, who had been charged in connection with a disturbance at a Gordon tavern Her case was dismissed

In his ruling, Hutfless questioned "whether the statute (28-823) sets forth standards in a manner such that the average, intelligent person will be able to understand which of his or her actions might result in punishment "

The statute defines disorderly conduct as that intending to cause public inconvenience, an annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk, and Hutfless criticized the use of public inconvenience, annoyance and alarm

There are plenty of specific statutes to cover most of the crimes, he said, "and 28-823 is a catchall for those who are not prosecuted under those (other) specific statutes "

He described the law as a "convenient plea bargain device When asked if he felt the law had been misused by prosecutors he declined comment

Beef checkoff 'winning support'

Omaha (AP) — Despite opponents' claims that the proposed national beef promotion checkoff program would be a waste of money, officials of Nebraska livestock groups say there is wide support for the program.

Nebraska Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher said while his department is not involved with the program and has not taken any position on it, he has found considerable support throughout the state for the checkoff. Kreuscher said he believes the program will pass in Nebraska.

Registration for the checkoff vote continues through Friday and the election is scheduled July 5-15. The Nebraska Beef Development Task Force said that as of Tuesday about 9,000 Nebraska cattlemen had registered to vote in the referendum.

Proponents say the checkoff will provide about $30 to $40 million increased funds for beef research, consumer education and promotion to counteract what they say is misinformation about their product.

"We see today a great deal of inaccurate propaganda that . . . tends to reflect adversely on meat," said Don Magdanz of the Omaha-based National Livestock Feeders Association (NLFA). "Much of it simply is not true."

Magdanz said existing cattlemen's groups don't have the funds for such promotion and research.

"None of us have the money," Magdanz said. "We're supported by membership dues. We frankly don't have the money."

The Feeders Association's 12,000 members have voted favorably on the proposed checkoff program on several occasions, he said.

Mickey Stewart said members of the Nebraska Stock Growers Association are very much in favor of the program and have been "working their hearts out" for its passage.

Stewart said many of the opponents base their opposition on misinformation and some view it as "just another tax."

And, Stewart said the funds are needed for more beef research not to "advertise our way out of trouble," but to develop foreign markets and provide accurate information on the product and what consumers want.

"We've got so much pressure for our product from supposed nutritionists and supposed consumer activists, who are just lashing out with total misinformation," he said. "We've got to finance it ourselves so we can work to maintain the integrity of our product."

South Omahans fuming over manure plant odor

Omaha (UPI) — City officials pledged Wednesday to make an attempt to sweeten the smell coming from the South Omaha Paunch manure plant.

Officials said odors from the packing house waste treatment facility have worsened in recent days because of work being done there and complaints have flowed into city hall.

Douglas County Board Chairman George Buglewicz, who lives three blocks from the plant, said he had to get up and to close his windows at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday because the smell was so bad.

Buglewicz subsequently asked Gov. J. James Exon to intervene.

In a letter to the governor, Buglewicz said South Omahans were sick and tired of empty promises from the city to correct the problem.

Buglewicz said the governor should "take a personal interest in forcing the city to solve the problems or close the plant down." The commissioner said some residents were considering a lawsuit.

Sewer Maintenance Engineer James Belina said experiments were being conducted with various fogging agents to mask the odor.

"They come in various flavors," Belina said. "I probably smell like a lemon orchard right now."

Rep. Smith blames Feds for greater rural burden

United Press International

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., Wednesday said low farm prices, combined with increasing government regulation and inflation, are at the root of rural America's economic problems.

Increased government regulation and inflation are caused by excessive federal spending, Mrs. Smith added.

In a telephone release from her Washington office, Mrs. Smith said she testified before a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee and outlined several problems facing rural America.

"The policies of the federal government impact very heavily on the people of my district," Mrs. Smith said. "Unfortunately, these policies usually bring some economic hardship to one segment or another of the population."

Wheat levy rises as marketing budget is increased

United Press International

The Nebraska Wheat Advisory Committee Wednesday said it has adopted a budget of $303,000 for wheat market development and research during the coming year.

The committee said a check-off levy of four mills, or four-tenths of one cent, per bushel would be required to fund the program.

The rate, which goes into effect Oct. 1, replaces the 2.5 mill levy in effect since the grower-financed program of foreign marketing, research and promotion began in 1955.

"We have a heavy surplus of wheat again in this country that must be relieved by expanding overseas markets," said committee chairman Ray Davis of Potter.

He said the budget includes an increase of 11% in Nebraska's share of funding the market development activities of two organizations with representatives in Europe, South America, the Middle East, Africa and throughout Asia.

County throws out budget 'timesaver'

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

County commissioners decided Wednesday that they can save time in this year's budget review process by eliminating a step that was designed to save time.

The commissioners had planned to sit down for several working sessions to study various budget requests before scheduling hearings with department and agency heads.

This preliminary review, it was felt, would give commissioners a better handle on the impact of each budget request, and help them decide what questions to put to the administrators during the actual hearings.

Administrators would know in advance what questions they would be asked, would be better prepared and the hearings would go faster.

Wednesday the commissioners started pouring over the budget documents, beginning with the county attorney's office.

The county attorney's request shows an increase of $200,000 over last year, largely because of added personnel and promotions.

Commissioners wanted to know why.

"Let's get (County Atty. Ron) Lahners up here and ask him," said Commissioner Bob Colin.

Administrative assistant Wayne Hart explained that review without the department heads present had been agreed upon.

"We could save more time by having the heads here," Colin said.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton agreed. "I don't want to put a lot of time into it just to put in time," he said, noting that after looking at 20 budgets the commissioners would forget what they wanted to ask about them.

So all three commissioners agreed to let Hart examine the budgets and prepare his own list of questions for department heads, then schedule reviews with the administrators present.

"Then he (Hart) will get the criticism," said Commissioner Jan Gauger.

"That's O.K., let him get the flack," said Colin.

County budget hearings will begin Wednesday, June 22. Joint city-county budgets will be reviewed Friday, June 17, by the City-County Common.

Moline Boys Choir church concert open to public

The Moline Boys Choir, a choir of 40 boys from Moline, Ill., will present a concert in the sanctuary of St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 740 No. 70th, at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

The choir has toured throughout the United States, Europe and the South Pacific.

Kermit Wells, choir director, has a masters degree in music education from the University of Illinois. He is the vocal music coordinator for the Moline Public School system.

The choir is on a western tour which will take them through 10 states and into Mexico. The public is invited. A free will offering will be taken.

Artist Sachio will design building mural.

Rainbow-colored mural is Neligh town project

Neligh (AP) — Sachio Yamashita is bringing his rainbow to town.

The Japanese artist, 44, is well-known in the Chicago area for his bright, rainbow-hued wall paintings. He is in Neligh to work on a mural being painted on the Rice building.

Sachio, which he prefers to his last name, came to the U.S. in 1968 from Japan to cover the Democratic National Convention in Chicago as a newspaper cartoonist. He decided to stay after being invited to become an artist in residence at Prairie State College in Chicago Heights.

It was in 1970 that his first project in rainbow colors came into being. He painted a three-block long stretch of lower Michigan Avenue in horizontal stripes.

Other projects include "Running Horses," on a two-story stable, and "Moving Trucks," which is literally art in motion, rainbows on the sides of three of the Wells Trucking Co. semi-trailers.

He started his "One Thousand Water Towers" project in 1971. This is an effort to brighten the city's skyline by painting industrial water towers in his trademark rainbow colors.

So far, 16 have been painted, but Sachio sees it as only 984 to go.

Altogether, Sachio has done about 70 projects since coming to the U.S. Not all are located out-of-doors, he has painted indoor murals in homes and business establishments.

He also paints conventionally, on canvas, and has had many one-man shows.

Sachio was brought to Neligh through the efforts of Leslie Seeche, formerly a VISTA volunteer working in the area. Ms. Seeche, who now lives in Lincoln, was familiar with Sachio's work and proposed that the Neligh Arts Council sponsor him in an outdoor art project, similar to one that she had seen in a Chicago shopping center.

After determining that a grant could be obtained from the Nebraska Arts Council, on condition that the funds be matched, the council agreed to head the project. Sachio met with members of the Community during a three-day visit last month to lay the groundwork.

Two coats of white paint have been applied to prepare the Rice building for the mural, which will have an agricultural, or plains life theme. It will be drawn onto graph paper, a grid will be chalked onto the sides of the building, and the design then will be transferred to the walls.

Sachio probably will not do a lot of the actual painting. Children and adults from the community will do the painting under Sachio's direction.

Sachio uses ordinary oil-based house paints, selecting them by their brightness of color. He generally uses seven colors — red, orange, yellow, green, light blue, blue and purple — the colors of the rainbow and the prism.

He likes them for the cheerfulness.

"No one can be angry at a rainbow," he says.

Sachio will spend two to three weeks in Neligh.

He said he agreed to come to Nebraska because he had never been here and because he was raised in a farming community in Japan and still has a reverence for the farm.

Spouse abuse hearings' topic

United Press International

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln said Wednesday there apparently are many cases of spouse abuse and he would like to have all members of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee participate in interim hearings on the matter.

Barnett, chairman of the committee, and four other members met to organize the unit's activities this summer and fall.

Meetings on spouse abuse, Barnett indicated, will be scheduled in Omaha, Lincoln, central and western Nebraska, probably in conjunction with hearings on the criminal code.

He said he hopes committee members will attend "at least some of the meetings" on the revised code, which was enacted into law this year over the governor's veto.

"We will try to go through the entire code and see what amendments are needed," he said. The legislation is not scheduled to go into effect until July 1, 1978, and its implementation date may be postponed until Jan. 1, 1979.

Gambling and sexual assault statutes, as well as a proposal for fixed, rather than indeterminate prison sentences, will be considered as part of the code hearings, Barnett said.

Regional meetings will be announced to permit anyone interested to attend, and Barnett said he hopes the judicial branch will be among those providing reactions.

Sen. Pat Venditte of Omaha was appointed chairman of a subcommittee that will investigate marijuana abuses; Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers will head the investigation into civil statutes dealing with the statue of limitations, and Fremont Sen. Barry Reutzel will be in charge of a study of probation systems.

Studies on the need for intermediate juvenile corrections facilities and the rewriting of juvenile laws will be under the direction of Sens. Cal Carsten of Avoca and William Nichol of Scottsbluff.

House blown away after family fled

Bayard (AP) — Fifteen-year-old David Ericson insisted that his mother and sister flee for cover when a tornado touched down near their ranch Tuesday night. Ten minutes later, their home was flattened.

"It was due to my son. He was insistent that we leave. He just took off and got the car out," said Mrs. Lowell Ericson.

Their ranch house, 3½ miles west of Bayard, "was crumbled. Nothing was left. The barn, fences and trees were torn down.

We had a piano, TV and stereo and none is in sight. Insurance won't even cover it, because there was too much lost," said Mrs. Ericson.

"But then, earthly possessions just don't seem all that important right now."

The family heard a television report that a tornado had touched down at Minatare. "That's when we thought we had better get out," said Mrs. Ericson, who was at home with David and his sister, Ellen, 17, while their father was in the hospital.

"It's a total loss. Cattle are lost. Only a bathroom wall is standing and there's no furniture in sight. The nearest furniture we could see was one-half mile away," Mrs. Ericson said.

"As we drove to Bayard, we heard the tornado touched down 4½ miles west of town. We live only 3½ miles. That was when we stepped on the gas."

The Ericsons drove to a relative's house. Several hours later, Mrs. Ericson returned to the ranch, and, even though downed power lines kept her at a distance, saw that little remained.

Drug cases prosecutor cited for success rate

Omaha (UPI) — A federal prosecutor Wednesday received a certificate of appreciation from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration for his success in obtaining convictions in drug cases.

Larry Orton, Assistant regional director from Kansas City, Mo., presented the award to Thomas D. Thalken, an assistant U.S. attorney since 1971.

Thalken, 34, was cited for his handling of major narcotics cases, including that of Ike "Papa Rock" Conway, former head of a multi-million dollar North Omaha heroin ring who turned government informant.

Thalken used Conway's testimony to obtain jury convictions in a heroin conspiracy case against former Omaha Police Department vice and narcotics officer Leonard Smith, two heroin dealers and their financial backer.

Smith and the two heroin dealers have appealed.

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — "Hull's Half Acher" is what Dr. Walter L Hull calls his farm south of town If it ever hosts a full family get-together, he'll also call it a dental convention.

Dentistry recently gained a third-generation double entry as two of Doc's grandchildren, William Walter and Mary Hull Lea, received University of Nebraska diplomas The brother became a full-fledged D D.S , his sister a dental hygienist

Though the brother-sister act was recognized as a College of Dentistry first, the Hulls well know about a previous brother-brother combination.

The May 14 commencement in fact marked a 25th anniversary for the new grads' father, Dr. Darrell Hull of Fairbury, and his brother, Dr William L , now of Loveland, Colo Their 1952 graduation also had been without precedent

"Until my generation, this was a family of preachers and undertakers," said Dr Walter, an Edgar native whose father was a Methodist minister "Now it's full of dentists, even to the in-laws and their in-laws "

Close behind Walter, who was graduated from Creighton in 1919, was brother Roy, now practicing in Scottsbluff following a short stint at Morrill Walter practiced briefly at Polk before putting in 12 years at Edgar and 26 at Fairbury

There had been hope that young Bill might join his father in a Fairbury clinic, where Walter also practiced until a hand ailment forced his 1960 retirement But Bill decided instead to go to North Platte

Mary probably will work in Lincoln, though that depends upon what materializes for her husband, Chad Lea Though he's a long pull from dentistry, he also shared in the multi-graduation, receiving a master's degree in architecture

And there are two other dentists among relatives of Walter L Hull Dr William Upton of Superior and Dr Robert Hull of Glenn Springs, Colo , are sons of cousins of the elder Dr Hull

Omaha man killed in Kansas

Two other occupants of the car were taken to a hospital in Ellsworth for observation

Appeal to be made for Aurora center

Aurora (UPI) — A Bremer Community Center Inc spokesman said a Tuesday night city council decision denying the center a permit to build a residential community facility would be appealed to the Hamilton County Board of Adjustment

Center secretary Larry Carstenson Aurora said Mrs Bertha Bremer widow of newspaper publisher Gerald Bremer stipulated in her will that a large amount of money be used to build a community center in Aurora

Assets now are an estimated $350 000 Carstenson said and an anonymous donor also has given $250 000 bringing the total to about $600 000

We are assuming the council is convinced the center would not fit in a residential area Carstenson said It's our idea we want it in a residential area because its surroundings would enhance this structure rather than if it were stuck in a commercial or industrial section

The proposed site was donated by Aurora businessman Ken Wortman Carstenson said a major problem was that no comparable site has been offered for the center

Apparent heart attack following fight kills man

Seward (UPI) — The Death of a Beaver Crossing man following a minor fight resulted from natural causes, Seward County Attorney Randy Stoll said Wednesday

An autopsy on the body of Richard Wambold, a fur buyer in his early 40s, showed he died of a heart attack, Stoll said

It doesn't appear there will be a basis for any criminal charges, he said

Stoll said he only had an oral report on the autopsy, and would wait until he received a written report before making a final decision

Wambold died Monday night en route to a hospital after complaining of chest pains at his home

A few hours earlier authorities said he had been involved in a scuffle at a tavern Authorities said the fight occurred at a tavern in Cordova instead of in Beaver Crossing as originally reported

Ball will be rolling in downtown Lincoln

The wrecking ball will be flying again in the Centrum Block within the next few weeks All the remaining buildings are to be flattened by Sept. 1

The south half of the block, bounded by 11th, 12th, N and O Sts , was cleared last summer and this spring. In the first part of September work is to begin there on construction of a 1,000-stall parking garage.

The apparent low bid of $68,755 for demolition of the remaining buildings on the north half of the block was submitted Wednesday by the Anderson Excavating and Wrecking Co.

After demolition of those buildings, a retail facility is to be built on the north half At this point city officials are favoring a proposal by Watson Centers, Inc. of Minneapolis, Minn

Other bids submitted for demolition of the buildings were Tobler Excavating, $76,320, Whittmann Excavating, $82,326; Ark Wrecking of Tulsa, $89,105, and Ideus Construction $103,998

Associated Press

Three members of the new Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission Wednesday finalized matters leading to advertising for an executive director and establishing a mailing address

Chairman Mimi Waldbaum and member Jim Davis, both of Omaha met informally with Secretary of State Allen Beermann in Beermann s office to iron out details in preparation for the next commission meeting June 29

Beermann said Roy Gardner state personnel director had been authorized to advertise regionally to find candidates for the position of executive director for the commission The post will pay $18 000 annually according to statute

Minimum qualifications listed on a draft copy of a Personnel Department memo on the position included a bachelor s degree in business administration or a related field, plus four years work with administrative or supervisory experience

Post Office Box 95036 Nebraska State Office Building station Lincoln Neb 6d509

The commission members present also discussed whether offices would be located in the Capitol building on the 10th floor or in the new state office building leaving any decision until later

As commission chairman Mrs Waldbaum ordered that purchases of office supplies and equipment be inexpensive to help stretch the $120 000 budget set by legislation

The commission was established to oversee and administer the so called sunshine law on government accountability which deals with campaign financing lobbying and conflicts of interest

Criticism mystifies Gasohol members

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Members of the state Gasohol Committee agreed Wednesday they need to present a "united front" and work harder to tell Nebraskans about their motor fuel program

Committee members voiced concern that there was a lot of misinformation being spread about the committee s efforts Jack Quackenbush of Beatrice even called some of the anti-gasohol activities a very active, vicious attack

The panel, actually named the Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, also said they were mystified over recent comments made by Gov J James Exon questioning some of the committee members objectivity

Ronald Kelly of Alliance said the committee has been charged by the Legislature to work with private industry to build a grain alcohol plant in Nebraska Gasohol, a mixture of nine parts gasoline to one part grain alcohol, would be used as a motor fuel

Kelly claimed the committee is following the Legislature's directives and shouldn't be unduly criticized

Committee member Paul Meierhenry of Norfolk blasted a recent report published by a University of Nebraska professor on gasohol

Agriculture Economics professor James Kendrick said it would require considerable public subsidy to finance the production of the fuel and predicted a yearly loss at $8 8 million

Meierhenry said Kendrick is "not really an expert in the field" and said the figure Kendrick used to calculate the annual loss failed to represent an adequate cost comparison

It was "a gross distortion of fact," he argued

Another NU professor, Dr William Scheller, said Kendrick's report indicates "he's simply misinformed"

Scheller, a professor of chemical engineering, also is a technical adviser to the committee and has come under some criticism as a result Scheller said he didn t think he had a conflict of interest because he also is involved in a private firm which is working on trying to build a grain alcohol plant The firm is the Nebraska Grain Alcohol and Chemical Co

"I want it known that it has been almost a year since I have been in the governor s office," Scheller said, noting he was turned down when he recently sought a meeting with Exon

5 held for robbing hitchhiker

Hastings (UPI) — A 23-year-old Iowa man hitchhiking through Nebraska Wednesday was robbed at knife-point by five persons in a convertible with Ohio license plates, authorities said

A spokesman for the Hamilton County sheriff's office would not identify the Iowa man or the five alleged robbers, who were taken into custody Wednesday for questioning

The spokesman only said the incident occurred on a county road one mile south and one mile east of the Interstate 80 interchange at Aurora

Endurance key for S. Carolina pitcher

By Randy York
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — Randy Martz, South Carolina's 6-4, 210-pound all-American fastball pitcher, thinks of himself as a determined boxer with endurance.

He expects to get beat up, but he also figures to outlast the one throwing the punches.

Well, Southern Illinois jabbed the Chicago Cubs' first round draft choice around plenty in the College World Series battle of unbeatens before 9,022 at Rosenblatt Stadium here Wednesday night.

But Martz, fighting soreness, fatigue and two Saluki home runs, hung on for a 5-4 victory to move his season record to 14-0 and advance the Gamecocks into their second CWS championship round in three years.

"Four runs is the most I've given up in my life," Martz said afterwards. "Those two homers shocked me. But I knew I could come back. Being a fastball pitcher, I'm used to getting roped around the park one minute, then making batters look silly the next minute.

"I'm not a pretty pitcher at all," he admitted. "I'm too inexperienced and too nice to the batter. I may give up 11 hits and still go the distance. I thrive on pressure and battling back.

"I'm just throwing the way I know how now," he added. "Later on, I'm going to learn how to pitch."

Martz isn't kidding about his inexperience. He didn't even play baseball at South Carolina his first two years there. He was too busy trying to become the Gamecocks quarterback in football.

In high school, his pitching record was a mediocre 12-8. Martz earned more attention from pro scouts as a first baseman, hitting .350.

"Martz is going to give up a lot of hits because he's a power pitcher," South Carolina coach June Raines said after his team bunched its five runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

"But one thing about Randy Martz — he'll keep coming at you until the job gets done," Raines said. "That's why you have a tendency to leave him in when you wouldn't think of leaving someone else in the game."

Martz showed his endurance last Friday, pitching South Carolina to a 3-2, 10-inning win over Baylor. His regular season earned-run-average was 1.80.

Jim Reeves gave Southern Illinois a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth with a 370-foot solo homer over the left centerfield fence.

Rick Murray, the Salukis' No. 6 hitter, also leaned into a Martz fastball for a solo shot in virtually the same spot to lead off the seventh.

That gave Southern Illinois a 3-2 cushion and Neil Fiala expanded it to 4-2 with a successful squeeze bunt down the first base line to score Jim Robinson, who had singled.

Don Repsher's run-scoring triple and Bart Murphy's run-scoring double had pulled the Gamecocks into a 2-2 tie in the top of the seventh.

Disaster continued to plague SIU pitching in the eighth when the Gamecocks sent eight batters to the plate for three more runs.

Mark Van Bever, Mookie Wilson and Chuck McLean — South Carolina's Nos. 1, 2 and 3 hitters and the first three to the plate in the eighth — each singled and eventually scored, thanks subsequently to a pair of walks, a pair of fielder's choices and a sacrifice fly by Steve King.

SIU coach Itchy Jones said "Rick Keeton pitched six good innings for us, but he couldn't get his breaking pitch over in the end. I guess he just ran out of gas and we didn't get the help out of the bullpen (from Kevin Waldrop or Jim Kessler)."

Regardless of the outcome of Thursday night's games, South Carolina is assured of playing in Friday's national championship game since the Gamecocks are the only unbeaten team remaining in the tournament.

South Carolina lost, 5-1, to Texas in the 1975 national championship game. Southern Illinois has finished second twice in the CWS (in 1968 and '71), but has never won the championship.

"There are three teams left in the same boat as we are," Jones noted, "so we're not dead yet."

Kingman goes to SD Padres

San Diego (AP) — The New York Mets, completing their second blockbuster deal within hours, will send dissident slugger Dave Kingman to the San Diego Padres for utility infielder Bobby Valentine and left-handed pitcher Paul Siebert, a source close to the deal said Wednesday night.

After the Mets dealt star pitcher Tom Seaver to Cincinnati hours before the passing of the trade deadline, General Manager Joe McDonald told The Associated Press that more deals were in the works.

"We've already made the deals," he said by telephone from the apartment of Mets Board Chairman M. Donald Grant. "We're just holding up so that the players will learn it first."

But at least one of those deals involved Kingman, the 28-year-old powerhouse purchased from the San Francisco on Feb. 28, 1975, the source said.

Kingman insisted during spring training on renegotiating his contract with the Mets. When the National League baseball team's management refused to rewrite the pact, Kingman decided to play out the option year of his contract and become a free agent.

Eastwick to Cards

Cincinnati (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Wednesday night they have traded right-handed relief ace Rawly Eastwick to the St. Louis Cardinals for minor league pitcher Doug Capilla.

Jack, Tom Open picks, but hungry horde lurking

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, with a slightly sprained right ankle, and Tom Watson, with the best record in golf, are solidly entrenched as the men to beat in the 77th U.S. Open Championship.

Although neither really needs an added incentive in the physically and mentally exhausting test that makes up the most prestigious of all the game's tournaments, each has at least one.

For the courageous Watson, a Tom Sawyer who grew up to become the Masters champions, there's the opportunity to extend his chances for the unaccomplished Grand Slam of golf.

For Nicklaus, the greatest player the game has produced, there's the opportunity to acquire a record-matching fourth national championship, extend still further his unequalled domination of the Big Four events and—again—reassert himself as golf's No. 1 performer.

Should either falter in the strength-sapping, 100-degree heat forecast for Thursday's start of this 72-hole chase, there's an impatient, jostling horde of the world's finest shotmakers eagerly awaiting the tiniest chance, willing and able to take the longest gamble to acquire the crown for their own.

They come in assorted sizes and shapes and ages, each fired by his own special and distinct need for the title that confers instant star quality to the man who owns it.

There's Jerry Pate, who was transported from the comfortable anonymity of a non-winning rookie to the hectic status of international celebrity with his come-from-behind triumph in the Open last year. He seeks to become the first man since Ben Hogan in 1951 to successfully defend his Open championship.

"I didn't feel it. For the first time there was no pain. I wasn't even aware of it until somebody mentioned it to me," Pate said Wednesday on the practice tee at the 6,873-yard, par 70 Southern Hills Country Club course.

He was referring to a pinched nerve in his neck that has sidelined him most of the year and allowed him only one tournament in the weeks since the Masters.

There's Tom Weiskopf, a winner two weeks ago who gives every indication he's again the Tom Terrific who scored such spectacular successes a couple of seasons back.

"I'm playing very well right now, very well," said that deeply talented man who climb to greatness has encountered the boulder-sized obstacle of his own temperament.

There's doughty little Gary Player, twice a runner-up this season, who wants so desperately to acquire a second American national championship and thus complete a twice-around sweep of the Big Four titles.

"I am playing, from tee to green, the best golf of my life," said the diminutive globe-trotter with the perpetual Pollyanna attitude.

There's such standouts as PGA champion Dave Stockton, that extraordinary scrambler; his good friend Al Geiberger, author of the incredible, recordbreaking round of 59 a week ago; always-dangerous Ray Floyd; Hale Irwin, who enjoys such gaudy success on the tougher courses; cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke, the outstanding player in the early season.

There's the challenging Australia duo, David Graham tournaments and the Heritage Classic.

Seaver traded to Reds for Zachry, 3 others

Cincinnati (AP) — Star pitcher Tom Seaver, dubbed "The Franchise" for his 10 years of premium performance, was traded by the New York Mets to the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night, the clubs announced jointly.

The Reds, two-time defending world champions, will be giving up four players to get Seaver, regarded the best in his craft in the past decade. The new Mets will be pitcher Pat Zachry, infielder Doug Flynn and top minor league prospect Steve Henderson, an outfielder.

The Associated Press also learned that a fourth player would be included in the deal, but it is not known who he is or whether he is a major or minor leaguer.

The Reds announced a major news conference for after their Wednesday night game against Philadelphia to announce the trade. The Mets were expected to do the same.

Zachry, co-rookie of the year last season with pitcher Butch Metzger, has been stumbling in his sophomore season. The 25-year-old right-hander has compiled a 3-7 record and a 5.04 earned run average.

In 1976, he helped the Reds get into the World Series against the New York Yankees by posting a 14-7 mark and an ERA of 2.74. Zachry won a playoff game against the Phillies and was 1-0 in the World Series.

Seaver

Zachry

Besides leaving the Reds, Wednesday was a big day for the 25-year-old Zachry because he took out a marriage license. He plans to marry on June 23.

Flynn, 26, is a versatile infielder, who was hard-pressed to crack the all-star infield in Cincinnati. He has spelled second baseman Joe Morgan, third baseman Pete Rose and shortstop Dave Concepcion. He considers shortstop his best position.

In his third year in the majors, Flynn was batting .250 going into Wednesday night's game. In 32 at-bats, he has knocked in five runs but has yet to hit a home run.

Last season, he hit .283 in 219 at-bats.

NU hires Cyclones' Harshman

Dave Harshman, the No. 1 assistant basketball coach at Iowa State, is joining Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano's staff. Harshman replaces Lonnie Parter, who resigned to become the head coach at St. Regis College in Denver.

Harshman, 28, was at Iowa State one season after two successful years as the head coach at Spokane Falls (Wash.) Community College where he posted a 39-18 record.

A 1970 graduate of Washington State University, Harshman was three-year baseball letterman in addition to lettering on the Cougar basketball squad. He was an all-Pac 8 baseball selection in 1969.

Dave is the son of University of Washington head basketball coach Marv Harshman. Cipriano starred for the Seattle school as a three-year starter in the early '50s.

A native of Pullman, Wash., the new Nebraska assistant earned all-American mention as a prep basketball player.

Gals invade world of weightlifting

Madison, Wis. (AP) — In the weight room of the University of Wisconsin stadium, the lifters grunt and strain through the squats, arm curls, bench press, clean and jerk and dead lift.

But when most of the sweaty musclemen hit the showers, a few head the other direction.

Toward the women's locker room.

"The more muscular I get, the happier I am," says Pam Jacobsen, 20, a junior majoring in psychology. "It's really changed me. And I don't feel that I'm any less feminine."

Jeff Everson, the manager of the weight room, says more and more women are becoming lifters and body builders.

"It's really become a popular thing across the country for women to get involved in weightlifting," he says. "It's not something that should be just for the man."

He says most of the women who use the Wisconsin weight facilities say they feel better, have quicker reflexes and are stronger.

Some of the women, like senior high jumper Denise Laitsch, began weight training to better their track performances.

"I wasn't worried about losing my femininity," she says. "In fact, I think it enhances it, if anything, because it tones up your muscles."

Everson, who trains about half a dozen women lifters regularly, emphasizes that hormone differences allow women to work out hard without losing their natural curves or sprouting huge man-size muscles.

Lori Wasserburger, a sophomore who had to give up track after a knee operation, has deadlifted 325 pounds. That's one of the top women's totals in the world, and a weight many professional football players would envy.

But not everybody appreciates her weightlifting.

"My parents aren't too thrilled about it," she says. "They don't like me doing it at all. They've always promoted me in sports, but they think the reason I'm a large woman is because of the weights. But if I didn't lift I would just be a big fat slob."

For the record, any of the male lifters around the weight room and most any guy on campus, for that matter, would agree that Lori Wasserburger is definitely not a big fat slob.

She claims attitudes toward women weightlifters are changing.

"More and more women are getting interested in the weights," she says. "Before, people would call you an amazon or other things. But things have changed. I think it looks nice to be muscular."

Academic upgrading one answer

Atlanta (UPI) — Fred Davison, chairman of the newly-formed college football association, said Wednesday if colleges could agree on adequate academic standards that many of the other problems facing bigtime football would fall into place.

"Solution of academic problems will, of course, create some other problems," said Davison, also president of the University of Georgia.

"We'll create some problems as we solve others, but the feeling is that as the big problems fall by the wayside, the smaller ones will start taking care of themselves."

Sixty of the top college football powers were here Wednesday and Thursday for the organizational meeting of the CFA, founded earlier this year after many schools expressed displeasure with the economy trends taken within the NCAA.

"We plan to work within the NCAA and, at this time, there is no move to form a seperate organization," Davison said.

Omaha — It makes little difference that Donna Johnson never has played the game, she's a tennis pro anyway.

In her seventh summer, Mrs. Johnson certainly would be qualified for the label of a professional tennis mother if there were such a title.

Lincoln is the home of Donna Johnson, her husband Dwight and their sons, Randy and Craig. But home for Mrs. Johnson these days is usually a motel room somewhere on the junior tennis circuit as she chaperons, counsels and cajoles 14-year-old Craig.

She is one of a breed of parents who believes competitive tennis is good for children and who is willing to sacrifice long hours and a bundle of money so the offspring can enter tournaments from St. Joseph, Mo., to Ft. Worth, Tex.

"We'll be gone 10 to 12 weeks this summer at tournaments," Mrs. Johnson said here Wednesday.

This is a special week for the Johnsons. Craig is entered in the Nebraska Open Tennis Tournament under way at Omaha's Dewey Park.

A tournament so close to home is a rarity. It means mom and son can look forward to a good night's sleep in their own beds instead of another motel room.

Sleeping at home apparently agrees with Craig. Competing in the juniors' 14-year-old class, the Pound Junior High student advanced to Thursday's semifinals with a pair of wins Wednesday.

While Craig whipped Larry Station of Omaha 6-0, 6-1 Wednesday morning and earned a semifinal berth with a 6-0, 6-1 afternoon victory over Omaha's Larry Goodman, mother Johnson sat two courts away intently watching her son.

"I still get nervous but at least I can watch him," Mrs. Johnson said. "It used to be that I couldn't watch so I would just roam around and worry."

Mrs. Johnson conquered her roaming and worrying days back when older son Randy started on the circuit seven years ago. Now a student at the University of Nebraska, Randy has retired from tournament tennis for the time being.

Craig has picked up where Randy left off. A win two weeks ago in a St. Joseph, Mo., tourney and a second last week in Kansas City has stamped the Lincoln student as one of the hottest young players in the Midwest.

In the next few weeks, Craig will enter tennis events in Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa. Mother will be by his side when she's needed.

"I think it's good that I never took up the game," Mrs. Johnson said. "That way I can't be critical. Craig knows if he does something wrong and we talk about it."

Why has she agreed to spend her summers on the road watching and worrying as her son competes?

"We have to go out of Lincoln and out of the state for the competition," Mrs. Johnson said. "Craig has to play against college players to get the competition he needs in Lincoln.

"Of course, on this level you can get knocked down pretty fast. But they are all nice kids, a different caliber than most."

Mrs. Johnson admits there are drawbacks, with the travel topping the list. "It's very tiring," she said. "We are gone so much it doesn't give us a chance to do anything else. It really limits you."

And, of course, there is the cost. In addition to gas, motel bills and food, there is the equipment factor.

"Craig can go through a pair of shoes in two weeks," she said. "I just bought him a new pair. That's $25. Rackets cost as much as $30 or $40."

Mrs. Johnson knows there are parents who push their children, parents who have visions of grandeur when it comes to their kids and tennis. But she's not one of them.

She has no secret dreams that one of her boys will be on the professional circuit someday. "They have to enjoy it," she said. "If they don't, I don't. Sometimes Craig pushes himself too hard.

"I want him to realize there are other things in life besides tennis. Parents have to stay on top of these things. It's my job to point these things out to Craig."

Despite all the trophies Randy and Craig have won and the awards that seem bound to come in future tournaments, Mrs. Johnson has realized a couple of intangible rewards from the game.

"I've become very close to my boys," she said. "And the money and time have been worth every bit because I don't have a child that's in trouble. That means a great deal. I've never had one of my boys come to me and say, 'boy, what can I do.' They are always busy."

In her own quiet way, Mrs. Johnson is just as busy behind the scenes.

"You have to love it or you'd go crazy," Donna Johnson said with a smile that said she loves every minute of it

Johnson was the only Lincoln entrant to remain alive in the singles division of the tournament which winds up Thursday with the adults taking over Friday through Sunday.

In other matches involving Lincoln players Wednesday, Mark Neumeister was ousted in the 18-year-old class by Gary Saddler of St. Louis, 6-4, 7-5. Art Weaver, also competing in the 18-year-old division, lost to Todd Landauer of Bettendorf, Iowa, 6-0, 6-1; Ruth Anderson lost to the tourney's No. 6 seeded 18-year-old women, Barb Ketterman, while Leslie Hinrichs of Lincoln battled to the semifinals of the 14-year-old class before dropping a rugged 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 match to Kristy Haden of Kansas City.

'Slew ownership investigated

New York (UPI) — The "very complicated" ownership group of Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew is under investigation by the New York State Racing and Wagering Board.

The Board's probe, expected to last two more weeks, is so far focused on veterinarian James M. Hill, one of the two principals of Seattle Slew's ownership group, Wooden Horse Investments, Inc.

Hill said in an application for a renewal of his thoroughbred vet's license before the Belmont Stakes last week that he was not an owner of any racehorse. Hill qualified his answer, however, saying that he participated in "a pension and profit-sharing plan that has made loans to an investment corporation that bought thoroughbred yearlings."

Seattle Slew was purchased for $17,500 at a yearling sale in Kentucky in 1975 by Wooden Horse, a company put together by Hill and Mickey Taylor. Hill and Taylor each owned a share of Wooden Horse and each was to receive income from a profit-sharing pension trust that would defer income taxes on possible earnings.

Hill's interest is under investigation to determine whether he treated racehorses belonging to other owners or whether he deliberately tried to circumvent a New York State racing regulation rule which bars practicing vets from also owning horses that compete in the state.

"There was absolutely no unethical practice," Hill told Newsday Tuesday night. "We have given them all the information they asked for. My record in this business has been a damned good one and as far as I'm concerned, let the chips fall where they may."

Hill and the five other coowners of Seattle Slew, including Taylor, were granted temporary ownership licenses a few days before the Belmont Stakes after Hill turned in his racing vet's license.

A spokesperson for the Board said Wednesday "there might have been some violations but that doesn't mean it was enough to keep them from granting him a temporary license."

A temporary license, the spokesperson said, may be used indefinitely until suspended, revoked or a regular one-year license is granted. Seattle Slew's owners will retain their temporary license, "pending the outcome of the inquiry."

Seattle Slew's victory and purse from the Belmont will not be affected by the inquiry.

"The Board will take at least two weeks to go through it all," the Board spokesperson said. "The problem is there are so many sides to it. It's very, very complicated, not just cut and dry."

Kentucky's racing steward, Keene Dangerfield, said the owners of Seattle Slew also had been "in technical violation" of racing rules there when the colt won the Derby at Churchill Downs May 7.

Daingerfield said, at the request of Kentucky racing officials, Seattle Slew's owners filed additional information May 18, bringing them into compliance and no action against them was planned in Kentucky.

NBA helps troubled teams

Coronado, Calif. (AP) — The Board of Governors of the National Basketball Association announced Wednesday the adoption of a plan to ease the financial strain on the four teams which joined the league from the American Basketball Association one year ago.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said the plan would "assure the continued viability of our four newest franchises," the Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs.

The plan, designed to alleviate the toll of debts which total more than $30 million among the four teams, contains two significant points.

The four teams owed the league $200,000 apiece, due this month, as the final payment on their $3.2-million entrance fee. The Board of Governors agreed to extend this deadline from June, 1977 to June, 1980.

That new deadline coincides with the time the four new teams will begin to share in the NBA's television revenues, which under the current contract amount to approximately $500,000 per year per team.

The second point of the agreement carries long-range implications.

A 13th-ranked pick in the recent pro draft, McManaman will fly from Lincoln Thursday morning, arrive in mid-afternoon in time to suit up for the Wisconsin Rapids of the Midwest League that night

There isn t going to be a wasted motion before I start swinging a bat," McManaman observed "I was drafted as an outfielder, but they told me I might also get a chance to show what I can do as a pitcher "

Killanin to probe IOC script change

Prague (UPI) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, Wednesday officially opened the IOC's 79th session and then set up an inquiry to discover why the published Czechoslovak version of his speech was different from the French and English texts

The major part which did not appear in the Czech version was a section where Killanin referred to the problems of mixing politics with sport

Killanin said he welcomed government assistance in the development of sport and then continued "However, at the same time the national Olympic committees and individual athletes must be protected from becoming the instruments of government direction

Then followed a large section which was omitted completely

Killanin said "If they (the national Olympic committees) find that their governments make this impossible, then unfortunately it may be that the athletes suffer for some time until this situation is remedied

'In the world today there are governments of the left right and center which for reasons which may be absolutely justifiable to themselves take actions which in the interests of their own security prevent complete freedom and liberty

"Personally I regret any restraint on personal liberty but would reiterate this matter of amateur sport, and especially Olympic sport, is for the International Olympic Committee the International Federations and the National Olympic Committees alone," Killanin said in his opening address

When Killanin's attention was drawn to the alterations in the Czech version distributed to the session and guests he said he would start an immediate investigation "to discover the facts '

Killanin s speech ranged across the major problems of the Olympic movement, the question of siting the Games and the program of sports

He said the IOC would look at the idea of spreading the Games throughout an area, even across international frontiers, but he did not want to see the Olympics split up into a series of world championships in various sports

Chet Simmons, vice president of sports confirmed the report, saying Meredith left with NBC s best wishes

"He just felt he wanted to go back to ABC and rejoin Frank and Howard, ' said Simmons "We had lengthy talks with him but that s what he wanted to do so we wished him godspeed

"Our talks were very friendly and he left with our blessing "

An ABC spokesman said the network would not comment on the report

Officer bound over on murder charge

A Lincoln police officer charged with the shooting death of his wife on June 1 waived a preliminary hearing in Lancaster County Court Wednesday.

William Welsh III, 31, appeared before County Court Judge Robert Camp a day before his preliminary hearing on the matter had been scheduled. He answered the routine questions concerning the waiver and was bound over to district court for arraignment July 15.

Welsh was arrested by fellow officers after the alleged shooting at his 5125 Linden St. house in the early morning hours of June 1. His wife Christine, 26, died at Bryan Memorial Hospital about an hour after the incident. An autopsy showed she died from six bullet wounds inflicted after a reported domestic disturbance.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said that he and Welsh's attorney, Patrick Healey, exchanged information on the case and agreed on the waiver action. Lahners indicated the exchange was equivalent to what could have been learned from a preliminary hearing.

Lahners said Welsh will continue to be housed in his one-man cell in the city jail. He added that the officer was taunted by fellow inmates for a day or two, but that has subsided.

The chamber endorses city transportation office

The formation of a transportation department for Lincoln was endorsed Wednesday by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber agreed with Mayor Helen Boosalis that transportation functions in toher city offices could be consolidated into one transportation office without the addition of much staff.

The mayor made the commendation in May but no final action has been taken

A request by local businessman Mike Grieger, operator of the airport limousine service, to the Public Service Commission to allow competitive taxi service in Lincoln also got the chamber nod.

Although the Yellow and Checker Cab systems in Lincoln began as competitiors, they now operate under the same corporation. The chamber feels one more in the city wouldn't hurt.

Two federal bills were opposed by the chamber: one to revise the Hatch Act to allow more political participation by federal employes, and another to improve the Federal Trade Commission.

A report on the Junior Olympics scheduled for Aug. 12-14 included the announcement that a drive to raise $22,000 to supplement the $37,000 budget was under way.

School to heal financial cut

Omaha (AP) — University of Nebraska Medical Dean Perry Rigby said Wednesday that he is not ready to say how the medical college will operate with at least $1.3 million less during the next year.

The college is losing about $1.3 million in federal funds, and the Legislature did not allocate state tax dollars to fill the loss.

The college's general instruction budget for the year just ending was about $10.9 million. According to a preliminary estimate, that budget for the year starting July 1 will be about $9 million.

"We will survive, but it is going to be painful," Dr. Rigby said. He said a revised operating plan has been prepared, but will not be announced until approved by the University.

Creighton University Medical School went through a similar situation about a year ago.

Man sentenced for sexual assault

A Lincoln man convicted of sexually assaulting two women at the same time last November has been sentenced to 10-15 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex.

District Court Judge William Hastings sentenced Leonard Leo Franklin, 35, formerly of 401 W. Garber Ave., Tuesday afternoon. He was initially charged with first-degree sexual assault, second-degree sexual assault and breaking and entering with intent to commit sexual assault. The second degree charge was dropped during plea bargaining and Franklin agreed to plead guilty to the other two charges.

Franklin was arrested after two women told police they were assaulted by a knife-wielding intruder in their north central Lincoln apartment. They claim he raped one of them while fondling the other, holding both at bay with a knife.

The incident happened a week after Franklin had been paroled from the penal complex where he served two and a half years of a three- to five-year sentence for assault with intent to rape on a 1974 incident.

Bennett named to public buildings' safety board

Gov. J. James Exon has appointed Allan D. Bennett of Lincoln to the Public Buildings Safety Advisory Committee.

Bennett succeeds Nancy Erickson of Lincoln who resigned from the committee. Bennett's term will expire Sept. 12, 1978.

Exon also named W. Gale Rumpeltes to the Public Employes Retirement Board, succeeding Richard Weber of Hastings. Rumpeltes is the budget and systems coordinator for the Beatrice State Development Center. His term will expire on Jan. 1, 1979.

Chicago mobster Vogel dies

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Edward D Vogel, a founding father of the Chicago crime syndicate and one of its wealthiest members, is dead at the age of 81

Vogel died of leukemia Sunday and was buried after a private funeral, a service attended by none of his old gangland colleagues

Vogel, along with Al Capone, was one of the founding figures of the Capone gang, the hoodlum organization that evolved into the present crime syndicate

A nonviolent type, Vogel was one of a few gangsters who was said to have reached the top of his profession without firing a shot

Many moonshiners turning to marijuana

Nashville, Tenn. (AP) — Many moonshiners, rather than fight rising sugar prices, are turning to another cash crop — marijuana.

The price of sugar, a prime moonshine ingredient, soared a few years ago, said Riley Oxley of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. And that, he said, combined with stricter enforcement of white lightning laws and a market that's going dry, discouraged many long-time whisky runners.

"The thing with young people seems to be marijuana and not booze — that's the market now," Oxley said in an interview. "The last moonshine we got was going for about $20 a gallon and that was the wholesale price. So by the time the retailer sells it, he's about the same price as bonded whisky."

Said another agent: "Most moonshiners are farmers, so the next available thing for them to grow is marijuana, and we think it'll get more prevalent as time goes on."

From 1960 to 1968, federal alcohol agents in Tennessee seized more than 1,000 stills a year. In 1976 they broke up only eight.

"More than a year and a half ago, authorities found a marijuana field in Cocke County and it was tied to an ex-bootlegger," Oxley said. "There was enough to fill a couple of police cruisers."

The alcohol bureau learned in April that a onetime Tennessee moonshiner was flying marijuana into Memphis from Mexico. Two former bootleggers were linked to importation of marijuana in South Carolina. One bought two planes and learned to fly, agents said.

"There are a lot of examples, I can assure you, that ex-bootleggers are getting into narcotics. It's a big thing today, you understand, and the illegal liquor business is a declining occupation," Oxley said.

The Sevier County Sheriff's Department raided a county-line farm in May and discovered 4,000 marijuana plants and two stills. The plants were well-cultivated, dusted for bugs and irrigated from a nearby stream. The jagged-leaved hemp grew in a corn field behind the barn.

Another alcohol bureau agent, who asked not to be identified, said agents have uncovered as many as 10 marijuana fields during the past three years in areas of east Tennessee where moonshine businesses once were legend.

"Moonshiners and marijuana people want to make some easy money, a fast and easy buck," he said. "So as the moonshine business disappears, they've got to come up with another gimmick."

General contract set for new Lincoln prison

Kingery Construction Co. of Lincoln has received the general contract for construction of a new $7.6 million minimum-medium security prison in Lincoln.

The bid of $4,183,626 was approved Wednesday by the Department of Correctional Services and sent to the governor, according to Jack Falconer, deputy director. Awarding of the contracts, received the week of April 18, was delayed because of a legal search necessary to identify the low mechanical bidder, he added.

As directed by the 1977 Legislature, the bids include a central chiller to save energy and exclude an additional housing unit for the chemical dependency program. The chiller was an addition modifying the air conditioning system.

Other low bidders are Reinhardt Brothers, Lincoln, $1,927,518, mechanical; David A. Baxter and Sons, Omaha, $740,964, electrical; O'Keefe Elevator Co., Omaha, $64,535, elevators; and Pegler and Co., Lincoln, $275,704, food service.

Contracts are expected to be signed early next week after review by the governor and the Department of Administrative Services.

Law may require charge at Detoxification Center

Lincoln's Detoxification Center may have to charge for its services — or do without state alcoholism services funding.

No program receiving less than 8% of its funding from client fees will qualify for funds under the state's new alcoholism services law, Dr. Bill Ford, state alcoholism director said Wednesday.

The Detoxification Center provides free 24-hour emergency care.

The 8% requirement "could be a hardship" on the city's planned application for state alcoholism funds, said Bob Clark, city-county human services administrator.

To qualify, the detoxification center may have to assess fees to "those who are able to pay," Clark said.

The state's new alcoholism services funding mechanism created by passage of LB204 will pour $1 million into programs statewide. The 16-county region, which includes Lincoln and Lancaster County, will receive $245,083 for residential and outpatient care, including detoxification services.

Robin K. Meter, son of Robert Meter of Gering, is the other Nebraska delegate.

Selected as alternates to the session, to be held July 15-23, were Kevin J. Morrow and Barry E. Epstein of Omaha, and Steven J. Goll of Blue Hill.

Man is injured in cycle mishap

A Lincoln man is in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital following a motorcycle accident early Wednesday in which he broke his leg.

Jody Harwood, 20, of 2640 W. O St., was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Dennis W. Haakenson, 19, of 3534 N. 10th.

Police said Haakenson apparently fell asleep while traveling west on P St., and drove off the road near Sunvalley and Bell. Haakenson and Harwood were thrown from the vehicle.

Summer jobs increase Nebraska employment

Associated Press

The usual spring increase in agricultural and construction jobs caused a slight decrease in unemployment during May, according to the state Labor Department.

The state's unemployment rate was 3.4% last month, down from 3.7% in April. There were 24,400 Nebraskans without jobs in May, compared with 26,300 in the previous month.

Lincoln unemployment fell from 2.8% to 2.6%, with the number of jobless going from 2,800 to 2,600.

In Omaha, the rate dropped from 5.6% to 5.1%, representing a reduction in the number of unemployed from 14,150 to 13,050.

Unemployment also declined in outstate Nebraska, where the percentage went from 2.7% to 2.4%.

The number of persons without jobs stood at 8,750, down from 9,550 in April.

A year ago the unemployment rate was 4.4% for Nebraska, 3.7% for Lincoln and 7.2% for Omaha.

The seasonal decline in unemployment probably will be followed by an increase in June, a Labor Department official said, because of the large number of young people entering the labor force when school is out.

Farm energy may change

Kansas City (AP) — American farmers must prepare for significant changes in production methods to help conserve energy as commonly used fuel sources dwindle a University of Nebraska expert said Wednesday

The speaker at a one-day American Farm Bureau Federation national energy conference Dr William Splinter predicted farmers may eventually see a return to steam power as an energy source in food production

Splinter, however, disputed suggestions by environmentalists that farmers should consider substituting animal and human labor for gasoline-powered farm machinery The efficiency lost would not be worth it, he said

He advised the conference that farmers should relate their energy needs to increased use of solar collectors windmill generators and methane gas from animal waste

Splinter also forecast more fish farming, which he said makes the most efficient protein-production use of energy.

"You can go to any supermarket and see more and more fish products, and the reason is because that's a more efficient area of production, he said

I think we are going to see a nationwide move toward more animal production in the fish area

Water code proposals okayed by NRD

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

State law should prohibit pumping groundwater for irrigation to the extent that it causes a "harmful" reduction in surface water.

This is one of 10 recommendations to the Nebraska Legislature approved Wednesday night by the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District directors regarding a proposed water code for state.

The directors added the word "harmful" after a committee had debated the recommendation for two hours.

All directors except Fred Retzlaff voted in favor of the list, which will be forwarded to the Nebraska Association of Natural Resource Districts to present to the Legislature.

Retzlaff said the measure could have the effect of "shutting down all irrigation" in the state.

State Geologist Vince Dreeszen said the force of the proposed law would "depend on how 'harmful' is interpreted by the courts." Any well has an effect on surface water, he said. "The people of Nebraska don't understand this."

The directors also recommended a law permitting transfer of water from one river basin to another "with proper safeguards for the basin of origin."

Again, it would be left to courts to determine what safeguards would be proper.

Legislation should also set priorities for water use, prohibit water waste, and protect the rights of landowners to the water beneath their property, the directors recommended.

By a 12 to 1 vote with two abstaining, the NRD board refused to take a position on the proposed coal slurry pipeline which would use water from wells in Wyoming to transport coal across Nebraska and other states to a power plant in Arkansas.

After listening to twenty minutes of arguments pro and con by Bob Crosby, legal counsel for the pipeline company, and Phil Kenney, president of the Nebraska Railroad Assn., the directors acted on a motion of director Paul Amen to take no stand.

Amen said the pipeline issue has no connection "with those things which we're charged with accomplishing." The Lower Platte South NRD, as do all NRD's in the state, controls soil and water conservation within specific areas.

"I know it (the resolution) is dealing with water, but it's not our water," Amen said.

Dreeszen told the directors the pipeline would have "no effect" on Nebraska's water supplies.

Even though a small portion of the aquifer, or underground water pool, supplying the pipeline is under western Nebraska, it is too deep to be of use to Nebraskans, he said.

In other action, the board voted to pledge $800 toward the cost of a $1600 airplane flight to take aerial photos of Lancaster County.

The photos, to be taken by a U.S. Dept. of Agriculture plane, would show changes in land use since the last aerial map was made in 1971.

City-County Planning Director Doug Brogden is looking into the possibility of the city or county picking up the other half of the bill, since the photos would also be of use in the planning process.

Nebraska-born doctor dies in California

Western — Word has been received here of the recent death of Dr. Robert C. Winter, of Manteca, Calif., formerly of Western.

A practicing physician in Manteca for 31 years, Dr. Winter was credited for establishing the Manteca Hospital.

A native Nebraskan, he was graduated from the University of Nebraska School of Medicine in 1939 and later served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

Surviving are his wife, Dolly; two sons; a daughter; his mother, Mrs. Alvena Winter of Western; three brothers, including Richard and Rolland of Western; a sister and two grandchildren.

Two men hurt in fire

Two men, one a fireman, were injured Wednesday afternoon after a car engine caught fire in the garage of Urban Motors, 1021 N. 48th St.

A worker was cleaning the engine of a car with a solvent, fire officials said, when the engine caught fire.

The worker, identified by fire officials as William D. Andersen, 29, was treated for burns on the right arm and face at Bryan Memorial Hospital and released.

Fireman Richard Grell suffered chemical burns on his leg when he stepped into a "mud pit" and the solution in the pit filled his boot, officials said. He was treated for burns and released.

The fire caused considerable damage to the car and minor damage to the roof of the garage, fire officials said.

$500 taken from VA machines

More than $500 in bills and coins was taken from three vending machines at Veterans Hospital, 600 S. 70th St., and the thief apparently had a key to the machines.

Police said there were no signs of forced entry on the machines, one of which was a bill-changer.

The money was taken sometime between 1 p.m. Tuesday and 6 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

State wiretaps total 6 in 1976

There were six court approved wiretaps in Nebraska in 1976, about half the number used the previous year, according to figures released by the U.S. Court's office in Washington, D.C.

Two of the six were in Lancaster County, the other four in Douglas County, according to local officials. The two in Lancaster County were in Lincoln and involved a murder case and a drug case.

Convicted murderer Wesley Peery's residence was tapped with a microphone eavesdrop, according to Deputy County Attorney Bob Gibson. None of the information gained from the tap was used in the trial against Peery, who was sentenced to die in the electric chair for the murder of Marianne Mitzner at her Havelock coin shop last year, he added.

The other wiretap was a phone type which resulted in six narcotics arrests on charges of conspiracy and possession of marijuana and amphetamines. One of the six pleaded guilty, three were accepted into pretrial diversion and one case is still pending, Gibson said.

Three of the Omaha taps involved a gambling case and resulted in 13 arrests. The other one was drug related and two men were sentenced to the Nebraska Penal Complex as a result, Omaha officials said.

The 1975 taps, 11 in number, were spread among Douglas, Lancaster, Scotts Bluff, Hall and Sarpy counties. Nationally, state-approved wiretaps were down 7% from 593 in 1975 to 549 in 1976. Federally approved wiretaps were up 27% from 108 to 137.

There were a total of 1,181 incriminating intercepts made in the country last year, at a cost of $19,070.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, June 16, 1977

Aquarian whose legend grows: Jack Benny. The comedian exemplified the qualities of his sign — Uranus was there in the surprise and timing elements. The generosity symbolized by the Eleventh House was also present, despite this "cheap image." Jack was "friendly" to astrology, had a sense of humor which translated into laughter and good will. If all Aquarians were like Jack Benny, I would sleep better at night!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New Moon highlights journeys, reports, more activity, ideas, collections, payments, new understanding of close neighbors, relatives. Check diet. Your digestive system may be sensitive. What you've been seeking is made available. Mail could contain good news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New financial arrangement is indicated. Be confident — ask questions, make inquiries. Horizons expand. Travel, vacation or holiday spirit prevails. You shake off lethargy. Tensions are dissolved — if you so permit. Spotlight on collections, payments, personal possession.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New Moon in your sign emphasizes fresh starts, independence, creativity, personality, striking appearance, publicity. You're able to break through barriers, red tape. You can "dismantle" for ultimate purpose of rebuilding on more attractive, solid site.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Greater ability to make known your feelings — this is indicated. Areas previously shrouded in mystery receive benefit of greater light. You gain access to special or privileged data. Member of opposite sex aids in making this a stimulating, romantic period.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on beauty, refreshment, change of scene, romance, fulfillment of desires. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure in scenario. You receive go-ahead on creative project. Member of opposite sex pays compliment — and means it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New chance for prestige, standing in community, achievement — this is highlighted. New Moon specifies refinement of techniques, opening up lines of communication with community leader, professional superior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Philosophical beliefs, concepts are strengthened. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Your message — or manuscript — reaches more persons than anticipated. Long distance call is harbinger of most favorable report.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
